“Yes, Seeker of Wisdom!” the Soul Temperer cheers, adding, “And by the look on your face, you have reached your epiphany of love much sooner than most!”

…I can’t help but laugh at all of this.

The Soul Temperer is rightly confused at this. But before she can make any concerned inquiry, I issue my proclamation.

“I get it,” I tell her earnestly. “I finally get it!” My face splits into a wide grin. “Yes, it’s love!” I exclaim.

All the times that I’ve been drawn to admiring her form… The feelings of wanting to protect her… The giddiness her presence filled me with… That desire to continue holding her, if just to be near her…

I should have recognized something so familiar right away.

“So you accept it, then, Seeker of Enlightenment?” the Soul Temperer asks.

Not a question, but
>The song is...well, it's a sad song. A mournful one, relying on heavy tones punctuated by high-pitched notes and emphasized by a careful application of rests.

“HELL! NO!” I scream at her and stomp my foot, the heat of embarrassment fanning into flames of rage. Hated memories begin to boil at the back of my mind, invited by that DISGUSTING, CONTEMPTIBLE word!

The force of my words drives the Soul Temperer back! “I-I don’t understand,” she meekly replies – the GALL OF HER! She is, for reasons I JUST CANNOT FATHOM, actually -BAFFLED- by my response, when I’M the one who can’t believe this absurdity!

“Then LET ME explain it to you CLEARLY” I hiss, leaning in close enough that my breath makes her flinch with every vitriolic syllable uttered. “LOVE is not a FLOWER… It is a WEED!” I scream! “A PESTILENCE! A BLIGHT upon one’s soul!”

“Your emotions are as turbulent as the stormy seas!” exclaims the ASTONISHINGLY MISGUIDED SOUL TEMPERER! “What is it that-“ I silence her by covering her mouth. I can’t even bear to LOOK at such IGNORANCE! HOW CAN ANYBODY DEFEND IT?!

“LOVE is a WEAKNESS!” I proclaim, storming away towards her little zen garden, hands twitching. “LOVE BLINDS YOU to the truth! LOVE makes you see things that NEVER EVEN EXISTED!”

“Truth-Seeker, please,” that annoying girl screeches, “you must listen to your heart and-“

“NO, YOU LISTEN TO ME, -TENKO-!” I spit at her, kicking up dust in my wake. ”-LOVE- LETS PEOPLE CONTROL YOU! -LOVE- MAKES YOU FOOLISH!” Tearing one of the small trees out of the ground, I start ripping it apart to emphasize my points! “–LOVE- HURTS YOU, STRANGLES YOU IN ITS THORNS, AND CHOKES OUT ALL THAT YOU WERE! AND IT DOES SO IN THE NAME OF A RIDICULOUS, INTANGIBLE IDEAL IMPOSED ON YOU! AND I WOULD SOONER –DIE- THAN LET IT TAKE ROOT IN MY HEART!”

I toss the broken heap in front of me and think of THAT memory, where I saw ‘love’ for all that it was! And prepare to do to it what I did to that boy's most treasured possessions!

“LOVE!”

I pull my leg back!

“IS!”

And I kick!

“STUPID!”

When the mass bursts to kindling upon the ceiling, rattling the blades along the walls, it fills me with a small measure of satisfaction. It wasn’t as satisfying as the actual deed was, but it’s enough to calm me a little, and bury those memories again.

…I’d forgotten how tired I was, though. As the righteous indignation fades, weariness comes crashing back down on me once more.

Looking at the shocked expression of the Soul Temperer, I reiterate my position. “I did not come all the way out here to be strung along by some girl,” I tell her, adding, “A girl, who, I might add, has tried to humiliate, poison, and murder me.”

Finally finding her voice, the Soul Temperer queries, “questionable partners aside, is that really what you believe, Truth-Seeker?”

Striding back over, my words and movements the EPITOME of calmness, I -carefully- explain to her, “I came out here for self-betterment, and –not- to fall back into disgusting old habits.”

“Be that as it may,” she retorts, “why are you running away from love, rather than confronting it head on?”

…I don’t have an answer for that. Why –am- I running away from it?

Love gave birth to someone like you after all, a voice rings out in my mind. I ignore it.

“What you described is all true,” the Soul Temperer continues. “Love can be abused and exploited.” She heaves a heavy sigh and then smiles. “But when it isn’t-”

“No,” I interrupt, frowning again. “Keep your juvenile delusions of romance, but don’t ever drag me into them.”

“You only have your own experiences to fall back on,” the Soul Temperer chides me. “You won’t listen to the words of others, and yet you insist that your way is the only right way.”

“I’m NOT wrong, though!” I tell her, stamping my foot. “I know I’m not!”

The Soul Temperer frowns at me. “Isn’t that attitude why you’re here, o foolish Seeker of Wisdom?” she asks.

…Dammit.

“The frog in the well knows nothing of the great ocean," she continues. "You should take in different perspectives on a subject."

"What, just... just go ask people what they think love is?" I inquire incredulously.

The Soul Temperer nods her head. "Yes. That is your assignment for tonight,” she informs me. “Gather the definition of 'love' from many different people, and challenge your own frame of reference." She smirks at me in an irritating manner. "Surely this isn't too much for you, is it?"

"...No. I'll do it," I say with a resigned sigh.

It seems good enough for her, and her smile softens. "Good," she says, pointing towards the hallway. "Now go, Seeker of Wisdom. You are not welcome back here until tomorrow."

"What? Why?"

"You have gained an oppressive aura, Truth-Seeker," she warns, moving in disgustingly close. "It is disrupting the-"

I shove her away. "Forget I asked,” I grumble, slouching forward from exhaustion. “I don’t even care anymore."

The Soul Temperer grabs me by the shoulder, pulling me upright. “Then at least let me take you to the gates myself,” she insists.

I lean against her and just nod vaguely as she guides me out of the room and through the hall. My footsteps are uneven and uncertain, a stark contrast to the sure strides of the Soul Temperer. Her hand is moving south again, but I just feel too worn down to even protest at this point, the voice in my head cackling at my weakness.

Before I know it, we’re standing outside the entrance, and the Soul Temperer releases me. I stumble a bit before regaining my footing, walking forward. Before I head out, she gives me a reminder: “Remember to draw on your own light to guide you, and not simply that of your soul gem.”

"Yeah, yeah…” I mumble, “I'll have my answers to this… conundrum by tomorrow."

“Farewell, Seeker of Enlightenment," calls the distant voice of the Soul Temperer, followed by the sound of the heavy gates slamming shut behind me.

…Well, THAT was a bit much, wasn’t it? Everybody here must be ill or something. Still, the Soul Temperer raised a good point: I need some outside perspective on things.

The light of the moon and the stars provides just enough illumination for me to not trip over my own feet on the slog back to town. There are storm clouds gathering on the horizon, though, so it’ll probably start raining later on. Hope there isn’t any lightning. I hate lightning.

Well, thunder, anyway. Hate thunder. Hate thunderstorms. I should have checked the weather when I left, but a certain someone made me forget to do so. Dammit, Nakajima.

…AAAAGH! ENOUGH MOPING AROUND! I am NOT going to let something as frivolous as THIS get the better of me! For though the sun may have called it quits for the day, I’M NOT GOING DOWN SO EASILY!

That’s one reason he cheated—OH, HUSH, YOU!

I continue the long trek back to my temporary residence, retrieving my cell phone from my inventory. Once I have it in my hand, my magical costume begins flaking away until only the finely tailored uniform I wore this morning remains. With the protection and stamina afforded by my costume gone, the pain and exhaustion attempt to overwhelm me again. BUT I AM STRONGER! SO! MUCH! STRONGER! Even if EVERYTHING conspires to stop me, I WILL OVERCOME IT!

YEAH, EAT THAT, WEAKNESS! YOU'LL FIND NO PURCHASE ON HEATHER CRUNCH WHILE SHE IS IN THE MIDST OF THIS TASK! RUN AWAY AND NEVER COME BACK, FOR IT IS –FOLLY- TO EVEN TRY!

HA! I'm so good I surprise myself!

NOW that I am once more properly FIRED UP, it's time to deal with the task at hand! My meandering steps become a PURPOSEFUL gait, my bearing and expression of SUPREME CONFIDENCE! I POWER on the phone and UNdo the screen lock before I swipe my finger to bring up the voice commands. The INSTANT it indicates it is listening, I call out the FIRST and most RELIABLE NAME in my list of contacts!

"SAKURA KYOKOOOO!"

The phone rings once. Twice. Three times. And soon enough I hear a pre-recorded message: "Yoooo! This is Kyoko Sakura; I'm probably asleep or eating right now! Leave a message after the beep, and have a MAXIMUM day!"

DAMMIT, YOU FORGOT YOUR CELL PHONE AGAIN, KYOKO!

Well, I should have expected that.

BUT! It's NOT ENOUGH to douse my BURNING RESOLVE! I take a deep breath and holler, "KYOKOOOO! THIS is HEATHER CRUNCH! HOW HAVE YOU BEEN? The reason I call is as part of the training I mentioned before. For the Soul Temperer has asked me to reach out and acquire OUTSIDE PERSPECTIVES on something!"

I sigh a little and lower my voice, scratching at the back of my head in embarrassment. "Which is love," I state clearly. "She wants me to get a bunch of people to tell me what love is supposed to mean to them. It's RIDICULOUS, isn't it?" Saying it out loud, it actually –does- sound silly. I let out a hearty chuckle before wrapping up my call, "but your assistance and input is -still- greatly appreciated! CALL ME BACK WHEN YOU CAN!" I almost hang up, but FIRST A REMINDER: "AND STOP FORGETTING YOUR PHONE!"

And THEN I end the call.

Well, that wasn't so bad. Who's next? A name springs to mind, thanks to recent events, and I speak into my phone once more.

"WENDY COOLDOWWWN!"

THIS time someone actually answers, a certain groggy girl grumbling, "Yeah?"

"COOLDOWWWN!" I bellow, eliciting a scream from the other end.

"OH MY FUCKING GOD-" she shouts. HA! YOU shouldn't be so surprised, Cooldown! Not even your MINIONS were able to keep me down!

"YES!" I interrupt – it feels GOOD to be able to do it for a change – and inform her, "I seek your OPINION on a GRAVE-"

"My opinion is you can fuck off into one and die," she interrupts me and ends the call.

…Now that was just uncalled for.

They hate you, murmurs that annoying voice that should stuff it.

Other than those two, all my contacts are at the Sixth. Pretty much just the Rank Leaders and the Warmaster – the Equerry simply REFUSES to give me her number, in spite of possible EMERGENCIES! WELL FINE, MORKAI! It's YOUR loss, NOT MINE!

How did Slam’s number end up here, though? Probably not very tactful to call so soon after what happened.

AT ANY RATE! “BLUEBELL!” I yell into my device, which pages the Vindicare Rank Leader.

“G’day, you’ve reached the one and only Bel Contra! Leave a message at the tone and I’ll get back to you whenever!” Voicemail again.

“BLUEBELL! THIS is HEATHER CRUNCH! I am calling as part of a task set upon me by the Soul Temperer of the Seventh: to inquire the meaning of love from you and others! Call me back by tomorrow!” Beep.

Call the next number…

“Ahoy! Kai Cress here! I’m a little busy right now, so leave yer message at th’ tone! AND DON’T DAWDLE ABOUT IT!” Voicemail AGAIN.

"CREEEESS!" “THIS IS HEATHER CRUNCH! I am inquiring on behalf of the Soul Temperer as to the meaning of love! Yes, it sounds silly, but I’m serious! Call me back soon!” Beep.

Next number…

“You’ve reached Madge, a.k.a. Miss Shine. You have probably called me while I’m in the middle of doing something important, so leave your name, number, and message at the tone, and I’ll respond when I can. Unless this is Crazy Crunch calling, in which case don’t bother wasting my time.” What was THAT about? Miss Shine?

“Er, MADGE! I need your definition of what ‘love’ is supposed to be! It’s an assignment and NOT a waste of your time! CALL ME SOON!” Beep.

Next…

“You’ve reached the Warmaster’s office. Leave your contact information after the tone.” I’m starting to wonder if something happened.

“WARMASTER! The Soul Temperer won’t allow me in until I have other peoples’ definitions of what love is supposed to be, and nobody else is answering! CALL ME!” Beep.

…What now?

A long nap back at my lodgings only brings more dreams of –her-. This is becoming a serious hindrance to my productivity. I can’t just keep sniffing her pillow for that strawberry smell and expect to get anything done! Also, it’s disgusting! What is –wrong- with me?

And why can’t I stop hugging it?

You’re alone, that horrid voice sneers. You’re completely and utterly alone, and you can’t stand it.

“I’m not alone,” I mumble aloud, clutching the pillow tighter. “I have friends and allies.”

They don’t want anything to do with you. Don’t you get it? After you showed your true colors, they wanted to get rid of you, and you gave them the perfect excuse to do so.

I take out my cell phone and power it back on. It says I have no new messages. And nothing I can find points to any sort of emergency back at the Ninth or the Sixth at this time.

They're busy celebrating. Celebrating that you're out of their hair for good.

I shake my head and go through my contacts again. Starting with Kyoko again, I get the same voicemail message as before. I try calling it again, and then a third time, just to make sure. On the fourth attempt, I decide to leave another message.

"KYOKO!" I holler into the mouthpiece, "I –NEED- YOU TO RETURN MY CALLS! THAT IS ALL!" Then I disconnect.

'Sayakaaaaa, Hothead's buggin' me again!' that irritating voice says, imitating my friend's voice. 'Think I should tell her to stop callin' me?'

There's no way. Kyoko isn't like that at all. She's my friend. I REFUSE to believe that she could be so callous.

You have no friends, it insists.

I try Cooldown again, and this time it informs me that my number is blocked. This causes that horrid voice to laugh. But I still have options. I still have friends. People I can talk to. People who acknowledge I exist and have worth.

Except you don't.

…Except I don't.

I drop the accursed pillow and go through the list again and again and again and again and again. I urge all my contacts to call me back about my inquiry. Or about what's going on. Or anything at all.

"MADGE! This is GRAVELY important! CALL ME BACK!"

'Look, Crazy Crunch tried calling me again. She may have trapped herself in another broom closet.'

"CRESS! As Rank Leader I ORDER you to answer this call!"

'Fifty pieces of eight say she be blubberin' about bein' marooned right about now!'

"BLUEBELL! WHAT'S HAPPENING?!"

'Eh, give her a couple minutes to burn out first… Heh, I wish I could see her face when she does.'

"WARMASTER! WHAT ARE YOUR ORDERS?"

'It took longer than I would have liked, but she is no longer our problem.'

"SLAM! WHY WON'T ANYONE ANSWER ME?"

'…Good riddance.'

NO! I can't accept this! I WON'T accept this! I'm not alone here! Heather Crunch is not alone! I'll prove it! I'll prove that I'm not by myself!

I pocket the phone and force the door open. And I start running. Scrambling toward the far-off monastery gates and clawing at the air. That voice laughs incessantly during my dash, spurring me to move faster.

It takes far too long for me to reach my destination. Far, far too long. The gate remains closed, and looms over me like a giant.

I rattle the gates and push against them, urging them to open. They don't give an inch. "SOUL TEMPERER! SPIRITUAL LIEGE!" I yell, "LET ME BACK IN!" My eyes sting as I wipe away the rain. It's definitely the rain.

"SOMEBODY LET ME IN!" I wail, pounding on this damnable thing in my way, wishing it would just disappear. I keep hitting it and hitting it until my fists grow numb. And I get nothing for my efforts.

They don't want anything to do with you, the voice tells me. They ALL hate you.

"Say something…" I whimper, looking for somebody to refute that. Or even acknowledge that.

But nobody answers.

I turn back to go to my lodgings, and it begins to rain. For real this time. Just a light drizzle, but it feels too icy for a summer rain. Or maybe it's just me.

I trudge home, my enthusiasm and energy gone. It takes all my willpower just to put one foot in front of the other and not collapse on the ground. So I don't have the strength or resolve to fight back the tears streaming out of my eyes.

...Maybe those annoying maids came back. Yeah, I bet they were playing a prank on me. They made me dress up in clothes of their own choosing, and then hid somewhere under the pretense of leaving. The entire time, they've been intercepting my calls and... And created an illusion of the Seventh Officio. One that I couldn't get into. This whole time they've been watching me doubt myself, and giggling about it. It's excessive, but I can't put it past them.

I'm shivering by the time I get back, but I can't bring myself to care. My uniform has gotten heavy with rain, and my eyes still sting with tears. But I'm okay. It was a funny joke, and I'm in on it. I shouldn't be mad.

"Nakajima?" I call out, wringing out the maid dress she and her sister made. "I know you're here. I figured out your trick. It was..." I throw my hands up and chuckle, "well, you got me. You got me good."

"You can stop hiding now," I insist, trying to smooth out the wrinkles. Make it presentable so they see how good it looks. "It's okay, I'm not angry at you. Really."

"Nakajima?" I cry out. Still no answer.

"Come on out," I plead, forcing my mouth into a grin and choking out a laugh. "See? I'm smiling. I'm not upset. I'm not upset at all."

I plod over toward the room they were staying in and slowly slide the door open. "Hah! Found you!" I exclaim/grunt to the empty room.

So obviously she's back in my room. Maybe they even set an ambush. Hehehe. I'll humor them.

"Here I am!" I snivel, walking into my empty room.

...It can't be empty.

Yet I cannot deny the room is empty. No Nakajimas. No Soul Temperer. No Spiritual Liege. Nobody from the Sixth, the Seventh, the Eighth, or the Ninth. There's nobody here but me.

...It could be a Callidus illusion. It could be a hologram. It could be camouflage.

...Or it could be that they really did leave. And with that realization, the proverbial straw that broke the camel's back, all the fight goes out of me for good.

Nobody wants to be anywhere near a train that has no brakes, that awful voice taunts me. You're a disaster in motion, and everybody else has already bailed out.

...Stop it.

I pull off the drenched uniform and clumsily change into my nightgown. Even with that weight lifted off me, though, everything feels far too heavy. I fumble for the light switch, the room going dark. My legs finally give out on me and I fall onto the mattress. And slowly I crawl toward that pillow that still has her scent on it. And wrap myself around it, burying my face in it. The blankets are right there, but I lack the strength to pull them up. So I clutch the pillow tighter and try to keep warm. My whole body is trembling at this point, though I can't tell if it's from the cold, or from the sobs I can't hold down. The only other sound is the patter of raindrops. No giggling, no yelling, no anything to indicate somebody else is here.

It's just me.

...I hate love. I absolutely hate it. It's horrible and I wouldn't wish it on anybody.

...But I think I hate being hated by everything even more. I hate having people I thought were my friends suddenly ignore me. I hate the idea that I've been abandoned. I hate the idea that I'm all alone. I hate that I even consider these things possible.

...And yet, even a thing like that is possible for Heather Crunch.

...Somebody, anybody, tell me what you think of that.

..:: AUREA VENEN || PART 3 || DEMENS I ::..

God damn rookies, the lot of them. I'm not exactly an expert on tactics, but only a complete amateur would announce a squad's presence to literally an entire building in hostile territory. I glanced over to where Cynn was crouched down behind a cabinet, her polychromatic iris returning my gaze anxiously. It was only a matter of time before at least one of the rookies would stumble into this room, conveniently located at the end of the hall. Just my luck.

They ruined my peace and quiet, and for that they won't be forgiven.

I silently slid myself to the edge of the door, carefully peering around it to get a better view. It wasn't hard for me to see them, even in the darkness -- about six or seven girls, all dressed in flashy and colorful costumes. They were all huddled around in a group, probably deciding who was going into what room or something. It was easy to tell even from this distance how carefree -- how cheerful they were despite being stuck in this shitstorm of a city. Sickening.

"Got it? If you do, then get a move on already!" The squad leader's obnoxiously loud voice thundered down the hall, probably waking a portion of the nearby dead. I quickly ducked back behind the bookshelf, giving Cynn a small hand signal to stay on her toes. The hall was filled with the cacophony of muttering, giggling, and footsteps -- a set getting closer. The girl's heels were haltingly clacking away against the tiled flooring, easily giving away how reluctant and fearful she was to approach. How adorable.

Giving Cynn one last signal, I pressed myself up against the wall as much as I could, the bookshelf's placement obscuring me from immediate line of sight. After all, if this girl had any intelligence, she would make sure nothing was on the sides of the entry before waltzing into the room.

As if on cue, the heels stopped at the door frame. A warm light shone into the room, casting long creeping shadows, seeming to grasp for anything they could find. With a creak of the wood flooring, she took her first step into the room, the halo of light entering my field of vision. Her right arm was held out, palm up as a glowing magic orb floated a little above it, the source of the light. The next thing that caught my attention was the gleam of her weapon, what appeared to be some sort of rapier -- nearly vibrating from how much she was shaking. I suppose I couldn't blame her too much after all, this room was pretty damn dark and had quite a bit of furniture to hide behind.

The girl hesitated for a moment, before she turned her head in my general direction, taking a step towards my end of the room. I quietly clicked my tongue, as I'd hoped I could sneak up on her from behind. At this rate though, the light was going to get close enough for her to see me. Damn, there goes my plans to be stealthy.

Just as the edge of the light neared my position, something fell behind her, causing the girl to yelp and whirl around. Cynn was huddled up facing a corner of the room, her mask hidden from view behind her. Excellent, she must have knocked something over to grab the girl's attention. After some hesitation the girl stepped over to where Cynn -- who had been making a show of shivering like a scared puppy -- was, the light fully revealing her. Now was my chance.

"U-Um...are...are you alright?" She murmured, clearly unsure whether or not to approach. I began to slowly creep forward, keeping an eye on both the girl as well as the doorway; but more than anything trying my utmost to prevent my legs from making noise. It's really difficult to sneak around when your limbs are made from solid whatever-alloy-this-shit-is. There didn't seem to be anyone else in the hallway, which made the timing all the better, as I had just about reached her back.

It was then that the glimmer of the large hairpin holding up her ponytail drew my attention, and it was like everything around me just stopped. I could feel my pulse quicken and muscles tense -- ahh, it's THIS feeling again. This feeling of intensity. How could I have forgotten. How could I have been so mistaken. Being trapped with a bunch of magical girls wasn't horrible. It wasn't horrible at all, no -- it was exquisite. All these soul gems, in one place. All these souls, tasty souls. Fufu~

I'll make them mine.

Then I heard a giggle. It came from this very room. It surely wasn't Cynn, who was slowly turning towards the girl now, probably one of the biggest grins on her face that you couldn't even see. It wasn't this delicious little girl in front of me, every millimeter of her hair probably standing on end from sheer terror. No -- it was me.

I didn't give her a chance to turn her head to look at me, or even time to scream. The large and black monstrous claw known as my left hand firmly planting itself over the girl's mouth, gripping so tightly I could hear more than just the metal creaking. Before I even realized it, my lips had already found her hairpin -- her soulgem. I pulled it free from the constraints of her hair with my mouth, the ponytail breaking apart, perhaps analogous to what was going to happen to the rest of her.

The girl squirmed violently in my grasp, attempting to pierce me with the rapier, her efforts to cry for help reduced to muffled sobs. I couldn't help but rake my right hand across her body, tearing her costume to shreds, amongst other things. With her gem now completely inside my mouth, it wasn't long before her flailing began to become less intense, and the sounds she made took a different turn. It was almost like eating a lollipop -- stick and everything, now all you have to do is...

"MMmffhhh!" Her body suddenly arched back as my teeth ground into the surface of the soul gem, not hard enough to crack it of course. I can't have even more fun if it doesn't stay intact, after all. Amidst the girl's convulsions, I could hear the sound of trickling water, the faint scent further indicative that she had gone incontinent. Whoops~ It wasn't too much longer that she stopped writhing in my grip, breathing heavily and likely exhausted.

A dull pain in my side caused me to look down and notice that the rapier had been jabbed into me at some point, likely when she had been squirming about earlier. Oh, she'd done it now, I've had enough fun with her anyways. In the next instant, both tails pierced her torso, her screams still muffled into my left hand. A return path resulted in even more gore, covering the front of my costume in dark crimson, and I let go of her once she went limp. Her lifeless body crumpled to the floor, a pool of her blood slowly forming around her corpse as I swiftly whipped the remnants off of my tails.

I let out another chortle, my face contorting into a sneer as I turned to look down the hallway. The fun had just begun, my body felt like it was on fire. I pulled the hairpin out of my mouth, giving it a small kiss, before it turned into a ring. The ring easily slipped onto the long slender metal, and the power flow hit me like a truck. This -- this was my drug -- the surge of another girl's magic energy entering my body as I hungrily drained the gem like a battery. The tips of my tails began to change shape, the needles growing much longer as if they had become individual rapiers.

It's time for the blood lust to begin -- it WILL continue. Fufufufu~

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/23/14(Sun)10:29:11 No.36348277 Archived

"Isn't that what you want, Nameless One?" The demon wearing your face and speaking with your own voice smiles, her eyes of burnished amethyst glowing - no, burning - as she stares right into your own. Piercing right through your very soul.

"Your own life back. The life you've been forced to abandon in the name of this...responsibility, this burden that no one in their right mind would willingly choose to weigh themselves down with."

You open your mouth to say otherwise, but she holds up a hand to stop you, a look of disapproval flashing across her smooth features. "And don't insult us both by lying, either. I am you, and you are me - no matter how mutually distasteful we find that truth. I know how you think."

You narrow her eyes at her, gritting your teeth in mounting frustration . ...Fine. Sure. Maybe this Warmaster thing isn't so hot. Maybe you don't want to see another stack of fucking paperwork again, and maybe you're okay with going back to the times when you can just drink the days away until you have to peel yourself from the floor and kill someone for money.

But to just let shit happen? To let the Golden Weapons loose onto the world, for anyone to pick them up? How's that going to fix things? How's that going to stop Pinky from going completely insane - more than she has already, anyway - and murdering everything and everyone forever?

Your winged self shakes her head, smiling again, before lazily tapping at her temple with a glove-encased finger. "Do I need to remind you? I'm you. You're me. Neither of us would ever do anything this grand, this ambitious, without a plan. I have one of my own, and its wheels are spinning along as we speak. This--" She gestures with both her hands wide, turning in a flamboyant twirl to encompass whatever space in unreality you're both occupying at the moment. "--intervention, as I call it, is an attempt to grease those wheels. Get them spinning along more smoothly and effortlessly, without anything blocking their path."

Her smile widens as she offers her hand again to you. "So, in the interest of the both of us getting what we want out of this miserable existence the Incubators has cursed us with - what do you say, Nameless One? Or...Chiaki Matsuda, since you adore being called by that so much? Do we have a deal?"

You didn't even need to think about it. Not for one second.

"No deal."

The blasting report of the Desert Eagle booms across the unnatural landscape a moment after the monstrous recoil kicks against your fist, right after the split-second whiteout of the muzzle flash - and you watch your sneering reflection blink at you in stunned silence as she topples to the ground, her left leg sheared off from the kneecap.

Her hapless, graceless fall scattering more black feathers into the air, only for them to drift down and soak into an expanding pool of her own blood.

"...Really? Really, Matsuda? I give you a fucking FREE TICKET out of this SHIT, and this is how you respond?!" She squawks in cold, dignified fury as she struggles to right herself, to pull herself up to a sitting position. Her skeletal wings flapping wetly and uselessly in the effort. "Are you so far gone that you can't even comprehend such a precious gift when it's all but shoved in your fucking FACE?! I--"

She stops dead as she looks up to see you aiming your Desert Eagle at her face. Its barrel kissing her forehead.

"You said it yourself. I'm you and you're me." You murmur as you stand over her, finger tightening on the trigger. "And I think we both know which way this is going to go."

"..." The raven-haired demon scowls at you in cold silence, before slowly shaking her head.

"You're making a mistake." She says flatly, hateful disappointment coating her words. "Madoka can't be saved, not in the way you think. The only way to save her is to let her do what she wants to this timeline, and--"

You press your Desert Eagle a bit more firmly against her forehead. The demon blinks, frowns, and then - of all things - suddenly smiles.

"Fine. Yes. That's your decision. I suppose I should have known all along that you were going to be just as stubborn." She giggles again - a strange thing to see and hear, considering the one doing it is currently bleeding out from a ragged stump where her left leg had once been.

"But can I at least offer you a small nugget of advice, since you're dead set on this self-destructive path? After all, you're quite fond of listening to those three idiots inside that thing, right?" The horror nods towards the gun set to make a crater of her skull. "It'll just take me a second, and then you can go back to your little rescue mission or whatever it is you're trying to do."

How do you respond?

[]Fine. What?

The funny thing is that Chiaki Matsuda doesn't even have the same psychopathic, mono-manic focus on saving Madoka and Madoka alone that .... well, all the Homus had.

For better or worse, the Warmaster of the IXth is half of her own person by now. (Or at least a third.)

Malal was impressed enough to take a gamble on her, and Madoka entrusted her with a lot of sensitive info. Given her relationship with Chiaki, she could be in a position of influence in this cosmic conflict.

Maybe they're afraid of what could happen if the latest incarnation of Homura got too attached to someone else like she did with Madoka the first time around.

You grumble something approaching of an affirmation, and the raven-haired banshee's smile grows wider - almost resembling the crescent-moon grin of the doll-like things that she'd sent after you.

"Green hair is the dange--" She starts, but immediately holds up a hand as you make to blow her brains out. "Wait. No. That's not what I wanted to say. I apologize. That came out of nowhere."

...Then what the FUCK did she want to say, then?! You snarl down at her, unable to keep the rising anger from your own voice.

She looks at you pointedly, before shaking her head. "If you proceed down on this path you've chosen for yourself, all the things that you hold dear will be taken away from you. Your friends will become your enemies, and your enemies will be the ones you turn to for aid. You will lose everything, piece by piece, person by person, until you are left with nothing but the road you're traveling." The monster looks up at you with your own eyes. "And of all the people who will abandon you, Tomoe Mami will be the one to betray you first."

...No. You shake your head, allowing a smirk to curl your lips. You've heard of that before. If she's looking to fuck with your head, then she'll have to try something else. That kind of thing is impossible--

"Is it really?" The black-haired devil pulls herself forward with her hands, the ragged stump of her leg making a disgustingly-wet noise as it slops against the pool of blood leaking from it.

"Both of us know what kind of person Tomoe Mami is. What kind of Magical Girl she's become. Do you really think she won't step in once she realizes just what is happening to you? Once she realizes your role in all of this? Once she sees what you're about to become?"

"You're free not to believe me, of course." The demon smiles brightly. "Whoever did that made sure I can't control you, piss-poor job of doing it aside." She points towards your scarred Shield. "Consider it a parting gift from someone who actually has compassion for what you're going through, rather than squawking shades of the past, forever lamenting their failures."

You open your mouth to reply, when a familiar voice echoes throughout the plain. A familiar voice, shouting panicked words through a throat already hoarse from too much yelling.

"...Murderface? MURDERFACE, WAKE UP! I can't hold them off forever! ...Mami, I've found Murderface, but she's out like a light! Yeah, we're pinned down at the third floor, looks like some kinda supply cabinet...no, I can't reach Wendy either, she's not responding--"

The voice abruptly fades to silence. That's...that's Kyoko. Wait, shit, does that mean--

"Whoops!" The Witch laughs. "I guess that means our time's up!" It's here that she points towards what looks like a hole in reality ten meters away from you, the portal glowing with a virulent violet light. Unnameable things - things that shouldn't exist, things with tentacles, claws, and claws in their tentacles - slither from its depths, only to slip back out once you focus on them. "Just go through that and you'll be back where you need to be. I PROMISE that it's not leading to some sort of dungeon dimension or anything."

You turn back to her, eyes narrowing. ...Why should you even trust her with something like that?

The girl blinks, before sighing in exasperation. "I'm you, remember? I've tried to make my case, and you didn't take it. Why should I expend more effort than necessary in removing you from my path when it'll happen in the course of time, anyway?" She smiles again, with the same crescent-slit grin as her dolls.

"Besides, I think it'll be fascinating to see how what kind of Chiaki Matsuda I'll have to kill when the last day dawns." She cackles, the mirthful noise as musical as an angel's dying scream. "Will you be as twisted as that freak you gave your nickname, or will you wear the same wings as I do now?"

"...GAH! That fucking STINGS!" Kyoko's ghostly scream stabs a knife of ice through your spine. "...Alright, you fuckers you asked for it--"

Jesus Christ, she's getting slaughtered there. No time, no time! You have to get back into the fight!

"If you don't trust me, you can always go back the normal way," The Witch volunteers, the fingers of her left hand forming into a gun and aiming at her own temple. "Although you might wake up with a migraine if you do. Your choice."

Okay people, let's get serious for a minute here. Death flags are popping up all over the place, and we all know that it's very likely that a BAD END will occur. All I'm asking is that we adhere to three simple rules:

1. First in, Last out, no questions asked.
2. Ahriman is a grade A nutjob. Give Kiriko a chance to convince Oriko that she's on the wrong side, but if she isn't convinced, slice her up and that red-helmeted culexus up, no 3rd chances.
3. If it comes down to the line, we all agree the one to take the sacrifice will be us. We have the golden weapons and the perfect time-stop ability, so we have the best chance of getting out alive.

So she could do all of that, OR, be convinced to help deal with whatever bullshit Ahriman and the akashic witches try to pull in our timestop realm.

We're getting better at convincing her of things. It just needs pancakes, or affection, or promises of mutilation. All of those things can be had in abundance here!

You look down at the smiling fallen angel sitting in a puddle of her own blood, and then at the shrieking, shaking tear in reality - before snarling out a curse and making a mad dash for the latter. Just as you throw yourself through it, you hear your winged clone yell a parting message at your back:

"IT'S POINTLESS, CHIAKI MATSUDA! WHAT YOU'RE DOING WILL MATTER LITTLE WHEN THE END TIMES COME! I AM FOREVER, AND YOU ARE JUST ONE MAGICAL GIRL!"

You whirl around and let loose a snap-shot just as you fall into the portal itself - and the last thing you see before everything goes black, again, is the monster's face disappearing in a pink cloud of gore and blood and brain matter.

Christ. No wonder why everyone wants to kill you, you're insufferable.

As entertaining and endearing as a drunk with a gun, or a crazed all-powerful being with crazy abandonment issues.

You close your eyes as the godawful sensation of teleportation once more takes your breath away, and--

--you open your eyes to wake up in the scene of a massacre. Or at least, one in progress.

A massacre perpetuated solely by a single magical girl, one with the crimson of her costume made wet and grisly by fresh bloodstains, most of which seems to be forcibly donated by her opponents. A magical girl with long crimson hair tied into a ponytail with a black ribbon, an infectious grin, and her strange lack of one eye concealed underneath an eyepatch made from a family heirloom sword guard.

"EAT IT! EAT IT, YOU GRABASSTIC PIECE OF SHIT!" Your best friend roars as she jabs the boxcutter-edge blade of her spear into the mouth of something tall, winged and shod with cloven hooves. The sparking blade with the underslung bolter attachment disappears into the creature's massive equine maw, a moment before it punches right through the back of its head.

The thing lets out a monstrous death rattle, its limbs falling slack in twitching, nerveless death - and it's with nary a grunt of effort that Kyoko rips her spear back out, before spinning once and hammering the teetering corpse with a brutal kick that sends it flying. It is airborne for exactly three seconds before it smashes into one of its brothers loping forward to attack, knocking it off its feet.

"GET SOME! GET SOME!" Your best friend whoops, materializing one of her tri-pointed spears in her other hand, spinning both weapons into blurring shapes at the same time. "COME ON AND GET SOME SPEAR, COW BOYS! WHO WANTS TO DIE FIRST?!"

...Completely in her element. You almost feel a bit stupid to think she needed your help - that is, until you see that she is getting tired. It's not hard to see why - from the amount of bodies lying around, she's been fighting back what seems to be an endless horde for quite a while.

You can also see that her rear leg is shivering each time she takes a step back, a sure sign that she needs a breather - or at least, some help, before fatigue really catches up and makes her lower her guard.

You drag yourself up back onto your feet - wincing at the aching protest of your stiff joints, at your cold muscles - and make to help Kyoko when something stops you.

It's a...a barricade? A magical one, it looks like. One made to look like a rather fanciful mosaic fence of red and black diamonds. ...Kyoko's? Yeah, it looks like hers--

"GAAAAH! GET OFF!" Kyoko screaming in pain snaps you back into reality, and you see one of the goat-monsters sinking its teeth into her arm, making her drop the spear she'd been wielding with deadly, brilliant efficiency.

One of its bigger brothers, a hulking behemoth with skulls impaled through its horns, hefts a massive cleaver over its head, gearing up for an executioner's cleave. Clearly intending on hacking your best friend in half.

What do you do?

"KYOKO! BEHIND YOU!" You scream, just as you tear Muramasa out of its sheath without a second's thought, the leather-wrapped handle immediately growing warm in your grasp. The tableau in front of you immediately freezes, with your best friend momentarily distracted by the set of fangs buried deep into her forearm as she blinks at you. "Murderface...?" Another moment, and her face brightens up. "MURDERFACE! You're up! I thought you--"

"BEHIND! YOU!" You yell again, and Kyoko whirls to see the massive hooked cleaver above her, a moment's distance from falling and splitting her in half. Time seems to slow down to a crawl as your best friend's one eye widens at the sight of her oncoming death, before sluggishly attempting to bring her other spear to bear in order to block it. It's with a cold, frantic certainty that you realize the simple fact: she won't make it in time.

+ But with this blade in your hands, you will. + A soft, velvet voice purrs into your ear, almost lovingly.

The purple flame erupts in front of your left eye as the barricade quite literally falls apart in front of you with just one swing, and then--and then--

The ear-splitting whine of a piggish death squeal, along with the sudden shock of a shower of warm blood slapping against your cheek, jolts you back into reality - and you blink as you find yourself standing in front of something that had once been the thing that was about to kill Kyoko Sakura.

It was now little less than biological wreckage - a pile of furred, steaming meat and bone and sinew, hacked so cleanly into pieces that you'd bet you could put it back together if you were bothered to, like some child's building block toy.

Looking around, you see that the three other demons behind this particular one had also been cut apart beyond recognition, and you watch in morbid fascination as one of the heads had been lopped off with such expertise that it was still alive. It was still attempting to breathe, its pebbled tongue lolling out of its lips as it tried to draw breath into lungs it clearly didn't have anymore.

You can also hear the rapidly-receding horde of footsteps leading away from your current location. ...You probably managed to frighten the others away. Good.

There's a wet, meaty crunch, and you whirl to see Kyoko behind you, her bleeding arm wrapped around the neck of the goat-demon that had bitten her. From the way its slack face is blankly leering, you can tell that it's been killed by its neck being savagely broken like a twig. That, and the fact that it's facing the completely wrong way.

"Murderface!" Your best friend cheers, dropping the corpse from her arms and stepping forward. Something inside screams at you to hold up the sword en garde, but you force it away and shove the sword back into its sheath before Kyoko reaches you. "Oh, man, that was brutal! You just diced these dudes like nobody's business! Not even Sayaka-chan can cut like this, and she's been trying a whole lot!"

You blink at your best friend, and then at her wound, the teeth marks still dripping with her blood. ...Funny, with all the dead bodies around, you shouldn't be able to smell Kyoko's blood in particular, and yet, you could easily pick it out...

"Geez, where the heck are you hiding all that strength, Murderface?" Kyoko squeezes your biceps, frowning as she squishes your non-existent muscles. "Certainly not here, but man, to cut like that, you gotta be packin' at least SOME definition here...Nope, nothing there either. What the hell...?"

+ Tempting, isn't it? + The voice whispers again, soft and dangerous, like a knife's edge slicing through silk. + That's the hunger, Matsuda. The hunger of the Chosen. We don't just shriek about tasting the meat of dying angels for our health, you know. It's our call. Our cry. We are the Chosen, and to sustain ourselves, we need to feed. You will feel the hunger much more keenly in the coming days. +

You shake your head. No. No, dammit. Now's not the time for that!

+ Suit yourself, Matsuda. Don't say I didn't warn you. +

You shake your head again, and tug your arm out of Kyoko's grasp. That's enough, you tell her. This isn't the time, and for fuck's sake, you're not THAT noodly.

"I didn't say anything about anyone being noodly!" Your best friend protests. "You're the one who keeps saying it!"

Well, whatever. Anyway, is she alright? How's her arm?

"I'm fine, I'm fine! I'm not second-in-lane for the rank leadership for nothing, you know!" Kyoko taps her chest with a bloodied fist, proud as you like. "Arm's a bit itchy, but the bleeding's stopped now and I can always have Sayaka-chan patch me up later! Although, uh..." It's here that your best friend looks worried. "I hope I don't, you know, turn into a goat or something in the full moon. Because that would really suck."

...What? Like a werewolf, but a goat? A were-goat?

"Yeah! That's not even cool!"

...Yeah. Not cool at all.

Kyoko nods. "A-anyway, uh...how did you do that, seriously?" Kyoko's one eye widens at you, before falling to the sheathed Muramasa on your hip. "Wait, is that what Kirika's sword actually does? Because earlier I saw you had this purple flame thing on your eye, and I thought that was just something from around here, but..."

+ Chiaki? Chiaki-san? Are you there? Chiaki-san, Kyoko-san, please respond! + A pulsed thought, faint yet crystal-clear, makes the both of you wince at its suddenness. ...Mami? Wait, that's Mami's voice! How's she pulsing--

"It's that new thing that Midori and Kyuubey and Yuma-chan were talking about earlier, I think?" Kyoko volunteers. "We can't use normal codecs here, since this is A-cushy..Akashyyyk...Wookie World, too much interference. All the channels are just souls screaming in everlasting torment and despair." She shrugs. "So Yuma-chan's hooked up so that she's sort of our codec system with everyone else here, without her being here. "

Ah. Well. That sounds handy.

"It is, isn't it? And you just gotta think of your reply and it'll automatically get sent!"

Just like pulsing, huh.

+ Chiaki-san! Kyoko-san, please respond! + Mami pulses again. You pulse back a rudimentary response, still a bit shaken from your encounter with the demon earlier - and it's here that a sense of relief floods you, one delivered by Mami's own pulse.

+ Oh, thank god, both of you are safe. + You could see the blonde's tired smile curl her lips. + I was about to send Sayaka-chan down to fetch you, but it seems like it won't be necessary. +

Down? Wait, where is she, anyway? And where are you?

+ We're holed up at the fifteenth floor, Chiaki-san. Sayaka-chan and I. The teleportation dropped us fairly close to each other, so we immediately linked back up together here. The same seems to have happened to you and Kyoko-chan, but she found you unresponsive and comatose there. I told her to keep you safe until you woke up. +

Is that right? You turn to glance at Kyoko, who flashes you a cheerful thumbs-up sign. ...And how long have you been out?

+ Not long. I'd say thirty minutes, maybe less. ...Honestly, I can't say for certain. Time moves strangely here. + You could hear the apprehension in Mami's pulsed words - no, you could feel it.

+ Anyway, Chiaki-san, it seems that our main objective is - wonder of wonders - at the top floor. Most of the things we've been encountering seems to be coming from there. Normally, I'd just have us push upwards to finish this quickly, but something's happened-- +

+ Wendy? + You interject.

+ Yes. I can't reach her. Yuma can't find her, and Sayaka can't pick up her scent. + A pregnant pause. + ...Chiaki-san, I know how complicated your situation with Wendy is right now, but can I ask if you could search the floors for her on your way up? I have faith in her abilities, but the fact that she's unresponsive...+ Her pulsed thoughts trail off, and you could feel the traces of concern and fear rippling through her message. + If you'd like, though, I can leave Sayaka here to secure our link-up point while I look for her myself. +

How do you respond?

[]+ I'll find her. Stay there and wait for us. +
[]+ Just push on forward. Wendy's a big girl, she'll catch up with us. These things aren't as tough as they look. +
[]+ Have Sayaka do it instead. She's faster than all of us combined, she'll cover more ground. +

I'm tempted to have Sayaka go down and us go up, to do it in half the time. But that would mean leaving Mami alone. And time flows strangely here. Who knows how much time would have passed if and when we meet up. We might find her an old white-haired meguca who has seen things we can't even imagine. It might be best to meet up as soon as possible.

So both these:
[X]+ I'll find her. Stay there and wait for us. +
[X]+ Have Sayaka do it instead. She's faster than all of us combined, she'll cover more ground. +

But ask Mami to go with Sayaka.

Of course maybe Wendy is just on the 16th floor and not answering pulses because callidus physiology or something.

And since when can Sayaka smell so well?

+ I'll find Wendy. + You pulse back. + Stay there and wait for us. +

Another pulsed sigh of relief, an easing of tensions. + Thank you, Chiaki-san. Please make haste, Sayaka-chan and I will establish a defensive position here. Yuma says that there's a lot more resistance in the upper floors, so we'll have to move forward as one group if we've any chance to punch through and get to the main objective. +

Alright. That's good. You'll notify her immediately once you find Wendy, then.

+ Please do, Chiaki-san. I'm counting on you. + And it's here that the connection between you and Mami grows cold and silent, like a commlink being severed abruptly.

"Both of us know what kind of person Tomoe Mami is." You could still hear what that monster said, earlier.

"What kind of Magical Girl she's become. Do you really think she won't step in once she realizes just what is happening to you? Once she realizes your role in all of this? Once she sees what you're about to become?"

You shake your head, gritting your teeth, and wipe the blood from your face. The bitch was just trying to psych you out, that's all. Mami wouldn't betray you. She was the one who pushed you into doing this in the first place! She wouldn't...!

"And of all the people who will abandon you, Tomoe Mami will be the one to betray you first."

You shake your head again, forcing the thought out of your mind, before turning to Kyoko - your best friend busily and clumsily covering her bite wounds with adhesive bandages. "We're moving," You tell her. "We're--"

"Finding Wendy, I know. I heard." Kyoko grins at you, just as she slaps her bandage flat against her arm. "There, good as new!" She kicks her dropped spear up into the air and catches it with a flourish. "And now I'm all set, ready to kill more of these giant walkin' goat dudes AND find my best friend's 'merican ex!"

...Well. At least she's still got pep after that. Isn't she tired or anything?

"Huh? Ah, nah. I mean, I was gettin' a bit pooped, but that was just the adrenalin, ya know?" She shakes her head.

"Mami and I were panicking because you weren't responding, and then when I found you you weren't wakin' up...then these goat guys come barging in, yellin' something about intruders and wavin' their choppers around. I had to immediately go into DEFEND MURDERFACE mode, ya know? Put up a barricade and everything, and--"

Kyoko stopps here, her one eye going wide. "Wait. You..you cut through my barricade? I don't remember callin' it away, and you were there and then here in a blink of an eye, and--" She looks down at the Golden Weapon sheathed at your waist, a good amount of awe and fear in her gaze. "Whoa. That's...that's something else, Murderface. Just how fucked is that thing, anyway?"

How do you respond?

The Iron Circle
Chapter VI: Skitarii

"Well...I've certainly seen better performances, novitiate, but I guess for your first time you didn't do so bad."

The combat simulator disengaged, bringing Honoka out of the world of cybernetics and back into the world of flesh. Her recliner-chair hissed as it moved back into the upright position.

Honoka found herself back in the rounded training chamber of the Toxotes, the Fourth Officio's Order of Vindicares. A row of simulators lined the walls, while a fully equipped shooting lane dominated half of the room. A training course, mocked up to look like an urban combat zone, occupied the other half; a dozen Magical Girls were busy using it, adding their bellowing guns and stamping iron feet to the general din of the Toxotes hall.

The red-haired Vindicare groaned as she pulled herself out of the simulator. Today, she was out of her exoskeleton and was wearing a sports bra and spats. Several dozen electrodes--designed to simulate concussive impacts and pain inside the VR world--snaked away from her worn and beaten body as she chugged from a water bottle.

"'Better performances'?" she said, breathless. "Strike Leader, I-I'm not really sure what I was supposed to do there! Who were those guys, Spetznaz? SEALs?" She paused to take another drink. "I couldn't use magic, I couldn't leave the designated mission area, and I only had a rifle, a pistol, some ammo, and a suit of armor I barely knew how to use. How was I supposed to take on fifteen spec-ops with armored support?"

A pause.

"Er, ma'am," she added hastily.

Strike Leader Lau loomed over her like an iron effigy. She stood in a Light chassis, a somewhat stocky, bulky form painted blue-on-black and built with a smooth, bald head. Her arms were crossed across her chest while her red eye-lenses steadily regarded Honoka. The red-haired Vindicare had read up on the Vindicare squad leader before the training session had started: three year veteran of the Fourth, promoted to Strike Leader six months ago. Sterling track record, reputation for iron discipline and steely nerves in combat.

"The goal of this test wasn't so much to see if you could kill fifteen elite soldiers and an IFV," said the Strike Leader, "as much as it was a test to see how you'd perform in that armor."

The Strike Leader leaned over and poked Honoka in the shoulder. She had plenty of strong muscle there, along with puckered, ragged marks of tough scar tissue—proud badges earned through years of hard, dangerous service—yet Lau's steel finger easily pressed into her shoulder as though the meat there was just skin and fat.

"Powered armor isn't just a fancy suit that makes you run a little faster and punch a little harder and has some sweet gadgets built into it. When you wear it, you're stepping into a whole new world of tactical possibilities. Wall in your way? Run through it. Need a higher vantage point? Just climb up a building, no need for stairs. Someone shooting you with peashooters? Just walk up to them and punch them out, they can't hurt you."

Lau unhooked a tablet from her belt and started it up. "Which is good, because we're one of the smallest Officios out there, and most of us are too busy with R&D to go out on missions much. That means it's once in a blue moon when we're NOT badly outnumbered. All we've got is marginally bigger guns and an edge in the 'fancy gadgets' department; we better exploit that as much as we can, or we're fucked."

She thrust the tablet towards Honoka for her to see. A tap on the screen showed Honoka a video; it was footage taken from another run on the VR trainer, using the same scenario Honoka had just finished.

It was like watching a summer blockbuster action film. The armored girl bounded up buildings like a simian beast, barely slowing down as she bounded across the closely packed rooftops. She punched people through walls, either sending them crashing through a house or or ramming her mailed fist through a barricade and into a man's head. At one point, the girl seized a downed soldier by the leg and hurled it at the rest of his squad, sending them hurtling back in a heap of broken bones and limbs.

It was the sort of thing, thought Honoka as she watched the girl slowly pry open an IFV's hatch with her armored hands, that the really crazy Magical Girls she knew would try to do.

...no, she realized. Not crazy. Crazy would have involved laughing, cackling, drinking the blood of your enemies along with their pain and fear. Crazy would have meant killing for the sake of killing, destroying for the sake of destruction, thirsting for an orgy of death and ruin.

This, she thought, was too measured and precise for crazy. This was simply power granted by ingenuity and engineering. This was the product of an Officio that brooked no weakness and demanded every one of its members be stronger and better than they were. An Officio armed with some of the most cutting-edge technology in the world.

This was the Fourth Officio Assassinorum.

"You see?" asked the Strike Leader. "This is how a Machine fights. This is how -we- fight. When we pick up our weapons and deploy to kill some poor pack of idiots, the usual rules go out the window, because there's going to be just a few of us against a lot of them, and we'd be stupid if we play the game the usual way." She took the tablet away from Honoka and set it aside. "So..."

[4/11]
Despite Lau's impassive expression, the red-haired Vindicare could hear the smile in her voice. “Now that you've seen what you're actually supposed to do: you up for round 2?"

Hours later, Honoka stumbled out of the training room, panting and utterly spent. Lau walked behind her to ensure she didn't trip and crack her skull open.

Her entire body felt sore. Bruised, even. It was like she was back in Basic again, puking up her breakfast into the dirt as she crawled under barbed wire, trying not to piss or shit herself from the fear and exhaustion. Repeated jolts from the VR simulator left her feeling like a pack of Eversors had worked her over with sticks, but then there was also the mental fatigue. It was difficult to think clearly; forming thoughts through the tired, muddied waters of her mind felt like a herculean task.

"Hurts, doesn't it?" said Lau. "I remember being stuck in one of those for my first test, back when I was a greenhorn. Threw up all over the instructor's feet, had to mop it up afterwards. Ha!" She glanced at the flagging Ninth Vindicare. “Hanging in there, novitiate? You look dead on your feet.”

Honoka managed to wheeze out a weak laugh. “Ha ha, well, I've had worse...”

“Worse?”

“Yes. 'Just a 9mm with two magazines against a Witch' worse.”

“Heh. Well, just you sit tight, the fun's just started.”

A cargo drone ambled by, and Honoka had to resist the urge to hitch a ride on it.

By now, it was past evening in the Olympia. Its cool halls were almost quiet, with the majority of the manufactories chugging along at only half-power, rendering the usual dull roar into something more of a sedate rumble. Honoka could hear her and Lau's footsteps clanging against the steel floors, echoing, reverberating through the mobile headquarter's iron bowels.

As she trudged down the long corridors, she mulled on the last several hours of grueling VR training, and felt a pang of disappointment at the memory.

[5/11]
There was no other way to put it—Honoka simply couldn't beat the simulation. It was one thing to realize you had an entire new set of stratagems at your disposal; it was another thing entirely to actually employ them in the heat of battle, even one simulated in a silicon world.

The worst part was that her own instincts were her greatest enemy. Four years of habits and training, hammered into her brain through mission after mission after blood-drenched, sanity-tearing mission, didn't just go away on a whim. She kept hesitating at important junctures, unable to bring herself to go up a building or bust down a wall—the little voice in her head wouldn't stop screaming about how stupid an idea it was, how she wasn't an Eversor and shouldn't act like one, throttling her brain until she stuck to the tried-and-true basics that had kept her alive for four violent years.

One thought in particular made her grimace. Was that disappointment she'd heard in Lau's voice as the Strike Leader adjourned for the day? Honoka wasn't sure: on one hand, Lau did mention she had markedly improved by the time she got up from the VR chair...on the other hand, the Strike Leader hadn't been terribly ecstatic either. Her tone was dry, almost apathetic. Maybe she was being sarcastic But at the same time, Lau wasn't a terribly exictable person—maybe that was just her way of being nice.

That was the trouble with these Ironforms, thought Honoka. So many of them went around with a poker face. At times, it felt like she was in an entire room filled with...well.

With emotionless robots.

Lost in thought, the red-haired Vindicare barely noticed the figure standing in the hall before her.

"Hmm? Oh, didn't see you there, Skitarius," said Lau. “Back to your duties, bint Dammam.”

>> ☐ TwiceBorn 11/23/14(Sun)15:44:05 No.36353324

[6/11]

A vaguely humanoid shape, swathed in a billowing red robe, the crimson standing out brightly amidst the endless grays of Olympia's iron corridors. It jolted at the sound of Lau's voice, and the quiet whimper coming from the figure told Honoka that it was a girl.

A metal hand erupted from the mass of cloth and parted it, revealing a face.

"Oh. Uh..."

The girl before her was small: petite, even. She had a shock of short, unruly grey hair, while her large, innocent doe-eyes were a warm honey brown, hiding behind a pair of circular eye glasses framing dusky skin. The rest of her was mostly obscured by the voluminous red clothing, with her curious metal limb grasping at the robe's hood.

Unlike the smooth plating of Light Ironforms, the girl's hand was like the inside of a machine; gears, springs, pistons, and a dozen other different mechanisms moved and played their delicate dance inside the limb. Its construction—and the entirely natural constitution of its owner's face—made Honoka suspect that it was an advanced prosthetic, rather than part of an Ironform. The girl seemed to have noticed Honoka's staring, as she hurriedly covered her arm back up and clutched it to her chest. Her doe-eyes were strained, trying to look at anything that wasn't Honoka and Lau, and she seemed eager to do as Lau said and leave.

Honoka offered a hand and, despite her fatigue, managed to put on a smile. "Hello! I don't think we've met? I'm Honoka Iwakura, from the Ninth. I'm new here."

The girl eyed the proffered hand warily, as though it were some sort of trap. At last, she replied with a murmur. “H-h-hello...”

>> ☐ TwiceBorn 11/23/14(Sun)15:45:07 No.36353343

[7/11]
Her voice was soft as a feather, made all the weaker by the burdens of nervousness and anxiety. The dull background thrum of the Olympia's beating heart, quiet as it was from its resting state, still threatened to swallow it. Her metal hand clutched at her robe-like clothes and drew them closer, as a child would a security blanket, leaving Honoka's own hanging awkwardly in the air.

“Erm...”

'Well...' thought Honoka. The trembling girl's gaze was frenetic, flickering to Honoka, then to the floor, then to the ceiling, then to Lau, then back to Honoka again. 'Alright, then...'

To Honoka's relief, Lau chose that moment to step in. Her voice was cold and carried the hint of reprimand. “Ahem. As I said, Skitarius bint Dammam, back to your duties.”

Bint Dammam flinched as if struck. “I-I'm sorry, Strike Leader, I was just trying t-to say h—”

“-Now-, Skitarius.”

“Yes!” squeaked the girl. “Right away, I'm s-s-so sorry...” Without another word, the petite girl made a quick bow and scurried off, stumbling every so often over the hem of her long robes.

Honoka threw a glance at Lau. The Strike Leader was as impassive as ever, but something...something in he posture added a hint of tension to the atmosphere. Lau's face-plate was unmoving—customized, as it was, by a pragmatic combat veteran, it wasted little space with the fine facial-expression servos girls like Barbara put on their Ironforms. But from where Honoka was standing, Lau seemed to be glaring.

At last, the red-robed girl finally turned a corner and disappeared from sight. Lau stood for another long moment, watching, until she finally started to move.

“Hmph. Sorry about that, novitiate,” she said. “Let's get going. We're sending you on an outing in a few days and we've got plenty more training to do, so I need you fully rested.” She beckoned as she strode forward. “Back to your quarters, now. Hurry up.”

>> ☐ TwiceBorn 11/23/14(Sun)15:46:08 No.36353363

[8/11]
The rest of their sojourn to Honoka's room was without incident. Honoka rathered that there was; anything would that broke the uncomfortable silence would have been preferable. Alas, nothing was forthcoming, so she broke the awkward quiet with a question.

“I have to ask...” she said, her voice hesitant, “who was that? And what's a 'Skitarius'? I don't think anyone ever explained what that was.”

There was a noticeable pause, a moment's hesitation in her stride, before Strike Leader Lau replied. When she spoke, her voice sounded as though it had to be drawn out, fettered by reluctance and, from what Honoka could puzzle out, a hint of shame.

“Amal bint Dammam, one of our newer members of the Skitarii. The Skitarii are where we put our...hmm.” Lau paused, considering her words before plunging on. “To put it bluntly, it's where we put our rejects and failures.”

She continued, heedless of Honoka's startled expression. “The...transition process of changing your flesh-and-blood body to an Ironform isn't always successful. It's stressful on the Soul Gem to have it go from controlling an organic body to an artificial one, you see,” she said, tapping her metallic head, “since Soul Gems weren't designed to be stuck inside a metal shell. This is why transferees start off by getting augmentations—replace bits of your body with prosthetics, get the Soul Gem used to controlling artificial body parts. But, even after acclimatizing their bodies with augmetics, not all subjects can get through the Ironform process. Simply put; it's traumatizing. It's just how it is, and we can't figure out a way to make it any more pleasant. Not everyone can withstand what their Soul Gems have to go through to take the final step.”

In the hallway, the bulky form of a Heavy Ironform thudded past. The girl nodded in greetings as it passed them, and Lau nodded back.

[9/11]

“Most make it through and fully join our ranks; out of the rest, some either die or start to Witch Out in the middle of the process—though we have failsafes for so the latter doesn't cause a shitstorm right inside the Olympia.” Here, her tone made a turn for the dark.

“Some, though, either quit midway or don't try at all, and to them we give the option to transfer out. Those who elect to stay—those are the ones we put in our Skitarii division.” She all but ground the last words out. “Most choose not to transfer.”

Honoka nodded slowly, digesting all the information. “I'm sorry if I'm prying, Strike Leader, but, you don't seem...very pleased with the Skitarius division.” As always, the Lau's face was a leaden mask, but here, Honoka could easily hear the contempt dripping from her voice.

“They don't pull their weight,” grumbled Lau. “If they'd held out just a little longer, or weren't such useless cowards, then we wouldn't be babying them like we are now. The Warsmith goes out of her way to make them feel relevant, but, urgh...” She growled and rubbed her head, the metal of her hand and cranium squeaking as they rubbed one another. “All that time and money on the Tactical Dreadnought systems, just so the Skitarii can finally get off their asses and be useful in heavy combat? What a waste. They should have all transferred out when we gave them the chance—our Officio would've been better for it. We don't have time for deadweights in the Fourth.”

The remorseless cold of Lau's rant made Honoka shiver. It was like being back in front of the Stradale sisters again, in front of the harsh scorn the Fourth was infamous for but Honoka had hoped wasn't true. She stole a glance at Lau, and from twitching and clenching fists decided that this matter was no longer worth pursuing.

They at last reached the small cell that was Honoka's quarters, and for this the red-haired Vindicare was grateful. The door hissed as it slid aside, and Honoka hurled herself onto her small cot; despite the stiff fabric, to her worn-out body the cot might as well have been a luxury four-poster bed.

“Home, sweet home,” chuckled Lau as Honoka let out a sigh of relief—both at the opportunity for rest, and at Lau's apparently lighter mood. “Sleep tight, novitiate. You've got more armor training tomorrow. After that, we're sending you off on a mission.”

“About that...” Honoka managed to roll herself onto the side, facing Lau. “I've only been here for, like, a day or two. Isn't it a bit early for me to be sent out on a mission?”

Lau let out a grunt. “You're not wrong, and the mission we're sending you on isn't exactly going to be a milk run. But, the Logic Engines are forecasting a Witch not too far away, and you're not exactly new to the Witch-hunting business, yourself, so we figured you'd be able to handle yourself if we bring you along.” The Strike Leader turned to leave. “In any case, rest up. You'll get a proper briefing later.”

Honoka managed a tired, half-hearted salute. “Yes, ma'am.”

The door hissed shut as the Strike Leader left.

Heady stuff, this Skitarii business.

This was what Honoka thought as she lay on her cot, letting the gentle tides of exhaustion carry her into the deep waters of sleep. This was what Honoka continued to think, as days later she found herself sitting in the passenger compartment of a Fourth Officio gunship, surrounded by all manner of equipment and three girls in Heavy Ironforms. One of them was the blue-and-black bulk of Strike Leader Lau.

>> ☐ TwiceBorn 11/23/14(Sun)15:49:12 No.36353427

[11/11]
Something about the Skitarius division rubbed her the wrong way. No one had told her what it was, despite her hours-long initial tour through every inch of the Olympia. Not Petra, not Barbara, not Fiona. It was as though they didn't exist, and in the oblivion of non-existence they would have remained had Honoka had not stumbled upon Amal by chance.

Come to think of it, mused Honoka as she checked her safety straps, she'd caught glimpses of red robes here and there on previous days. She hadn't thought much of them at the time, since she was too busy being awed by all the wonders the Fourth had to offer, but now she realized she'd seen at least a few red-robed girls here and there, in just about every part of the Olympia.

All of them had kept their heads down. All of them had huddled together with other red-clad girls, either staying out of everyone's way on their own volition, or put there by the rest of the Fourth. Suddenly, Honoka wondered if Amal's behavior was simply shyness, or something else entirely.

Was this the price of failure? thought Honoka. Was this what it meant if you just weren't strong enough to score a slick robot body at the end of a year?

She wasn't completely sure if she wanted to leave the Ninth just yet. But it was sobering to think about, whether the Fourth was the right place for her. Honoka had always assumed she'd be a natural fit into the Machines, but after all the failures in the simulation room, after knowing about the Skitarii, after knowing what fate awaited her if the Fourth found her wanting...

Things no longer seemed so certain.

I don't care if I'm five hours late to the thread, I need to say this
Madoka is to Homura as Mami is to Chiaki
>Saved her from being killed in a witch's barrier along with a friend >was kind to her, showed her the ropes of being a magical girl >light hair, twin tails

This is why homuhomu switched tack to talking about Mami- not necessarily because it's true, but because she knows that Chiaki imprinted on her instead of Madoka like she did

We interrupt the regular schedule of TTC to bring you the following message:

IT'S HAPPENING.

[[1 year and 2 months after Chapter 0]]

X-Chapter 1: The Nightmare Returns.

I was woken up by a scream.

"S-Suzume, it's happening again!" I hurriedly fetched my old, most trusted friend. The Callidus had already noticed as well that something was wrong when I entered her room. "It's just like a year ago!" I tried not to panic and steadied myself.

"I'll warn the others, you go check up on her. Contain her if necessary... and good luck Silke" Suzume's voice was composed and calm even in a time like this. I nodded energetically and left with the same hurry I came. I hoped things would not be as bad as they had been last time... one year ago... a night where everything almost turned to disaster...

I barged into the Eversor's room without any warning. She was on her knees on the ground, grabbing her head with both hands and muttering things too faintly and too fast for it to make any sense. Her presence and magic were highly unstable, flickering and twisting, but it was not Despair I could feel coming from her. It was a frantic sense of urgency, panic.

"Ryuko!" I called out to her, trying to snap her out of it, but I knew it would be hopeless. This already happened before.

"You're not supposed to be there..you can't be there..why are you there? don't. Don't. DON'T. You don't belong there. It'll hurt you. It'll stalk you. It'll haunt you. Don't be there.. why are you there? you shouldn't be there..."

I knew it was useless because I tried and tried one year ago, but I couldn't get through her when was in this state. Ryuko had tamer episodes of insanity where physical contact or a sharp tone could be enough to snap her back to reality, but as she was now I had no other choice than to try to knock the tainted Eversor out. I lowered the intensity of my suit and let the anti-magic do its dirty business, focusing it at her.

Take it easy!

She screamed again; it was an unnatural, disturbing scream like that of a creature or monster. I bit my lower lip slightly as I could feel all the pain and fright in that voice; as I could read it on her face. She had always been hiding sorrows and suffering, tried at she might to hide it, but this was something more. It was something I couldn't bear to look at for too long. It's at times like this that I was glad for my helmet; It hid my tears and allowed me to keep a professional look even if behind it I was wavering. All I ever wanted was to help people and make them happy, so why did I have to end up surrounded by such sorrows?

"I won't let you..I won't let you..I.. I'll come for you.. don't.. don't die..not there..don't let it get to you..don't let it overtake you.. you've had enough.. you don't need this.. you don't deserve this.."

Her energy was going out of control. It was happening again. Just like last time. +Suzume! It's no good! I'll have to use extreme measures.+ I immediately pulsed with urgency, the response coming instantly. +Understood.+

I had no choice, I lowered the settings of my Suit even further and blasted Ryuko again. This time she flinched and leaned forward, letting out a large amount of blood from her mouth. It had always been blood for her; some kind of twisted, darkened foul blood I didn't like to see. I'd almost feel better if it was just vomit like everyone else...

"Please come back to your senses!" I desperately pleaded, only to be met by a deathly glare that cut my breath; blood still coating her lips. "Don't try to stop me! This time I'll.. this time I'll make it in time! I won't allow anything like that to happen again!"

>> ☐ Zweihart 11/23/14(Sun)15:55:15 No.36353551

She never told us what she saw or did the last time she left. It was the one thing she never opened up to us about even after all this time, so I had no clue what she was talking about. It was pointless however, even though she spat her words without compromise, I could tell there was a plea within; a begged request. I couldn't in my soul and conscience find it inside me to blast her a third time. I couldn't try to stop her when it looked like everything she ever cared about was on the verge of being destroyed irremediably. I let her go.

A rip tore itself into the fabric of reality, not all too unlike what a Barrier did, but localized onto a small area rather than over a wide one. I could feel all sorts of pain and negative emotions coming from the scar-like maelstrom of shifting colors that opened behind the tainted Eversor. It screamed of Witches and hopelessness. In just a second she turned around and leaped inside the rip which seemed to detonate, but damaged nothing and all traces of it were gone by the time the explosion of light receded.

I took a deep breath. The world around me shifted and morphed to become an horrible procession of death and malevolence. I didn't know Its name, but I have known of Its existence for a while now and it wasn't the first time I come here. I also know at my core it won't be the last. This place... this nameless Hell... I have conflicting feelings about it.

I hate this place. It has come to represent one of my greatest failures; one I will never forgive myself for. I should have been here for her, but I wasn't. I was lost and I couldn't reach her. The memory stings just as badly now than it did back then. I won't fail you again.

>> ☐ Zweihart 11/23/14(Sun)15:56:22 No.36353581

But I also love this place, and I don't exactly know why. I know it's extremely unhealthy for me to be here, but I can't help but feel strangely at home. It's just comfortable... somewhat, in ways I can't even begin to explain. My magic seems immensely easier to cast; as if there is no strain whatsoever to my Soul anymore so long as I'm here. It feels... warm.

But I can't let those thoughts slow me down.

My legs carried me like wings as I roamed through this realm of hell with great speed. As long as I was there... it was as if I could always go all out, as if I could keep going and not lose any energy. So I took advantage of it and began the search in earnest. No compromises, no holding back, and, in the end I hope, no regrets.

No matter how fast I was and how well I may have known some parts of this shifting hellscape, it was impossible to avoid the Witches fully, or the natural hazards for that matter. Or maybe it was just me who sucked at stealth? no matter. This was a desperate time so I resorted to desperate measures. I reached into my inventory and took the Satrophine container, slowing down just a little bit to focus on undoing the magical seal that kept the thing shut. It was no true challenge as I was the one who sealed it in the first place, so I made short work of it.

I hesitated for a split second, painfully aware of how powerful the drug was, but I had little choice. If I wanted to carve my way here I would need every little bit of strength I could muster. The Witches were just too strong to be dealt with in any other way. I swallowed a dose and put the container back in my Inventory.

>> ☐ Zweihart 11/23/14(Sun)15:57:26 No.36353607

The effect was immediate, and immediately daunting. I never knew a drug as mercilessly addictive as this one. Power immediately surged through my entire body and my mind sharpened to impossible levels for a time. It was the kind of power you could get drunk off with just the smallest taste of, but I've seen this drug entirely consume those who fall to its thrall. Because of that I had always remained wary of it, despite how... admittedly fucking incredible it felt to be on. That feeling, combined with what I said earlier about this ethereal realm's... I had to focus to not lose myself in it.

"Well~Well, what do we have here?"

I stopped and froze. This voice. Why did it have to be this voice? Why now of all times?

"You've been naughty, doing something like that so early... it's like you actually -wanted- it." That impossibly silky voice made my guts twist. I could just hear her licking her lips behind me.

"Fuck. Off. I have no time for you right now."

"How rude, and here I came just to see how you were doing."

She's lying. All she can say is lies. "Don't give me that crap, you're trying to slow me down so I end up failing and--" I tensed, feeling a long, soft tongue on the back of my neck. I shivered and resumed running again, but the voice didn't let go of me. Even when my body was pushed up way past speeds it had little right to reach, this bitch was still keeping up with me. She always kept up.

"I might be~ but you're still being rude, refusing to look at me again... it's almost like you don't like my form..." the impostor managed to sound genuinely saddened, but I didn't buy it, I knew better. I refused to look at her. I refused to acknowledge her. "And now the silent treatment again... you really need to fix that attitude of yours, else you'll... well, no, that's a given~" she giggled.

"SHUT UP." I roared. I focused on the endless ruins around me and kept to whatever high grounds I could. At the moment I found myself to be overseeing a frozen parody of an once-city. steel was covered in frost and icicles of dark crystal that rose and fell like ice. It snowed as well. It could almost look like a scene from a holiday... if it hadn't been from the fact that it snowed powdered bones. Human bones I'd be willing to bet.

"No matter how much you deny it, you know inside you I'm right; I'll -always- be right~" Her voice was still silky, but turned as cold as the dead city around me. "Go ahead and check it, you've gotten sooo bad already~" I grunted lightly and humored her , slowing again just a little to check on my Soul Gem. Like she said it had already darkened way past what I would have liked and I was still just starting with my search. This realm of death and forgotten ends was more vast than could be comprehended. Damn Bitch was right.

"Seeee?~" The Witch whispered in my ear and I barely resisted the temptation to elbow her smug face so hard it'd break the skull. "I don't see anything."I grumbled as I lied. "Don't. Lie." she immediately scolded me with a tone of contempt. "You can't lie to me and you know it." I don't know nothin' about this shit.

"I am you."

I couldn't resist, I stopped, turned around and swiped at her face with my left claw. She dodged, unfortunately. She always dodges, goddamn bitch. Why can't you just BLEED for me once in a while!?

She was... much more beautiful than I ever was. Forget about Eldritchian horrors that look like nothing, she was... different. Fully human looking save for the limbs, she had flawless, pristine snow white skin and traits, with matching flowing white hair that almost reached the ground, but never quite. Her claws were longer than mines and reached back into some sort of jet black armor covering her fore-arms and a bit past the elbows, almost to the shoulder but falling short by about 10 centimeters and showing off her bare shoulders. Her legs were the same and her snow-skinned thighs showed a little between the metal and her short black sleeveless dress.

"I will never become you, how many times do I have to tell you that?" She just smiled and shook her head lightly, as if looking at a child being cutely unreasonable. Fuck I hate her; I hate her the most.

"Repeat it all you want, pointless denial doesn't reach me." I twitched at that, tempted to strike at her again. "You know you can't escape your fate." she reached closer, putting her face just a centimeter away from mine. "You know it better than anyone, don't you?" I know it. "There will never be any rest for you." I know that as well. "You will fall, and when you do, I will laugh."

"I know I won't be able to have a peaceful death anymore, but see, I've got a really simple solution that just might work." I smirked and she stared back.

"Oh really? What would that be?" she asked and I laughed, dryly.

"Don't. Die." I replied and she laughed, mockingly.

"That's impossible. You might as well just give in already."

I rolled my eye and opened my mouth to give some sort of witty retort, but I was silenced.

Strawberries and white chocolate. She tasted like strawberries and white chocolate...

I remained shocked for a second or two but quickly enough freed myself and jumped back, the taste lingering in my mouth with the feeling of that tongue she stole. If looks could kill, my glare would have murdered her thrice over. Unfortunately, she was still alive and smiling. I checked my Soul Gem immediately, looking for anything she might have done to me, but it didn't seem like that was the case.

"You've always been so easy to tease, but no, I didn't do anything to you... at least nothing you haven't already done to yourself. You know what you should really look out for?" she tilted her head lightly and smiled.

"I don't want to know." I flatly responded. She wasn't going to listen to me, but whatever.

"That drug of yours Do you want to know what it's really made of?"

"No" I responded again. Just the same, it was pointless again.

"What if I told you it's actually made of... " she paused for a moment, as if looking for words. "From shattered hopes and despair ~" Her smile widened and I blinked, taking a moment to try and understand the implied imagery.

"...That's impossible, there's no way what you're implying could be done."

She shrugged and shook her head again with that pseudo-disappointed expression. I just stopped paying attention to her and resumed my search, running again. She kept up, annoyingly enough. "Have I ever lied to you?~" I grit my teeth and bit back the urge to try to claw her again.

"When you claimed to be me."

she sighed lightly. "Now you're just contradicting yourself, but alright, I've bothered you enough. You'll never make it in time now.~"

"ETEEERNAAAA"

My claws fell onto empty air, her presence gone.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/29/14(Sat)09:05:16 No.36463019 Archived

Really, really fucked, you tell your best friend as you look down on the golden katana strapped to your waist, its sword guard glinting ominously in the dim light of the room. Fucked enough that you're going to use it as little as possible in this operation.

...Or ever, you add as you glancing back at the biological wreckage you've reduced Kyoko's would-be murderers into - the scent of their torn-open corpses mixing with the bestial stink of bloodied fur and goat spit. Creating a wholly different stench of death that'll no doubt take some time to get used to, but nothing you can't easily ignore.

You shake your head again as you turn away from the carnage you've created. Jesus. You don't even remember cutting them apart. You barely even remember hacking through Kyoko's barricade, and you've heard about it being one of the more impenetrable ones in the Ninth, as far as magically-summoned ones went. It was something tough enough to hold a monster like Kharn back, during those rare moments when she was in the mood for something other than skirt-chasing and skull-taking.

>>36463019

"...That so?" You look up to see Kyoko looking down at Muramasa as well - and you blink to see her face creased with worry, a disturbing expression to see on someone like your usually-cheerful, affable best friend. When she looks up at you, it's with clear, arresting concern.

"Well, I mean, I'm really glad you saved my bacon back there, Murderface, but...is it really okay for you to be using something like that?" She gestures towards your Desert Eagle. "That gun seems cool enough with you, and those punchy things you used back at the concert, those were pretty awesome. Kharn's giant axe-things, Sayaka told me you seemed to be having fun with them more than anythin' else. But with you using that..." Kyoko shakes her head. "...it kinda feels like something really bad is gonna happen, you know?"

Something bad? Like what, being inside a huge world-encompassing barrier that's literally hell? You force a smile here, hoping to ease her concern some with humor. That always works with Kyoko, right?

"Worse.A whole LOT worse." Kyoko replies, her eye still riveted to the sword strapped to your hip, as if seeing something more than just the Golden Weapon there. A moment later, and she shakes her head again, her large ponytail flapping violently with her movement.

"Aahhh, whatever! You're smarter'n me, Murderface, and if you're using that thing, then that means it's okay, right?" A determined look sets on her face as she tears her gaze away from Muramasa. "I just gotta make sure you don't have another reason to use it unless you really have to, an' everything'll be peachy."

Tucking her spear under her armpit, your best friend makes a show of waking herself up, slapping her cheeks with both hands. Reciting a mantra to herself between every double-slap.

"Gotta be alert. Gotta be sharp. Gotta be MAXIMUM!"

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 11/29/14(Sat)09:07:49 No.36463046

>>36463036

The last part of her mantra is yelled out, and you step back as your best friend suddenly takes her spear in a dizzyingly-quick series of thrusts and feints, before spinning it into a golden-plated rotor-blur. The impromptu display ending with a loud crash of splitting concrete as the spear is stabbed, point-first, into the floor.

"Right, what's the plan, Murderface?" She turns towards you, an eager light shining in her one crimson eye. "How are we gonna find Wendy?"

How do you proceed?

It's all irrelevant now since the die is cast...

but we don't need the Muramasa to deal with any old problem here. For the most part we can probably get by fine with the Deagle.

But the longer we're in the Akashic Realm, the more corruption is likely to be a problem and the danger of using the Muramasa increases.

Homucifer's actions are evil because she knows the outcome of her actions.
Chiaki takes actions that Homucifer wouldn't because she does NOT know.

Isn't it a little too convenient that The Transcendent One is more or less confirming our shadowruns? For the longest time, people have been saying that Mami will betray us, and then suddenly this slut says that is actually going to happen. And THEN, just to fuck with us, she starts saying green hair is the danger, which is another thing frequently mentioned in the threads. Something Chiaki never thought about at all. And finally, she wanted to talk and not fight, something we've been in the habit of doing.

You'll search every floor together, you tell Kyoko, just as you pull your Golden Desert Eagle from its holster on your side. Buddy system. You'll watch her back and she'll watch yours. It'll be slower than splitting up, but at least it'll prevent either one of you from being ambushed.

"Sounds good to me," Kyoko grins, tugging the blade of her spear from the floor with barely any effort at all. "I'm taking point, you go and cover my rear, alright, Murderface?"

You frown here, and shake your head. No, you're taking point. First in and last out, remember? You appreciate her being worried about you and Muramasa, sure, but for fuck's sake, you're not some fucking VIP that needs to hide behind a security detail. You--

"Actually, I'm pretty sure you are, Murderface," your best friend chuckles, before gesturing to your hat - or rather, lack of hat, as you've stashed your Warmaster Cap away in your inventory just before teleportation. "You're my Warmaster! Hat or no hat, that's the rule. Eversors are expendable, ranking officers aren't. 'Sides, you're still a Vindicare, ain'tcha? I'll take care of the stuff from the front. You just chill behind me and shoot anything else that I can't kill."

It's here that her smile turns apologetic. "C'mon, Murderface. I just wanna make sure you get out of this shit safe, yeah?"

...Fine. Fine, whatever. So long as she remembers to save you some hostiles to kill.

Christ, if you knew that being Warmaster was going to involve being coddled like this--

"Yeah, yeah, you'd have turned it down flat. But then again, who'd you have wanted to be Warmaster instead?" Kyoko chuckles as the two of you make your way out of the supply room, weapons at the ready. "Mami doesn't want it, Karasawa just wants to stay in and eat ice cream all day...I guess there's Sayaka-chan, but she doesn't want to be Warmaster either. She just wants to be the best Eversor there is, come to that."

You narrow your eyes as you quickly check your corners, glaring down your Desert Eagle's sights. Finding the immediate vicinity clear - completely absent of the goat demons that had nearly taken your best friend's head off earlier - you shake your head.

...You're not sure who could take your place, then. Rea, maybe? Or...

You blink as a vision of Kyoko wearing your greatcoat and Warmaster cap suddenly comes unbidden in your mind. Grinning as she lounges back on the throne, an austere Sayaka by her side. And an impossibly-large banquet of food in front of her.

Hah, no. The Officio'll be bankrupt in a month on food expenses alone. You'd rather have no one else beside you during a fight, but for her to lead, well...

"Huh? What's so funny?" Kyoko blinks as she looks back at you, lowering the gun muzzle of her spear. "What're you sniggering about, Murderface? Come on, let me in on it!"

You shake your head, suppressing your grin, forcing your face back into its usual emotionless mask. Just something stupid that you remembered, nothing she needs to know, you lie.

"Really?" The red-haired Eversor blinks at you again, before shrugging. "Well, if ya say so." She turns back to the task at hand, stalking forward in a faster pace - one that you easily keep up with, surprisingly enough. "Come on, let's find Wendy!"

And so the search for your American ex begins, with Kyoko leading at the front and you covering her from the rear as the both of you tear through corridors and rooms. It's a combo that works surprisingly well, despite the both of you coming from completely opposing disciplines as Magical Girls. In almost no time at all - not counting the quick, violent altercations where the both of you came upon the building's demonic inhabitants in lurching patrol - you clear four of the twelve floors between you and Mami.

"HAHAHA! GET SOME! GET SOME!" Kyoko had cackled during a particularly heated encounter, stabbing her spear clean through three bipedal goat demons at once, the blade punching clean through their torsos in a liquid crunch. You could only watch in mounting amazement and horror as she heaved and lifted the laden spear over her head, the muscles in her arms and shoulders bunching - before smashing the weapon floorwards, pulping the impaled trio in an explosion of gore.

"ANYONE WHO RUNS IS A GOAT-DILDO. ANYONE WHO STANDS STILL AND TAKES IT IS A WELL-DISCIPLINED GOAT-DILDO!"

...Then again, Kyoko have always worked well with everyone, including Culexus. She'd always managed to adapt no matter who she was stuck with, and never ordered anyone under her charge to do anything that she wasn't prepared to do - or in most cases, already doing herself.

Maybe...maybe that'd make her a good Warmaster, you find yourself thinking as you reload your Desert Eagle, letting the empty magazine clatter to the floor and replacing it with a fresh one from your Shield. She'd certainly make a better one than you - the watch-wearing dildo who settles in-team disputes with a shot to the kneecap.

"Actually, no, I won't," Kyoko grins, breaking the silence as the both of you reach the eighth floor of the building. You blink at her, and she taps her temple with a knuckle. "C'mon, Murderface! You're doin' great as Warmaster, seriously! And for the record, I don't want to be promoted or anythin' like that. I'm happy where I am."

...But what about being a Rank Leader? Doesn't she want that?

"Yeah? Maybe." The red-haired Eversor shrugs. "But man, I'm happy with where I am. So long as I get ta go on assignments like these, train the newbies an' help out like the rest, I'm cool." It's here that she pokes your cheek with a finger.

"So if you're lookin' to dump that paperwork an' responsibility on someone, then you'll have to look somplace else, Murderface! You're not gonna put that evil on me, hah!"

You smirk here, before shaking your head. Guess you're stuck being Warmaster, then?

"Yep! Forever times infinity! I--" It's here, then, that Kyoko's one eye widens - and she whirls towards the dark gloom of the unlit floor. At the same time, a pulsed thought stabs its way into your brain, made bladed and harsh with urgency.

+ RED CULEXUS, SEMPAI + It's Midori, her pulse almost migraine-loud. + CAREFUL THE RED CULEXUS IS NEARBY +

"She's here!" Kyoko roars, and the air seems to sizzle around your best friend, like the way air wavers in a hot day. She makes to charge forward. "Murderface, come on! Let's go! This fucker's gonna pay for what she did to Yuma--"

As if to entice you further, you hear someone cursing loudly in English, pain clear in their snarled threats. Interspersed with the sound of someone chuckling through vox-speakers.

...Wendy. Christ, that's why she's missing! She went off to look for the fucking Red Culexus!

I'm just seriously beginning to think that, while in the Akashic realm, we just got a serious power boost.

It doesn't bring them down to our level, it elevates us back to where we should be... we've just forgotten how to use this place properly.

It's a blessing and a curse. We get to be a normal person again, but the consequence of that is we're constrained by normal, human thinking.

"Come ON, Murderface! What're ya waitin' for?!" Kyoko growls, her one eye flashing. "We gotta take the initiative! Charge in, attack her head on, don't give her the chance for her optics to lock on and blast us with puke juice!" She shoves her bloodied spear forward, point-first. "One clean thrust through her visor, bam! One dead Culexus!"

You shake your head here. She's got Wendy, you reason. You've got to do this carefully, instead of just charging in and hoping for the best.

Your best friend's one eye goggles at you. "She's got Wendy, and you still want to take this all methodical and shit?" She shakes her head, frowning. "Jeez, Murderface, I knew you were turnin' into a watch-wearing dildo, but I didn't know it was THIS BAD!"

You open your mouth to spit back a retort, but you stop yourself just in time - this is Kyoko, after all. Your best buddy, remember?

So you force a smile and shake your head. It's worse, you tell the red-haired Eversor. The watch-wearing dildoness has seeped into you deeper than anyone had ever thought.

"Damn right! If there ever was a dildo that deserved to wear a watch, it's--"

But you also want to make sure Kyoko makes it out alive from this operation, too.

Kyoko glares at you from her one good eye, before finally nodding, a rueful smile curling her lips as she realizes that you've used her own words against her. "W-well, er...yeah, sure, Murderface. I don't like it, but I'll follow your lead." She takes in a deep breath, holding it in for a couple of seconds before letting it out in a sigh. Willing herself to be calm, obviously straining against Eversor-trained instincts. "Right, how do you wanna do this?"

[]Present yourself as bait to the Culexus while Kyoko sneaks into a flanking position, in the shadows.
[]Have Kyoko charge in yelling while you sneak around and give her overwatch.
[]Other.

There's the Madoka connection (pinky, godaka and malal), plus IIRC Mami found Chiaki because the Culexus knew where and when she'd be arriving.

For me the question isn't who, or how. It's why. Got theories, but they all depend on knowing what's going on in pinky's head.

You tell her your plan, and Kyoko's one eye goes wide. "...Wait, you're going in there as bait? On your own, while I flank 'em in the shadows?" She shakes her head. "Alright, Murderface, I know I go around yellin' MAXIMUM and everythin', but it's more of an encouragement to live life to the fullest, rather than an advocacy for doing crazy suicidal shit like this!"

What? You frown at your best friend, before shaking her head. Of course it's not suicidal. Crazy, maybe, but not suicidal. The both of you know that the Culexus is after you - you ARE Oriko's main objective, after all - and she'll be jumping on the chance to engage you one-on-one.

"Right, but what if she does the whole Culexus thing on ya? What then?"

You're banking on that, you tell your best friend patiently. If the Culexus does take you down, she'll at least be open for Kyoko to sneak in and take her out. This way, even if one of you gets put out of commission, the other can finish the job.

"...Man, I dunno. It sounds a bit--" Kyoko begins, but you cut her off by stepping from the safety of the stairwell and into the dimly-lit depths of the eight floor. "Gah, Murderface...! This is stupid! Midori'll kill me!"

You'll be counting on her, you tell her from over your shoulder, your footsteps echoing clearly across the tiled floor. Making sure to announce your presence loudly and clearly, so that even a blind and deaf Eversor would be able to track you.

A whispered curse, and then a rustle of cloth - and you turn back briefly to see that Kyoko's disappeared from the stairwell, spear and all, as if she had never been there in the first place.

You smile at this, and continue your progress forward, gun held low in front of you. One hand around the grip, the other supporting it from below. Tensed to be raised and shot at a moment's notice in case something else other than the Red Culexus tried to ambush you from the darkness.

+Stupidest idea ever, Murderface.+ Your best friend pulses at you from somewhere, her irritation clear. +We should've charged in when we had the chance. +

+ NOW who's being the dildo? + You pulse this back, and the reply you get is more irritation - but also a silent, grudging capitulation. You find yourself savoring the rare treat of actually winning an argument, a smile curling your lips - but it quickly turns into your usual frown as you step into something...wet. Blood? No, water. Rainwater.

...Rainwater? What? Here inside a building? Even if this is the Akashic Warp, for it to rain inside a fucking building--

"Smart of you to hide your Soul Gem in here somewhere." The chuckling vox-corrupted voice from earlier barks harshly from somewhere in front of you. "Masterful touch, that. And I do have to commend you for countering my witchfire in such a manner. A lot of people have tried many things, but inducing precipitation indoors? That was unexpected." Another chuckle. "You're something else, Wendy Cooldown. I'm going to regret killing you."

"Not as much as you'll regret fucking around and not finishing me off, fuckface," You hear Wendy snarl, before coughing wetly. "Come on and finish it. Otherwise, I'm...going to FUCK your skull wide open, and then use your helmet for a fucking urinal!"

"Charming." The Culexus laughs. "And while I'm severely tempted, I'll wait for the Ninth Warmaster to come to your rescue before killing you, Cooldown. She's nearby, after all."

"Don't...don't fuck around," Wendy gasps in pain. "Kong wouldn't--gnnhh! FUCK!"

"I would advise from speaking or moving, Cooldown. Your injuries are grievous. Don't worry, though - Miss Matsuda will be here any moment now."

You shake your head, before stepping boldly forward. From the sound of it, she'd hurt Wendy bad enough that she's making threats. Not a good sign, as you remember your ex being more direct when it comes to threatening people - meaning that she carries them out instead of just spitting them at people's faces. The Culexus' words, despite her voice clearly ravaged by the vox, also carried with them a tone of confidence - confidence borne of having your enemy lying broken at your feet, spiced with the knowledge that their life now rested upon your hands, to be done as you see fit.

And as you finally come upon them - the tableau rising from the darkness at your approach - you see that your worst suspicions are true.

Wendy is in...a bad way. Her left arm burned into a smoking, charred stump by her elbow, her right hand a twisted, blackened thing, fingers permanently fused and curled around her knife. Most of her costume is burned away, too, with the flesh underneath also charred. A wet umbrella, broken in half and melted to the floor, lies smoking at her feet.

And standing over her is the Red Culexus. Just like how you saw her back at the seeing with Haruka. And just like her moniker, her entire form is crimson - from the leather of her hardsuit to the snarling demon face sculpted over her helmet's visor. And in her hands is a simple, utilitarian fireman's axe, the splitting head wrapped in barbed wire.

"And here she is, Cooldown. Didn't I say Miss Matsuda would be coming to your rescue?" The demon-faced Anima Speculum turns towards you, before bowing curtly. "Greetings, Warmaster. Welcome to the former headquarters of the Damned Third Officio. On behalf of the Prophet, Miss Oriko, I apologize for the...mess."

She straightens up, her smile audible in her vox-corrupted voice as she gestures to your surroundings. "If you'd only sent advance word of your arrival, then maybe we could've tidied up a bit." The Culexus looks down at her chestplate, where you can see what looks like a rather large vomit stain in the red leather, the substantial chunk portion of it already crusting over. "I certainly would've made myself more presentable, at least." She adds, wistful.

You shake your head, ignoring her baiting words, and look towards Wendy. ...Christ, she's fucked up worse than anyone you'd ever seen. How is--

"Cooldown is stable for the moment, Miss Matsuda, don't concern yourself with her right now." The Red Culexus holds up a gloved hand. "You should be worrying about yourself right this moment, as I am tasked by the Prophet to bring your heads and soul gems to her."

There's a brief...tensing in the air, and crimson fire suddenly bathes the axe in her grip. "And I will endeavor to do so, unless you'd like to surrender, of course. In which case all measures will be taken to ensure your detainment - and summary execution - is comfortable and humane."

"Don't just stand there like a dildo, Kong," Wendy snarls from her place in the floor. "For fuck's sake, shoot her! KILL HER!"

"You are Eight Officio nobility incarnate, Cooldown." The Culexus remarks with another chuckle.

"FUCK YOU!"

How do you react?

You keep your Desert Eagle trained at the Culexus. There's...something strange with this one. Something that sets you off, besides the usual faint buzz that all other Magical Girls get in their heads whenever a battle-ready Culexus is nearby. You feel like you should know who she is, but at the same time, something about her repulses you to the point that the temptation to empty your magazine at her face is nothing short of overpowering.

You shake your head. Well, whatever it is, you'll have to try and keep her talking. More time to get Kyoko in a better killing position, and maybe get to know about what's waiting for you up top, besides the Prophet. Because you're damn sure it's not going to be just her waiting for you there.

"You're not from the Third Officio, are you?" You ask her, attempting keeping the snarl from your voice, but without much success. "Who are you? Who's your Incubator?"

The Culexus lifts her armored shoulders in a shrug. "Who knows, really? I'm not sure anymore, Warmaster Matsuda. Living in the hell behind reality can wreak havoc on your memory, moreso if you're a Culexus. All I know and care about is that I fight under the Prophet's banner, Miss Matsuda. No more and no less."

She chuckles. "Does it really matter, though, in the grand scheme of things? Does knowledge of who I am or who cursed me into this shell change anything? Because I am still going to kill you and your former lover here, Miss Matsuda."

The red Culexus steps forward, her brightly-burning axe gripped in both gloved fists. Also revealing to you, in this distance, the marks of her encounter with Wendy - knife-inflicted rents here in there in her hardsuit, and hairline cracks all over the visor where the sculpted demon face met plexiglass visor. ...Christ, Wendy took a beating all right, but fuck if she didn't try her level best to shank this bitch to death.

"But please don't worry. I will treat your remains and those of your colleagues with the respect due to them." The Culexus nods, more to herself than to you. "Shall we?"

Heh. She doesn't fuck around at all, huh? Right to the point? That's kind of refreshing, actually.

She cocks her head to the side, seemingly puzzled. "I've always believed in refraining from dragging this kind of thing on for too long. I apologize if that wasn't what you were expecting, Warmaster Matsuda."

You shake your head, allowing a rueful smile to curl your lips. Well, she can't blame you for trying, at least--

+ In position, Murderface! Good to go! +

And there it is. The pulse you'd been waiting for. A gasping, wheezing voice sent directly to your brain, made breathless by effort, but clear and ready. Eager. Hungry.

How do you respond?

This leads us to the question, similiar to "does regeneration go that far".

When a meguca loses a body completely, is the new body a virgin? Does the venenum in charge of making a new one like inspect the corpse to find out how to make it?

This could lead to a variety of misunderstandings.

The way I see it, it's probably recovered to the last moment it was still complete/alive. The further back you'd have to go in time to see what the body looked like, the more taxing it becomes, so it's easier to use latest available information. That goes for the "usual" Soul Gem powered / Venenum assisted regeneration at least.
Wendy died for good, Soul Gem shattered and all and was brought back by Pinky / Blessed Lady, so it probably works differently in her case, might be recovered to the point she contracted or some such.
And then there's Chief Director Madaraki, who can make you grow back not only things you never had, but even things you never even knew could exist in the first place.

..:: AUREA VENEN || PART 4 || DEMENS II ::..

I turned to look over at Cynn, who had been leaning against the wall and enjoying the little show I put on, as the stab wound in my side healed in seconds. She had gotten used to it by now, all the killing and such, though she didn't really seek to participate in it herself. Oh well, fufu, her loss. My expression alone was probably more than enough to say everything. She gave me a nod, her way of silently telling me to go have fun -- to continue the feast. Oh, trust me, I will.

I turned back towards the dark hallway, licking my lips as my tails began to wave near my sides more energetically. They had more weight to them now, due to the longer length of the needles, though I could still move them with minimal effort. My pulse had already been starting to quicken ever since I killed the first girl -- not to mention the flood of energy I was currently drawing from her soul gem, the color in it likely already darkening. You could say it was sort of like I had flipped an internal switch, going into a sort of 'predator' mode the moment it was turned on. The hunt begins.

The adjacent room on the right side of the hall was next. It was only natural, since the rest of them were further away. The faint chatting made it exorbitantly clear that none of them had heard any struggles from the first kill, further evidence that this was one of the most naive squads I could ever hope to meet. Too easy. I didn't even bother to conceal my footsteps, casually walking towards the entryway, letting the tips of the long needles drag against whatever nearby surface they came across. This was really too easy, screw being sneaky, it's time for some /fun/ -- added bonus if I could scare the shit out of them too.

With a few metallic clanks, I strode through the doorframe, immediately sighting two magical girls towards the center of the room. Judging by their state of dress and entangled positioning, I had just intruded on their private touchy-feely times. At least, it sure wasn't just a vigorous game of twister. What the fuck is wrong with this squad, do they seriously not understand where they are? Do they seriously have this much audacity? This much cluelessness? This was just too much, I couldn't help but burst out laughing. That alone was likely enough to cause more bladder control problems, as both girls stared wide-eyed at me. I couldn't stop, even while stepping towards them, it was hard to even breathe. This shit was just too funny, these stupid girls were stuck in the middle of a deathzone, and the first thing they thought to do on duty was sit down and fuck each other in a dark abandoned building.

It wasn't until I was close enough to touch them that they started to scream. My right hand quickly shot down, wrapping the long and sharp fingers around the nearest girl's neck and easily lifting her off the ground. Her hands began to claw at mine, coughing and sputtering as her airflow was blocked off. My grin probably widened even more than it already was capable of, my crimson eyes bearing down on the other girl who had managed to pull out a rifle in her tremorous hands. By the time she even thought to fire a shot, it was too late. The spear-like needles of my tails lanced into her dominant arm, causing her rifle to fire at the wall behind me. How disappointing, this girl isn't cute at all. I'll just have to turn her into a pincushion, surely then she'll be useful. Pierce, gouge, stab, tear -- just like that, yes.

There was something about killing that never got old. That being said, though, it wasn't the only way to have fun with cute girls -- I knew that all too well already. For example, if you turn them into something more than just a bag of meat. Thus, this other girl's fate had been determined. I let her drop from my grip, planting my foot down on top of her, before reaching into my inventory. You know, it's times like these I love being a Venenum, as I retrieved a syringe full of dark purple liquid. I knew it wouldn't be long before the other girls would come to investigate the commotion, of course, so it was only obvious I had to leave them something to find. A gift, if you will.

"Be a good girl and take your medicine~" My strangely shaped leg hammered down into the center of the girl's back, causing her to sputter. I bent down to jab the syringe into her neck and injected her with the full dosage, then already proceeded to wander away. It didn't take long before her body started to spasm, the drug already kicking in. 'Mak-num' was a /special/ blend I learned from Mother's experiments. I headed over to what was left of her fuckbuddy, snatching up the bangle from the twisted and bloody wrist. Too easy. As predicted, I heard footsteps quickly approaching the room, and made for the comfy looking chair near the corner of the room. I probably had a permanent grin on my face as I spun the bangle around my finger. This was gonna be good.

"What the fuck is going on in here!?" A group of three ran in, led by what I presume to have been the squad leader, all of them carrying the floating lights with them. They screeched to a halt upon seeing the two mostly nude bodies on the floor, one far more mangled than the other. The timing couldn't have been any better, as the girl I had drugged began to stir, causing the girls to rush over to her. Ahh, the anticipation, these idiots had no idea.

"Hey, Alexis, what the hell happened!?" One girl shook her, trying to wake her upon realizing she was still alive. The naked girl struggled to stand, a low groan vibrating from her throat, and two of the girls moved to support her.

"Snap out of it you dumb bitch! What happened to Kati?" The squad leader slapped Alexis's face a couple of times, her short fuse having been lit already.

"....Ku...ku...ku..."

The two girls flanking Alexis suddenly went flying, one crashing into the wall, the other toppling a trash bin next to the desk I sat at. Alexis's veins along her neck and arms had turned a quite visible purple as her body straightened in a flaccid sort of way, as if she was being supported by puppetstrings.

I clapped both hands together, a solid clang of metal, causing the squad leader to direct her light towards where I sat in mostly darkness. I let out a bit of a giggle, the bangle in my grasp turning into its normal soulgem form at my will. The leader's eyes seemed to widen slightly upon seeing it.

"Who the fuck are you!? Why do you have Kati's soul gem!?" Her face contorted into an expression of anger -- which actually made her look pretty cute -- as two small handguns appeared in her grasp.

"Hmm, I dunno~ Fufu~ Surely you can guess~?" Ahh, no good... The way she's looking at me with so much hatred, it's starting to make me...

"Give it back, you bitch!" She whipped both guns upwards, pointing them straight at me. She probably would have shot me too, if it wasn't for the bright red uniform suddenly fluttering in between us. One of my tails was constricted around the waist of the girl that had landed near me, now holding her up like a meatshield, blocking her view. What will you do, girlie? Will you shoot through your own squad mate to try to attack me?

"Grrrr.... god damnit!" She shouted, and 'Alexis' cackled, suddenly grabbing hold of the leader and biting her shoulder. As expected, this startled her, causing her to pull a trigger. The girl in my grasp flinched with a loud yelp as the bullet ricocheted off of the metal. Barely even left a mark, is she even trying? With those puny things? I sighed and shook my head, the blue soulgem turning into another ring that I immediately placed on one of my fingers. The moment the gem began to glow brightly, another surge hit my body, causing me to shudder. I literally felt like I was melting and on fire at the same time, it felt so good -- almost better than an orgasm kind of good. With the addition of this burst of energy, my tail ends underwent another morph, a long gun barrel now jutting out parallel to the rapier-esque needles.

"Weak, so weak -- let me show you how it's done!"

<BANG> With a much louder report, the squad leader's right leg burst into a fine red mist, and she collapsed to the ground in a cry of pain. /That/'s how it's fucking done. The girl covered in purple veins once known as 'Alexis' pulled out her large knife -- likely her magical weapon -- and started to repeatedly stab the downed magical girl, the sound of screams, laughter, and lacerations echoing throughout the room.

I rose from the rather comfy swivel chair, constricting the blond girl in my appendage's grasp. She began to to use her long sword to bash at the segmented tail in a panic, to no avail. Walking past the slaughter in the center of the room -- giving 'Alexis' a little pat on the head on the way -- I stopped in front of the remaining girl who was slumped against the wall. She was still alive, but her spine had likely lost in a durability competition against the wall, most of the light from her eyes gone now. Well damn, that's unfortunate, one less I get to play with. Ah well, I shrugged, my free tail placing its gun barrel against the girl's forehead. Another loud gunshot, and there wasn't much left of her head, the immediate surroundings now thoroughly plastered in red and bits of pink. This elicited another loud scream from the blondie, who on closer inspection I decided to save for last. She even had these adorable little twintails and a nice round butt, the kind of girl that was cute enough to avoid killing. I was beginning to reach my limit anyways, so what better timing.

I slammed the blond girl down onto the nearby table, probably cracking it in several places. Meanwhile, the squad leader had stopped screaming, whether broken or unable to anymore. I glanced over-- wait, what the fuck? Is she...has she been eating her? Yep. Yep yep, 'Alexis' has apparently gone full blown cannibal, can't say I expected that. Well, whatever, not my problem, I've got more important things to attend to.

I looked down hungrily at the blond girl splayed on the table. In a sense -- it was time for a meal of my own.

Not especially more than usual. She's probably thinking 'Why aren't you shooting her you fucking faggot, why are you people just talking'.

She doesn't know Chiaki very well.

Mami strikes me as the type to spank or whip more than to "hit." Maybe twist and bite.

But more than that, I see her as the type to gently caress you as she doms you.

There was that time she died. It mostly comes up when she takes on something entirely out of her depth or threatens or smarts off to someone she can't afford to. Basically every day with Miss Marigold, too.

For what it's worth, this is something she tries to recognize, but it's an important distinction to keep in mind.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/12/14(Fri)09:28:34 No.36719150 Archived

+ Wait for my signal. + You pulse back towards Kyoko, hoping to hell that the Culexus doesn't catch you pulsing to your best friend. Thankfully, she doesn't - either she's too focused on the impromptu pyrotechnics she's showing off with that axe of hers, or Yuma's way of allowing all of you to pulse to each other is working much better than you think. + When I give it, we murder the fuck out of this bitch. +

It's tempting to call in Kyoko now, but you have to give her an opportunity to. One that'll allow her to get a clean shot without the target having any chance to block or retaliate. ...That means going toe-to-toe for a bit with the Culexus. A Great. Fucking wonderful.

"Hm." The crimson Culexus in front of you tilts her head to the side again. "This isn't like you, Matsuda. You should be cursing and screaming for my death right about now, firing that gaudy gun of yours - your eyes turned wholly black, tears of blood flowing down your cheeks." It's here that she nods, as if coming to a conclusion she'd been expecting all along. "Yes, of course you've got a plan, but what? Your Callidus is down, your squad is fragmented, and--"

The Desert Eagle kicks in your hand as you fire, its thunderous report a veritable cannon's boom in the dead, damp silence of the entire eighth floor. That first shot, fired in treachery - in the bloody-minded, desperate hope that your target was too busy listening to herself talk to dodge - misses its mark completely. The helmeted freak jerking aside in a creak of leather and padded armor. Mere moments before you'd even pulled the trigger.

Your second shot, one you make in the span of an eyeblink right after - the fat brass cylinder from your first still spinning end over end in the air - does hit, but it's a glancing one at best. The round shearing the protective ruggedized plating of her hardsuit's left shoulderpad, leaving bared but annoyingly-intact flesh in its wake.

Fuck.

"What are you shooting?" The crimson fiend laughs, her voice dripping with venom-laced amusement as she continues to advance. "Are you drunk? Even a novitiate would've already hit me at this range!"

"...Shut up," You growl, and make to fire again - but before you could do so, the Culexus had already begun to charge you. Her slow, measured advance exchanged for a charging kill-run. You spit out a curse and start to backpedal, forcing a space between the both of you, space enough to aim and fire. Enough space for you to continue trying to shoot a huge hole in her helmet, right between her demon-face helmet's eyes.

No such luck. In the span of an eyeblink, not only did the Culexus close the distance between the both of you, she'd already started swinging that fucking axe of hers.

What transpired right then and there is something you'd consider as the most excruciating ten seconds of your life...that you can remember, at least. Excruciating - and arguably educational.

This Red Culexus is something else all right. Not just a Culexus but something more. Something worse.

She was one of them, that much was clear. She wore the suit of her rank, and the way your skin crawled whenever she got too close proved that she was one of the cursed few that necessitated being imprisoned in leather and metal. But the way she handled her weapon, it brought another Culexus to mind - and how singularly brutal she was with her crowbar. Each swing of the burning axe delivered with enough force that the blade whistled as it cut the air with every pass.

Each swing a death blow, made with the innate ease usually reserved for seasoned lumberjacks, or serial killers who killed with the contents of their tool shed.

After those ten seconds - ten grueling seconds of dodging, ducking, and weaving out of the way of a consummate axe-murderer's swings, ten seconds that felt like ten years - you felt as fucked up as your ex looked. Your muscles burning in lactic agony, your joints screaming in pain. Your breath sawing in and out of your chest in desperate, ragged gasps.

"You move well for a Vindicare," The Culexus tilts her head towards you, one-handedly tugging her axe free from where she'd buried it on the wall in attempting to make a bloody ravine of your face. The jagged scar left in the concrete continuing to burn with the Culexus' foul-smelling crimson fire."You have the instincts, but not the movement. I'd recommend training more under Miki Sayaka, but that'd just be wasting my breath."

"...Shut up. Just shut up." You say again, the words leaving your lips in a breath-starved growl as you take advantage of the lull in action to finally reload. The first magazine falls from your clumsy, numbed fingers - and you spit out a curse and pull out another from your shield - and this time it slides home with a reassuring click.

You look up just in time to duck underneath a burning ax swung to crunch into the side of your neck. Earning yourself an opportunity to roll to the side and get some space between the both of you, as well as a sharp kick to the ribs courtesy of a metal-shod Culexus boot. The impact turning your roll into a painful, clumsy tumble with your face smacking hard against the cold floor.

"...Kong. Kong!" Wendy calls for you as she tries to get up from the pool of blood she'd been lying in. "Help me up. Come on. I can take her--"

"Stay down," you breathe as you scramble back up to your feet. Gritting your teeth as you find your free hand curling around the Muramasa's handle. You will yourself to support your gun hand instead, taking aim once more at the Culexus. "Just stay down. I'll handle this."

"You're doing very well, considering." The Culexus nods. "You've lasted longer than she did thus far." She gestures to Wendy, who spits out something absolutely foul in English that you're tempted to write it down in your journal to remember it. "Still, Cooldown opted for a more direct approach. I don't think I've ever had to deal with someone that tenacious with a knife." She coughs here, and you hear something wet splatter against the inside of her helmet.

The Culexus coughs again, before shaking her head and then stepping forward, axe in both hands. "Shall we continue, Warmaster Matsuda? You can try shooting at me again, if you'd like. I'd let some shots graze my suit to make you feel better, but it's hard to find tailors who can work well with leather in these parts."
What do you do?

I'll have you know I became a leader of my own squad in the Eighth, and I've been involved in numerous secret raids on the Varrigan city, and I have over 300 confirmed Witch kills. I am trained in gorilla warfare and I'm the top Vindicare in the entire twenty Officios. You are nothing to me but just another thousand targets. I will wipe you the fuck out with precision the likes of which has never been seen before on this Earth OR the Moon, mark my fucking words. You think you can get away with typing that shit to me over the transmitter? Think again, dickbutt. As we speak I am contacting my secret network of insiders in the Twentieth and your Officio is being infiltrated right now so you better prepare for despair, mascot. The despair that wipes out the pathetic little thing you call your race. You're fucking dead, dickbutt. I can be anywhere, anytime, and I can kill you in over seven hundred ways, and that's just with my Soul Gem. You grit your teeth, before shoving your Desert Eagle back into its holster. Trying to fill this bitch with holes clearly didn't work, even when you tried to play dirty. A second attempt would just end up with you wasting ammunition and not getting Kyoko her window of opportunity. This means, then, that you'll have to try something else. Something more dangerous, more desperate.

Something much more stupid.

"...So. You're willing to use that against me?" The Red Culexus says here, as you take hold of the katana strapped to your waist - one hand gripping the ebony sheath, the other curling around the handle. The weapon immediately growing warm in your grasp. "Even with the risk of you going berserk upon friend AND foe? ...You're either very brave or very stupid, Warmaster Matsuda."

Probably both, you tell her through a forced grin of gritted teeth and curled lips. The temptation of wanting to just close your eyes and let the Muramasa take over a sudden and heavy sensation pressing against your mind.

Yeah, definitely both.

+ If I start acting crazier than normal, you have my permission to take me down fast and hard. + You send this warning to Wendy and Kyoko in a quick, desperate pulse. + Kyoko, get ready. You're about to get your shot. +

+ W-what?! + Kyoko's pulseback is one filled with sudden dread and surprise. + Murderface, what're you-- +

+ Just get ready. + You send back, before pulling Muramasa free from its sheath from the second time during this operation. The golden blade hissing as it slides from its ebony casing, and then singing as it slices through the air.

"...Very well." The Culexus in front of you nods slowly, the eyes of the demon mask fitted over her visor reflecting the amber light coming off of Muramasa's mirror-like sheen. Her gloved fingers curling tighter around her axe. "If you're ready, then--"

CRASH.

And just like earlier - just like when you drew Muramasa to save your friend from being torn apart by huge goat-dildos wielding axes the size of small cars - you found yourself no longer where you were a moment ago, but rather where you desperately wanted to be, with the sword in your hands and your enemy right in your face. Both your weapons grinding against each other in a desperate deadlock, a power struggle that sent sparks flying with every heave and every teeth-gritted attempt to gain ground.

+ Let me kill her. + Kirika whispers in your mind. + There's no finer flesh to taste than those from the cursed ones. But you'll fuck it up and we'll have nothing but dust in that pretty suit of hers. Let me, and she'll leave behind a corpse we can feed on. + A moment's pause. + I'll let you have her eyes, too. They're the best bits, so I'm being very generous-- +

You growl at this, before shutting out Kirika from your mind. For fuck's sake, you don't have time to even think about that right now--

"Commendable," The Culexus in front of you clearly straining to keep you back, to keep this stalemate up - despite the fact that she'd been slapping you around with almost insulting ease earlier. "Very commendable. I can feel you pushing back against your weapon's influence. Not even the Prophet can manage that with any reliability."

Really? You laugh as you continue to push against her. That makes you feel really special, then.

"As it should, Warmaster Matsuda." The Culexus nods, her voice perfectly even, perfectly composed, even if the effort of pushing back against you is clearly taking nearly all her strength to. "But know this: you won't be able to control it forever."

That's fine, you tell her, and the smile that curls your lips, despite yourself, isn't forced.

You only want to control it for long enough.

+ NOW + You pulse to Kyoko, and you dive out of the way as the ceiling above you detonates in a brilliant and fiery explosion - the smoke and debris immediately clearing to reveal your best friend hurtling down towards the Culexus. Murder in her one eye and a spear, aimed to impale your opponent right where she stood, gripped in her hands.

"GET SOME!" Your best friend roars over the din as she plummets, savage joy and fury coming off of her in equal waves. And for that one moment, as you scrambled to help Wendy back up, Muramasa shoved back into its sheath - you almost thought that that would be it. You've done your job, you've given Kyoko her window, surely that'd be enough to off the fucking Culexus for good--

The sound of a speartip striking nothing but concrete snaps you back from your accursed moment of wishful thinking, and it's here that you see Kyoko standing in the burning wreckage of her grand entrance, her customized spear wreathed in vibrant crimson flame. The Red Culexus - still alive, still FUCKING alive - warily taking a step back, both gloved hands empty, clenched into fists. Her axe in pieces, lying useless at your best friend's feet.

"...You..." The Culexus rasps, sudden trepidation coloring her voice, even with her vox-speaker's distortion. "You're not...the Prophet told me you weren't supposed to be here! She promised...!"

"Yeah, well, Murderface brought me along, so I guess you got shit for luck this time, eh?" Kyoko grins as she fans a hand in front of her face, waving away the dust kicked up by her arrival. "Murderface! You alright? How's Wendy?"

"M'fine," Wendy growls from the floor, and you move to help her up. She manages to do so after a few failed attempts, and you can't help but notice how she's leaning heavily against you in her bid to stay upright. Mostly upright, anyway. "The fuck...through the fucking ceiling, Sakura? THAT was your idea of backup?"

>the preceding post is [4/5]

"It worked, didn't it?" Kyoko's grin goes wider, before blinking at the Culexus in front of her. "Er, well, not really, but she did get disarmed, so it all works out--"

"YOU SHOULDN'T HAVE BROUGHT HER HERE!" All three of you blink as the helmeted freak shrieks. "THE PROPHET TOLD ME YOU WOULDN'T BE STUPID ENOUGH TO BRING SAKURA KYOKO TO HER DEATH! OF ALL THE FUCKING IDIOTIC THINGS TO DO--"

"...The fuck are you talking about?" Kyoko's grin is quickly replaced with a scowl, her expression hardening. "I don't know what Oriko or the Prophet or whoever she is has been saying about me, but I'm not going to die here, you...you freakin' dragon dildo!" The red-haired Eversor tugs her spear free from where its blade was embedded into the floor, and gives it a one-handed spin before pointing it at the Culexus. "I was in a pretty good fuckin' mood before you had to scream that crazy bullshit at me, so now I'm in the mood to get you back for what you did to Yuma-chan!"

"No...no! You can't be here! Please!" The Culexus screams. The lines of her suit glowing blue, then red. "F-fine, I can...I can send you back myself. All I have to do is knock you out, and send you back, I remember how the Prophet taught me--"

The torrent of witchfire that suddenly spat from the leather-encased Magical Girl's outstretched hand looked less than something that would actually knock someone out, and more of something that would instantly char them into ash. It's with her spinning spear, then - the entire shaft and blade of it coated with an identical flame, only brighter and wilder - does Kyoko somehow block the witchfire from washing over her, you and Wendy. Both flames canceling each other out in the contact, leaving the overpowering scent of sulfur and brimstone in the air.

"Murderface?" Kyoko doesn't turn to look at you now, her one eye riveted at the shaking Culexus. "Take Wendy with you and go on up to where Mami is. I'll catch up after taking care of Dragon Dildo over here."

What? But--

"Just go, alright? Wendy needs medical attention, an' the only ones qualified to give it are holed up upstairs. We don't know what kinda shit could happen with her injuries, us being in Wookieland after all." It's here that she turns - briefly, to grin at you. "I just need to have a one-on-one, heart-to-heart talk with this little shit. I'll meet you back there when I'm done, okay, buddy? You'll be doin' me a solid if you do."

How do you respond?

You stare at Kyoko, then the Culexus shivering in her suit, bright crimson flames sparking around them both - and it's here that you slowly nod.

You'll...yeah, you'll let her deal with the current hostile on her own. You trust Kyoko. She knows what she's doing - she quickly neutralized the Culexus' fire without even breaking a sweat - and she seems like she's got a plan. Your best friend never talks like that unless she's really, very sure of what she's going to do.

So yeah. You'll go along with it. You have all the reasons to, and no reason not to.

If that's the case, then why do you feel sick to your gut at the mere thought of playing along?

+ Aw, don't be like that, Murderface! + Kyoko's pulse to you is a reassuring one, in complete contrast to her narrowed eye and tensed form - her spear held at the ready, the barrel of its low-slung gun attachment aimed at the Culexus. + I got a plan, and it's gonna work! I meant what I said - I'm not planning on dyin' here! +

A chuckle issues from your best friend. + Now go on and get out of here, before this bitch decides to try an' roast us all extra crispy-like again! I'll join you guys as soon as I can! +

+...Can you promise me that? + You pulse the thought even before you could stop yourself. Can she promise you that she'll be alright?

Silence, and you hear Kyoko sigh. + I can't...I dunno. Anything else, Murderface, I can promise and I'll be good for it, but...+

She pauses here, before continuing. + If I do kick the bucket, though, just tell Sayaka-chan I went down fighting, alright? She'll probably shout at you a whole lot an' try to kill you, but don't hate her too much for it - that just means she's really lonely, an' probably more angry at me dying than anything else. Just stick with her, an' tell her that I'll haunt her ass if she gives ya more grief than you deserve. She'll probably laugh at that. +

...Goddammit.

"Please, listen to reason! You have to leave immediately! This place will kill you!" The Culexus, seemingly having found her tongue, tries again. Both her hands sparking aflame once more. "I am prepared to use force if necessary, but please understand what I'm trying to say--"

"Are you calling me a yokel now, unable to COM-PRE-HEND big city slicker words?" Kyoko scowls here, just as her own spear catches aflame once more. "I think you're the one who's not catching on: it's all BULLSHIT. I don't believe it, not one fuckin' bit, and I am going to stay here until we've purged these entire building of you and your buddies. No one fucks with the Ninth or my Warmaster and gets away with it, no matter what your Prophet says."

"MATSUDA DOESN'T EVEN CARE ABOUT YOU!" The Culexus roars, stepping forward, jabbing a flame-wreathed finger at you. "ALL SHE CARES ABOUT IS HERSELF! SHE'S NOT FIT TO LEAD AN OFFICIO, MUCH LESS A BIRTHDAY SONG--"

A single booming report cuts the helmeted Magical Girl's rant halfway - and you see Kyoko waving the smoking barrel of her spear about. "It's Warmaster Matsuda, kid. WARMASTER Matsuda." The red-haired Eversor's voice could have instantly frozen magma. "I don't give a shit what shithole Officio Oriko stole you from. Show some fucking respect."

The Culexus falls silent at this, and it's here that Kyoko turns towards you. Her one eye a cold sharp shard of amber. "Chiaki, for fuck's sake, I told ya to go already! Go on, before they figure out what's happening here and send reinforcents or somethin'!"

Right, but what about--

"I said I'll catch up, right?" She grins at you, before pointing towards the stairwell door with her spear. "Now get going! This place is going to turn into a literal hellhole in no time flat!"

You both share one final glance. One pulsed emotion shared with each other, pulsed down the telepathic bond connecting the both of you.

And it's with gritted teeth that you scoop up Wendy in your arms - the American barking something obscene in complete and terrified surprise - before you break into a dead run.

Not looking back, even when you felt the heat of witchflame erupt behind you.

Not looking back, even when you heard Kyoko scream in pain and in rage behind you.

"Go back. You can't...no, Kong. Murderface. Chiaki. Please." Wendy wheezes in your arms, her face pressed against your neck as you reach the stairwell and begin the long climb up. Taking two stairs at a time.
"Don't leave Kyoko behind. She's your best friend. Put me down and help her. I'll be fine. Don't be a fucking idiot."

You keep climbing.

"...Kong?"

"...Sorry. I...sorry."

You continue climbing, the Callidus in your arms gratefully silent.

Everything had started out as black and white. Your amnesia dulled everything to a blurry, dull, unrecognizable gray.

Before Wendy, before Midori, Kyoko had been the only other person to care. She had been the only other person to call herself your friend.

The only other person to actually give a shit about the drunken Vindicare who never cared about anyone.

It felt like a goodbye.

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam versus Magical Sawbones Tanis Nagi

The last thing I remember is a burning pain. Like the blood gushing out of my bullet wounds was lava. It made my knees knock with how much it hurt. Then I saw them aim for my head…

I can hear somebody humming something nearby. I don't recognize the tune. More importantly, I don't recognize the voice doing the humming.

My eyes open slowly, and I end up staring at an equally unfamiliar ceiling. Propping myself up – I still have my mechanical arm on, I guess – I find myself still in a bed, though it's definitely not my bed. The room itself is painted white, and smells like someone scrubbed it with bleach. A hospital room?

The humming's cut off by a quiet gasp off to my right. "Oh, you're awake!" someone squeaks in distress. I look to the source of the voice and see that my attending physician… is probably about the same age as I am. She looks pretty young, anyway. Short red hair, deep tan, clutching a clipboard to her chest like it's a life preserver. She looks only marginally less nervous that I would if I was trying to do her job.

"Um, Eleanor, right?" she asks, about as audible as a loud whisper. I slowly nod my head. The doctor… surgeon… whatever she is, smiles sheepishly. "How are you feeling?" she asks next.

Rubbing at my head, I knock my cap off-center, confirming I still have a head. "Feel like I didn't just get my face blown off," I murmur.

"Good. That's a good thing," she assures me, relaxing just a little. "Is there any pain?"

I shake my head just as I remember something important. "Excuse-"

"Dizzin-" the doctor starts, then flushes slightly after she interrupts me. I guess she's waiting for me to speak first.

"…Did I get the prize?" I ask hopefully. Miss Bel promised a straight-up cash bonus to the last people standing. I could have left after the first volley, too.

The girl shrinks back, not even looking me in the eye anymore. Maybe I should have been a bit quieter. "Um, what's this about a prize?" she asks, appearing completely clueless as to what I'm talking about. She probably just expected to ask her questions and be on her way, not get hounded with questions directed at her. She looks pretty uncomfortable, and I don't like pressing her. But I gotta know.

"The prize for holding out during the live firing exercises?" I clarify, though it still doesn't seem like she knows what I'm talking about. "The one Miss Bel said she'd give out?" I inquire, a touch of desperation in my voice. Please say that I got it. Please.

But the girl droops her head, clutching her clipboard tighter. “I’m afraid I didn’t hear any mention of a prize,” she tells me, her nervous smile turning to a frown.

…Fuck. I fall back against my pillow, my optimism gone. In spite of Marina’s advice, I couldn’t stand with a bunch of actual Eversors. And here I honestly thought I could manage.

“Is… is something the matter?” the doctor timidly asks while leaning over me, sounding a little concerned. “Are you dizzy? Nauseous?” Did she get taller? Well, whatever. Does it really even matter?

“…Yeah,” I grumble, feeling very drained now as I think back over the last week or so. “I’m sick of trying and failing. I’m sick of trying and just barely scraping by. And I’m sick of trying and then being screwed over by things I can’t control.” I turn around so I can bury my face in my pillow, my voice muffled. “Trying sucks.”

I really thought things were getting better lately. And when Miss Bel told me I was doing well, I actually felt a bit –proud-. I shouldn’t have gotten my hopes up.

Fuck. I was going to buy an oven, and baking supplies, with that money. I was really, really looking forward to cooking again.

That candy shop looks less and less likely every day.

After a pause, the doctor speaks again. “I’m really sorry about that,” she apologizes. “But are you, um, are you fine otherwise? Your health, I mean.”

“Just peachy,” I murmur. Dunno if she heard me. I can hear her jotting something down, so she probably did.

“Eleanor?” the doctor says my name again. “Please turn over.”

“Whatever,” I grunt, flipping back over. She sets the clipboard on a nearby chair and starts tucking my sheets back in. And smoothing them out. And then untucking them and tucking them back in. I guess she’s fixated on getting it right?

“Actually,” I start, remembering something important, “what time is it? How long was I out for?” The doctor is muttering something to herself while fussing with the sheets. Did she not hear me? “Excuse me, hello?” I say, trying to get her attention. Goddammit, if it’s not one thing…

Okay, no, it’s not fair to get mad at the help when she’s just doing job. Even if she’s doing it to an obsessive degree. My failings aren’t her fault. So I wait for her to finish tidying up or whatever she’s doing. The doctor is actually beaming once she’s done.

“Excuse me?” I speak up again, getting her attention. “Could you tell me what time it is? And when I can go?”

“Oh!” she exclaims, face falling while frantically looking for something. She hurries over to grab her clipboard and clutches it close to her chest again. As if just remembering my question, she checks her watch before informing me, “it’s currently two in the morning. You’ll be released tomorrow morning at six.”

I just nod. Odd girl.

And back to smiling, but still holding that clipboard pretty hard. “Alright then,” she answers, consulting said clipboard again. “Do you need anything else while I’m here?”

I start to form a sarcastic response, but with it being this late…

“Could I get a phone?” I ask. “I need to call someone.”

The doctor nods/bows slightly and then shuffles over to a nearby nightstand. Nudging it over, she reluctantly lets go of the clipboard long enough to hand me the receiver. I make to reach over and dial the number, but I can’t quite reach it from where I’m at. Stupid short arms. Stupid short, underdeveloped body.

“Would you like me to dial the number for you?” interrupts the doctor, trying to look helpful in between her fidgeting.

“Yes, please,” I tell her, and recite Checkers’ number from memory. Once she’s put it in, the girl’s back to hugging her clipboard, and I’m nervously listening to the phone ringing. Please be there, please be there, please be-

“Leave a message or… whatever, I’ll get to you later,” her tired voice grumbles, followed by a tone. Fuck, I got voicemail. I guess it’s pretty late over there. Or early. Or something. Time zones are confusing.

Taking a deep breath, and trying to ignore the sudden rush of anxiety, I squeak, “uh, hi Checkers! It’s Eleanor. I mean Papers. I mean… I’m okay, I’m calling to say I’m okay and, um… I’m sorry for not calling back sooner. I just woke up and everything.” Goddammit, why am I so nervous about leaving a message? Is it because I’m not by myself for once? The doctor doesn’t seem to care, so I take another deep breath and continue, “So if you were worried about me, you can, you know, stop doing that.” I think that’s everything. “Okay, bye!” I call out, and the doctor ends the call for me.

I hand the receiver back to her and tell her, “Thank you, uhh...”

Oh, right, I don’t have her name. And even if I could see her nametag behind the clipboard, I sure as hell couldn’t read it.

The girl’s face tinges with embarrassment while she hangs up the phone. “Oh, my name?” she asks, and I nod patiently. She smiles a little, moving her clipboard up until it’s resting against her chin. “Tanis,” she murmurs. “It’s Tanis.”

“Tanis? Thank you… Tanis,” I finish lamely, trying to smile. Tanis? Well, that’s an unusual name. Okay, probably no more unusual than Kai, Belinda, or Madge is, but those are pretty strange, too. Whatever, she’s nice enough, if a bit weird.

She shakes her head. “Just doing my job,” she insists, and then checks her clipboard. “Well, if you need to reach somebody, just press this button right here,” she explains, indicating a button on the bed’s rails. I nod back in understanding.

“And…” she draws out, going down her clipboard again. “Yes, I believe that’s everything!” she exclaims with a small grin. Or what passes for exclaiming with her quiet voice. Maybe she’s happy she got this stressful job over with – at least that’s how I’d feel in her position. “So, uh, I’ll be going now. Have a nice night, Eleanor,” Tanis says, offering a sympathetic smile. “Hope things improve for you soon.”

I sit up and wave goodbye, but she’s already leaving. As her awkward gait makes toward the light switch, though, I see something trailing beneath her surgical gown and a ways behind her: a tail. A friggin’ dark brown snake tail, about as long as she is tall. She’s not walking around, she’s –slithering-.

I cover my mouth to muffle my surprise, but it doesn’t seem like it did any good. Tanis freezes up for an instant, then her shoulders droop with a big sigh before she shuts off the lights. Before I can apologize, she hurries out the door and shuts it behind her.

I slump back into the bed and look up at the darkness. Way to be an insensitive little piece of shit, Eleanor. You could have actually made a friend and you blew it. Just add that to the big list of things you fucked up.

…What am I even going to –do- now? I can't see myself –not- fucking up training tomorrow, and Suzi says that options for my Vanus trance are 'being explored'. Which sounds a lot like 'you're shit outta luck' to me.

For real this time, I think that tomorrow I'm going to tell the Warmaster that I just can't hack it. I'm sure she'll be real disappointed, but better to disappoint her now than further down the line, after she and everyone else have invested even more of their time and energy into helping me. For all the good it did. I don't know what I'm going to do now, but it's not this insanity. I'm just not crazy enough for it. I'm not strong enough for it, either. Really, if I'm not doing deskwork, then what am I good for at this point?

…Maybe I should just drop dead and save people the trouble-

A commotion down the hall puts my thoughts on hold.

"Step aside, freak," orders a shrill voice. A haughty, angry voice I've come to know and dread. I hear someone – I think it's Tanis – scream, followed by the cringe-inducing sound of bones snapping, and a heavy thud as a body slams into a nearby wall. My brain tells me to crawl under the sheets and hide, but it also tells me it won't do any good at all.

Slow, deliberate footsteps draw closer and closer, heavily hitting the ground and echoing with an unnatural, metallic clang. They grow louder and louder, drowning out the sound of my terrified heart beat, until they stop right outside my room. There's another loud, metallic clang as something impacts the door, and it simply falls off its hinges. Behind it, a figure stands in the hallway, their silhouette framed against the bright lights. And behind their translucent wings, I can make out Tanis' broken, bloodied form slumped over against the wall, unmoving.

"Eleanor," Miss Schulz states with eerie serenity as the air around her crackles with electricity, "this time I –will- kill you."

...Why?

..:: AUREA VENEN || PART 5 || SKYBREAK ::..

Wow. I mean, the feeling of draining another girl's soul gem of magic is fucking great and all, but that -- THAT still takes the cake. I rose up on the stilts called legs I have -- having been on the floor for quite a while now -- and looked down at the blond girl who was still laying on part of the tabletop. She was panting heavily, her costume mostly ripped to shreds, and her eyes seemed distant and broken. At this point, I'm not sure anymore whether that's due to the various drugs flowing in her blood stream, or the fact that she was just raped senseless. Eh, why not both, let's go with that!

I stretched my arms up above my head with a groan, rematerializing my magical costume at about the same time. I have a pretty good idea of what I'm going to do with this lovely victim of mine, good idea indeed. I shuffled over to the center of the room, where 'Alexis' was. She had been sleeping on the floor for a while now, apparently in a food coma, as was made clear by the mess that was left of the squad leader. I gave 'Alexis' another pat on the head, grabbing the leader's soul gem while I was there, since it had been placed down next to her. It could possibly come in handy later, though I may just throw it to 'Alexis' as a chew toy. Speaking of which, referring to her as 'Alexis' is getting a little annoying, I'll have to change that later. All pet dogs need to have a pet name, I mean, that goes without saying.

Once I meandered back to blondie, I noticed that she had curled up, tears running down her face. Awww, how adorable. It's like I could feel my heartstrings twitch in glee. I plopped back down on the floor next to her, causing her to flinch.

>> ☐ Hebiko 12/12/14(Fri)15:22:49 No.36722946

"Hey hey~ Don't cry." I whispered down at her, before pulling her into a hug. She let out a whimper, trembling in my arms, as my fingers gently combed through her hair. She was afraid and unsure how to react -- gee, I wonder why -- her arms eventually grasping my back after much hesitation. Can't really blame her of course, it's not like I didn't just do all kinds of terrible things to her or anything. Once enough time had passed, I pulled back from the hug, my finger pressing her chin up to look up into my gaze. My face had moved so close that I could practically see myself reflected in her eyes, and her cheeks reddened considerably.

"After all -- I'm not done with you yet." The moment I finished the sentence, I pulled her into a kiss and stuck a syringe into the back her neck with my free hand. Her eyes widened in panic and I couldn't help but let out a rather muffled giggle, injecting a dosage of blue fluid into her body. While comparable to the effects of the purple 'Mak-num' drug I used earlier, this one was much cleaner, and also much more difficult to obtain ingredients for. I like to call it 'Skybreak', primarily because of the blue color of course. Once the last of it had been forcibly intermixed with her bloodstream, the results were already very noticable.

"W-What did you...A-AAaaGGhhH..." A vivid blue color spread throughout her veins, fading shortly after like a wave washed through her body. It even changed her eye color, as her irises became a pale blue. The only telltale mark was the equally blue mark on the back of her neck, a permanent brand that declared her servitude.

"Fufu~ I like you so much, I just couldn't help but make you into my pet~" My fingers came up to fiddle with one of the girl's twintails, continuing to gaze into her eyes, watching as they describe the various feelings going through her mind. "How does that make you feel, to be my pet~? Hmmm, ah! I'll call you Morsel~! A fitting name for one who is so tasty and sweet."

Morsel's body continued to shake and twitch as the effects of the drug were still taking hold. She'd probably resemble a fish out of water if I hadn't been holding her in my grasp. Despite this, she still managed to stutter out a response of sorts.

"M-m-mors -- el? P-Pet... Ahh... N-No, I'm -- nnngh -- not s...I..." Morsel struggled to finish her statement, before her head thumped against my shoulder as she passed out, the drug reaching its final stages. She'd probably be out cold for a while, so I just stayed in place, enjoying the warmth and contact of the soft girl against me. I didn't even notice until now, but at some point 'Ale...uhh....Mak...Makky? Yeah, Makky, good name. Makky had decided to come and curl up beside me as well, which of course warranted another petting of her head. Good doggy~

It was then that Cynn decided to enter the room and finally show herself again, rubbing her uncovered eye with the back of her hand. She must have woken up from one of her usual naps.

"Woah, wha' happened here? Clearly I missed a lot." She said drowsily, looking around at the complete mess this room had been turned into. Then she turned her attention to the other girls. "Aw, ya' have some new friends, and ya' didn' tell me? So much fa' me bein' tha' only one anymore..." She pouted, as usual her mask making it impossible to tell whether she was putting on an act or not. To an extent, she may not have been, regardless of what expression she wore.

"They aren't my friends, Cynn, they're my cute pets. Big difference. After all, I'm sure in normal circumstances, the last thing they would be is my friend."

"Haha! Tha' so? Whew, here I was, worried that lil' Serzah grew up and became popular while I took my nap." Cynn walked over towards me, poking me in the forehead as she laughed. In response to this, Makky sat up and let out an inhuman snarl at Cynn.

"Hey hey, down Makky, Cynn is a friend. Although she's a snarky girl who makes terrible jokes, but she's a friend none the less! Be nice~" As if on cue, I gave Cynn my traditional smirk. Makky let out a whine, before returning to her prior passive activities.

"Wha' tha' hell? Tha's not creepy at all o' anythin' They'a practically ya' slaves now."

"That's what I meant by pets Cynn, you still half asleep? It's the drug recipes I got from some of Mother's old notes, the ones conveniently laying about in the tower before we escaped. Don't you remember those papers I grabbed?"

"Ahhh, ya' I do now tha' ya' mention it. Tha's some pretty serious stuff, though, ya'?" Cynn knelt down, taking a closer look at Morsel's blue marking. "This some kinda magic signature injection?"

"Pretty much. Prevents someone else from coming along and hijacking them with their own magical energy."

"Then tha' means ya' need ta' feed them doses of ya' magic energy frequently, don'tcha?" Definitely wasn't a Venenum for nothing, Cynn caught on very quickly. Either that or she's really really good at guessing shit.

I simply nodded, before closing my hand into a fist. A brief flash of light leaked from the gaps between my clawed fingers, and then I held up a small biscuit. The moment it came into view, Makky quickly sat up, eyeing it hungrily.

Cynn giggled at this reaction, as if she thought Makky was joking around. It was possible she didn't fully understand just how inhuman Makky had become. She's a monster now, no one could call a cannibal with a dog's mind a human anymore.

>> ☐ Hebiko 12/12/14(Fri)15:26:04 No.36722987

"Won't tha' other sista's get mad though? I mean, ya' pretty much are continuin' what Mother' had been kicked out for in tha' first place. Human experimentation is a huge taboo an' all, 'specially if they'a contracted magica' girls. If they find out, ya' know..." The beak-shaped mask turned back towards me, Cynn radiating concern from every visible part of her face. It's true, I may as well be following Mother's footsteps. Damn if I don't really care at this point though, the other sisters can go have fun doing whatever it is they're up to now. Far away from Cynn and I, of course.

"Yeah -- IF they find out. That makes it simple, Cynn, we just don't let them find out."

"But...they're gonna fin--" I held up a finger to my lips again, though this time it wasn't because I heard footsteps. I just knew what she was going to say already, and I didn't feel like hearing any more of it. Conversation over. If any of the sisters happened to see Makky or Morsel, and raised a big deal about it, then I'd just have to deal with it at that point in time. I gave Cynn a pat on the head, silently telling her that it'll be alright.

After a moment she sighed exasperatedly, throwing her arms up in the air as usual. "Fine! Don't act like I didn' warn ya'!" She then proceeded to flop onto her back, her arms still extended up, making a soft 'pomf' sound against the floor.

Having nothing further to say, I went quiet for the rest of the time. Once Morsel wakes up, it'll be time to leave from this place, and migrate once again.

As with all good tragedy, the protagonist brought this on themselves.

We had two or three really big warnings that Kyouko would die here, brought her anyway, then left her alone in a fight against one of the more dangerous and knowledgeable enemies we have had to face so far while that enemy was screaming that she would die here because of our idiotic mistakes.

Landslide vote as well. Not even mad. I will be very disappointed if something horrible does not happen due to this even though I would have voted against it if I was here in time.

Well, one things for sure. It seems, unless Oriko was lying to Red, it sems like it messed up the Prophets foresight... and its not for the first time we've managed that.

Which means right now we're a wildcard because she's expecting us to either be delayed, or killed, by Red... possibly while she deals with our other friends.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/21/14(Sun)08:39:43 No.36892600 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you've always had a hard time trusting people.

Unless they had blonde hair, a beautiful smile and the ability to make pancakes that tasted like the freshly-slaughtered meat of divine winged messengers sent from high, then you'd always have that nasty voice inside your head whenever you were asked to take someone on their word.

A nasty, rough-edged voice that told you that this particular someone was lying out of their ass, that they couldn't be trusted with anything at all, and that the best way to extract the truth out of them was through shooting their kneecaps out, or pistol-whipping them to the floor and then shooting their kneecaps out, or taking your combat knife to their kneecaps before shooting them. In the kneecaps.

You have trust issues, is what you're trying to get at here.

>> ☐ Deculture 12/21/14(Sun)08:40:27 No.36892604

>>36892600

Granted, you've been getting better at that front. You've been able to ignore that nasty little voice time and time again, no matter how much it screamed at you to act on your worst suspicions. And things have...generally worked out all right.

It hasn't bitten you in the ass so far.

But as you make your way up the fifteenth floor - your heeled feet pounding hard on the stairs you're taking two at a time, each step a painful stab of pain mingling with the dull ache of carrying an injured Callidus in your arms - you wonder if your new policy of trusting people is about to backfire on you in the worst way possible.

You can't help but think that this new habit of yours - just believing what people tell you, whether they're a ghost living inside a golden weapon or your best friend - is about to take such a huge bite out of your ass that you'll be shitting through a colostomy bag before this quest is even halfway done.

"...She's dead, you know. You've left her to die." You hear someone say, in a whisper as tender as a lover's caress and as cold as a knife slipped between ribs.

You look down and see that the Callidus in your arms is no longer the girl you know as Wendy Cooldown, but someone else entirely.

Someone with green hair, a trusting smile, and glowing eyes the color of bloody rubies.

"You've killed one of the few people that still trust you, sempai. Congratulations."

You blink once. And then again.

The smiling, bleeding vision of Midori slowly resolving into your brown-haired ex.

"...What?" Wendy murmurs, looking back up at you with an equal mix of pain and confusion. "Kong? What's going on? ...Do you want to go back down for Kyoko? I'll be okay, just set me down here--"

You shake your head after a moment, before moving again. Quickening your footsteps, your movements. Taking the stairs as fast as you can, forcing your body to igr in.

This place is getting to you.

That or your conscience is finally telling you how much you just fucked up in the only way that'd you'd understand.

"...I had to go for it." Wendy suddenly says, above your own labored breathing. "I was trying to synch back up with Mami, but then I saw her, and she was alone, and..." She falls silent as you pause in your ascent to listen to her. And maybe catch your fucking breath while you're at it.

"...I had her, Kong. I had her, but she wouldn't fucking go down. I stabbed her ten fucking times and stabbed her through her visor, but..."

How do you respond?

[]...It's fine. It doesn't matter. I'll just have to trust Kyoko on this.
[]Next time, follow the fucking plan, Wendy. It's not hard.

Gentlemen, perhaps it is now timely to remind ourselves why we bothered bringing a known liability (Kirika) over a known asset (Risa).

We want Kirika so that we can save Oriko.

We want to save Oriko because we promised Kyouko, and we're a dildo that upholds promises.

Thus, an implied condition is that KYOUKO IS STILL ALIVE.

Now we know by Word of Goddess that Kirika and Murderface are the principal threats to her this mission; this does not, however, give us carte blanche to act recklessly!

Have Mami, Sayaka and Yuma regroup on your position. Status check on Wendy; if stable and still effective, leave her at rendezvous, else cover her until backup arrives. Either way, reinforce your best bro ASAP.

Chiaki Matsuda, Warmaster of the Ninth Officio, formerly Homura "the calculator" Akemi.

We are the Warmaster. We have ONE job. Find and engage The One Who Leads. The one Kyoko wants us to save. To that end, we are retrieving a contractor to our officio who fucked up, and we will pass her off to one of our subordinated to evac at the earliest possible opportunity.

In the meantime, Kyoko will DO. HER. JOB. and if she dies, then so fucking help us SHE IS ON REPORT, even if it means we have to reach into hell and drag her back so that she can be held accountable.

But, Kyoko has NEVER let us down. And this seems like a fight she is uniquely well equipped to deal with.

You know, we can just go all back down once we regroup. We've got all the time in the world, there is no bomb ticking, and this is looking like a first step of this becoming a complete trainwreck.

The downside is that this place will have more time to work it's shenanigans and the enemy will get much more time to prepare, but we went in expecting to be cutting through hundreds of meguca and Witches any way.

If Sayaka offers to be the one to go back Kyoko up since she's the most sanic, then we'd literally be splitting the party. I know you're better than this, /tg/.

"Next time, follow the fucking plan, Wendy." You can't help but growl this at your ex - and while it comes out a breath-deprived grumble wheezed between breaths, it conveys enough of your anger and disappointment at Wendy to make her flinch. "It's not that fucking alien a concept to you, right? Or is it?"

"...No. But I know you would've understood why I did it." The Callidus in your arms replies coldly, her eyes narrowed despite the pain clouding them. Her one remaining hand reaching up to grab your arm, her nails digging into your skin through the material of your costume.

"I know you would've done the same in my place. Seeing that fucker just stranding there all alone, without even a single escort...I had to take the shot." Her grip on your arm tightens. "You would've done the same fucking thing without even thinking about it."

"...Or not. I don't really know anymore." Wendy shakes her head miserably as she lets go, her hand limply flopping onto her waist. Her bloodied fingers leaving smears on your white sleeve. "I don't know who you are anymore, Kong. Or Murderface. Or Chiaki, whatever the hell you want to call yourself."

She coughs here. "You've changed. I thought you were just trying to fix your image and everything, and I was fine with that for the most part. Everyone who gets the hat goes through the watch-wearing dildo phase, I was ready to accept that. But..." She shakes her head again. "...You've changed so much that I can't stop thinking that she's gone. That my Kong's gone, and who's left wearing her face is someone who trying to become someone she's not."

Silence, except for the thudding of your heels against tile and your own breathing.

"...I'll shut up now. Sorry for...not following orders, Warmaster." Your ex murmurs, defeated. "I recognize my failing and will be sure to correct it."

This must be hell on chiaki - knowing that she's had so much living behind her that she can't remember at all. If I were her, it'd bother me - having a life, and lovers from that past life, that I can't reclaim because the memories that made me, me are gone.

And it was Oriko that sent a hellfireball through the connection?

Did we brief everyone on the Red Culexus' abilities to detect what normally should be undetectable?

...Fine. You've changed. So everyone keeps fucking telling you. It's not like you're blind to it or anything - you've been actively trying to change for the better after all. Amnesia be fucking damned, you've been trying to become more than just a Vindicare who washed down painkillers with whiskey and solved every problem she came across with explosives or murder. But that was even before you were forced into this Warmaster business. You just wanted to be better, not be someone else.

But apparently the latter is happening. Even if the person you'd been is someone you can't even remember, with only the secondhand accounts of enemies and friends alike to go by.

And so, despite yourself - despite feeling that you've consigned your best friend to a death she didn't deserve - you couldn't help but wonder at how it must feel like for Wendy. To be face to face with someone you've lost and found again - only to find out that not only have they forgotten who you are, but they've also become someone else. Someone you couldn't even recognize.

"...Do you still want me to be your Kong?" You find yourself murmuring to your ex. "You say I'm changing into someone you don't know. I'm not not trying to be. I'm just trying to be better, that's all." You grunt here as your legs start to cramp from all the running, a pain you easily ignore.

"You're...you're seriously asking me that? Right here, right now?" Wendy's eyes narrow in seeming incredulity, but the faint redness in her cheeks give her away. "Kong, for fuck's sake, we're in the middle of a fucking operation, you can't just--"

"I asked you a question, Cooldown." No more bullshit. Not right now. You want the truth, and if asking here is what it takes to get it out of her, then so be it.

It was on a routine planetfall that one of our Milieu scoutships first met the Decu.
They were evilly huge rabbit-creatures who could enrapture the minds of others with their written words.

They wanted to huge the universe. We could not resist them.

For thousands of years, we were unthinking fans to the Decu. The Decu had a special liking for us Wai-fus, so they began to tinker with our tastes. They built two Wai-fu sub-races...

One Green, the largest and the carers;
the other Pink, the sadists and the yanderes.

...Well. You asked and she answered. You were expecting her to say no, but...yeah.

Despite all the shit going down, you feel your spirits slightly lifted at this. Maybe things won't turn out to so horrible as far as trying to mend things between you and the people from your past.

You just have to make sure that the people in your present aren't left kicking in the wind.

You decide to leave things at that, letting the Callidus in your arms suffer the rest of your ascent in silence - but not before giving her a squeeze. Just a small one, to make her sure you acknowledged her reply, and appreciate her being honest.

"...Dumbass." Her murmured reply is muffled against her scarf, and you feel a smirk curling your lips as you continue to pound your way up the stairs. Up to the fifteenth floor, where Mami and Sayaka are still holed up, fighting off wave after wave of god knows what.

With any luck, they'd still be there when you arrive.

With real luck, they'd still be there - and Sayaka wouldn't go completely apeshit at you for leaving your best friend to fight the Red Culexus on her own.

Because the last thing you need right now is to be bitched about making a decision that you know will haunt you for the rest of your life if you were proven wrong.

The rest of the trip doesn't take as long as you thought it would. You hadn't exactly been silent the entire time, after all - anyone with any ears posted around the building would've heard an out-of-shape Vindicare carrying a Culexus heavier than her wheezing and gasping her way up the main stairwell, her heels clacking against tile with every bounding step.

Oriko would have at least posted someone - Magical Girl or Akashic Realm-warped monstrosity - to guard the only other way up, but so far the only company you've come across is the increasing lactic burn of your cramping leg muscles and the lightheadedness that usually follows long-term oxygen deprivation due to exertion.

It's not a matter of being noodly, for fuck's sake. Vindicare aren't trained to hump healthy Callidus up stairs. Rifles, sure. Ammunition, sure. But another Magical Girl? This sort of manual labor is left to Eversors that did nothing but lift weights in the gym all fucking day.

Christ, you can almost hear Sayaka smugly comment on your upper-body strength (or complete lack of it) or endurance (again, not something you have). And you'd have all of ten seconds of restraint before you draw your sidearm to shoot her in the kneecaps.

Another smirk curls the corners of your lips. Well, that sort of takes the edge off the atmosphere some. Maybe if--

It's here that you stop - and feel, more than hear, a series of sequential explosions going off somewhere above you. The force of them powerful enough to make the very building you're in tremble with every blast, palpating your own guts with the infrasound echo of each rumbling detonation. A few more flights, and a deep, bassy roar accompanies the rumbling. Muzzle discharge from something huge. Powerful. Magical.

"...Mami. It's Mami up there. She's fighting." Wendy murmurs urgently in your arms. "Hurry the fuck up, Kong! We have to get in there!"

She doesn't have to tell you twice. Gritting your teeth, you force your way up the remaining steps, double-time - and when you finally barge through the door, you find yourself forced to stand completely and utterly still. Frozen not only in shock and awe but something else.

Wherever Oriko is, she had indeed been sending wave after wave of enemies after your two remaining team mates. You were expecting Magical Girls, or even the demonic goat-dildos that Kyoko had so much fun killing earlier.

You weren't expecting a twisted, malformed amalgamation of both. A horde of them, in fact, speaking in high-pitched, unintelligible shrieking and screaming. Their bodies half-warped into bestial forms, their bones jutting out in calcified spikes at the joints and as horns or claws in other places. Some still wore their costumes, others still bore the weapons that their contracts blessed them with - but they all kept these vestiges of their past as ragged, miserable reminders of what they once were, and not in any official or even conscious capacity.

As miserable as they looked, however - with faces twisted and warped into permanent visages of pain and torment, their clawed hands welded to staves or swords that still glowed with the magic that had birthed them - they fought with lethal grace and savagery, seemingly still retaining enough wit about themselves to not only take advantage of the gory gifts bestowed upon them, but also use them in conjunction with what they already had.

They were fighting Tomoe Mami and Miki Sayaka, two legendary Magical Girls in their own right, not just in the Ninth but all over - to a standstill. Forcing the two to fight in an ever-shrinking circle, making them fight back to back just to keep from being overrun.

But that's not to say they didn't bleed for every inch they took. This was still Mami and Sayaka they were fighting, after all.

One of the world's most renowned Vindicares, not just for her pancakes or her smile, but also for her peerless talent in the battlefield - and one of the most feared Eversors ever to take up the rank, already carving a legend of her own with a sword as red as the blood soaking her cape.

You watched, then. You watched as Mami and Sayaka shot, slashed, murdered and killed their way through a horde of the half-demon, half-magical girls. Their movements perfectly complimenting the others', a carefully-choreographed dance of death executed in such a way that it looked sublimely effortless in their parts. Each killing shot, each murdering cut so synchronized that it went past martial prowess and into something almost preternatural.

And the usual disunity of an Eversor and Vindicare fighting side by side was absent, too, or if it did it simply didn't matter at all. Mami and Sayaka switched styles and roles with every heartbeat, doing what needed to be done at the time rather than forcing themselves to react in the only way their ranked prescribed them to react.

Whenever a threat got too close to Mami - and such a thing was rare with the blonde's rifles delivering their deadly payload with a never-ending series of brilliant explosions and pin-point accuracy - she would rip them apart with a flurry of her ribbons, or tie them down long enough for Sayaka to reduce them to biological matter.

If another threat was sniping at Sayaka from afar, then the blue-haired Eversor would unfurl her cape, and the twinkling lights from its depths would be the only warning before the sniper found themselves pinned into the adjacent wall by three gleaming blades, each one flung with enough force that they would punch right through their victim - handle and all - unless there was actually a wall to pin the hapless target to.

All this, done again and again, many times over, in the space of heartbeats.

You shake your head here in slow disbelief. You knew they were good, but not THIS good.

Why are you Warmaster again? Because...if you want to talk about more capable, more worthy candidates, then Kyuubey didn't have to look any further than your Equerry, or your blonde goddess of victory. Whoever voted you for the position is insane. Insane and blind. You--

"...Kong, what the fuck are you standing around for?!" Wendy's shout jerks you back into reality. She worms her way out of your grip, wobbling only for a second as she gets back onto both feet. Her knife manifesting once more in her remaining hand, gripped by scorched fingers. "Help me clear this fucking room, they're getting murdered out here!"

What? But they're doing fine! How are they--

A sudden rumbling cuts you off - and something huge and massive crashes from the ceiling, baring the fifteenth floor to the others above it. It's another goat dildo - the horned caprine skull and the cloven hooves give it away - but it's gigantic. Bigger and taller and meaner than any of the others you've encountered so far, with veined leathery wings unfurling from its back and a massive chaintoothed maul in its fists.

It descends with a roar and the ungodly buckling of cement pillars cracking underneath the strain of its weight - and you wince as the horde of twisted amalgamations shriek and scream as they're pulped underfoot.

Those that survived or managed to get out of the way wail their praises at the newcomer, before pressing their attack upon the embattled duo. You hear Sayaka swear viciously as she disembowels three Magical Girls in one swing of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie, before pointing the blade at the towering brute.

...Okay, so they're not going to be doing fine for much longer. You'll have to step in.

We might be able to take on the giant by ourselves, but the horde is still a very present threat to Mami and Sayaka, who were slowly being overrun by them before they got a morale boost. A coordinated attack might be more effective than just peeling off the big dude while Mami and Sayaka deal with an inspired horde that was already pressing them hard to begin with.

You decide to cut your way through to Mami and Sayaka first. Even if Mami and Sayaka could feasibly take care of the horde on their own, you're not going to underestimate just what superior numbers can do to even out the playing field.

You're not leaving this up to chance. No fucking way in hell.

+ Oh, he's a big guy. + You hear Kirika's lip-licking, silky-smooth voice in your ear as you pull Muramasa free from its sheath with one hand. Feeling renewed strength course through your own tired frame at the mere contact with the cursed weapon, and dulling any pain left in your body into something you can easily ignore.

+ For you? + You find yourself pulsing back, just as you break into a dead run, right into the horde. You didn't even need to tell Wendy - the Callidus exploding into action and charging in alongside you, her shadows flitting about her with every step she took, cleavers manifesting in their see-through grips.

+ Hardly. I've taken bigger. + Kirika chuckles as a golden mist begins to fill your vision, tinting everything in the color of warm honey. + But we'll see if you can take it, eh, Murderface? See if you're actually up to the Blessed Lady's expectations. If you are, then... + Another chuckle, just as the horde finally senses your approach, each one turning from their embattled prey to turn upon you. Their distorted maws opening to scream your death in your face.

+ I'll be the first to congratulate you. On being the first sinner worthy enough to be redeemed. +

The horde meets you and Wendy head-on, and it's here that you feel the sword take you over once more. Just like it did earlier with Kyoko. Just like it did back then at Siberia, when you nearly murdered Midori in your own battle fugue.

But unlike those times, when consciousness left you mere moments before the battle began and returned when everything else around you was reduced to pools of biological wreckage sloshing against your ankles, you were there all throughout. Conscious all throughout.

Every slash, every cut, every disemboweling thrust that unleashed your opponent's guts to the floor in a slopping, wormish pile played out in front of you in slow, detailed playback. Every nuanced sensation of killing - the slightest resistance as Muramasa bit through armor, and the complete absence of it as the blade carved through meat and bone and sinew - coursing up your fingers and arms, to spike into your brain in stabs of hot, tactile pleasure.

And in this sensory overload, you also managed to behold Wendy cutting through the horde. Even with her injuries, even with the loss of her other hand, she was still a force to be reckoned with - her knife flashing in and out of existence as she cut with erratic, almost unpredictable swings. Each cut a death, or a crippling wound that saw her opponent tumbling to the floor in a graceless, tendon-severed tumble. The shadows around her - manifesting as tall, blonde phantasms with ghastly smiles frozen on their eyeless faces - mimicking her movements with devastating efficiency, turning the space around her into a bloody abbatoir.

It's here then, in this gold-tinted reaping of life, that you hear yourself begin to laugh. A laughter that only comes to those maddened few good enough and desperate enough to survive a melee this insane. A laughter that comes when a warrior's bloodlust denies the limits of his mortal body - fatigue, injury, even death - just to kill more and more and more.

+ THE FLESH, + You yell, still laughing, just as you hear Kirika herself yell in your mind. + OF FALLEN ANGELS. +

But just as you were beginning to feel yourself drown in the amber light of the fever - your entire body tingling with the pleasure of reaping so much life with ease - it's with a cold start that you find yourself shunted back into reality, the golden mist disappearing as quickly as it had appeared. You look down, and see that you've shoved Muramasa back into its sheath somehow, your Golden Desert Eagle in its place in your grip.

+ Have a care, Nameless One. + Dildoes' voice, icy with dignified fury, cuts through your core. + We nearly lost you there. +

You can't help but narrow your eyes here, as you immediately begin to make snap-shots around you, using the Desert Eagle in nearly point-blank range to deliver point-blank death. The gun kicking in your hand with nearly the same force and volume as Mami's own ivory rifles. You had everything under control, you snarl at your fallen incarnation. You were trying to get to Mami and Sayaka!

+ And so you did, + Dildoes replies. + But you were also about to take the blue one's head off her shoulders. We -- or at least, I -- had to do something. +

...You shake your head, before glancing around you. True enough, you'd managed to fight your way through the horde, now occupying the same ever-diminishing circle of space that Mami and Sayaka also occupied. Another glance and you see Wendy finally join you, her shadows briefly winking out of existence before manifesting again amidst breathy, waspish giggling.

"COOLDOWN! MURDERFACE!" Sayaka yells over the din, the glowing length of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie crackling in her hands. Sizzling the blood that had begun to coat it in the wake of such wanton slaughter. "WHERE THE FUCK WERE YOU? WHERE'S KYOKO?!"

"Now's not quite the time for that, Sayaka-san!" Mami replies before you could respond, crashing the butt of a rifle into the maw of something with two faces shrieking from one skull, before blasting its forehead open with a point-blank shot from the same gun. "What do we do about THAT?" She points one rifle at the towering goat-dildo, its eyes gleaming like coals as it draws nearer.

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam versus Magical Hanzer “Milly” Schulz

For someone who seems so eager to kill, Milly takes her sweet time advancing toward me. Each step carries that heavy, metallic clank I heard outside, as she draws closer and closer. While her face isn’t illuminated, I imagine she has an ugly, shit-eating grin right about now. Or a predatory smile. She probably is very pleased with how she’s found me.

Even thought I’m under the covers, I’m shivering. Every other time it felt like I was about to die, there was -something- there to mitigate the fear. Usually somebody was standing by for when things went to shit. But there’s nobody here to save me now. Tanis is fucking dead, and I’m completely alone with this psycho bitch, who I only beat last time due to a fluke.

Milly just stops at the foot of my bed and stands there, staring straight at me. Or I think she is, at least. I bring the covers up to my face, both of my hands clenching the sheet like it’s supposed to do a damn thing against her while she’s on a warpath.

“…Why?” I whimper. “Why are you doing this? I already said sorry-”

“Why?” Milly interrupts, her voice loud but still calm. “You really don’t understand why I’m angry?” I shake my head, and she actually sighs, setting one hand on her hips. “I’m angry because you took away my last vestiges of joy, you little miscreant.” She stabs her finger at me accusingly, growling, “and then you humiliated me, rather than accepting your just punishment. You denied me my deserved catharsis.”

Does she mean the garden? And the match she herself rigged so she could fight me? “I… I really don’t understand,“ I explain, adding an emphatic, “sorry.”

Milly slowly brings up her arms in front of her, the air sparking as her maces manifest in her hands. “Then die in ignorance,” she coldly orders.

I tear off the sheet and throw it at her as I fall out of the bed. I don’t wait for her reaction; I’m already getting my footing back and sprinting out the doorway as her maces destroy the bed in a deafening crash of metal on metal. I stop briefly to apologize to Tanis’s corpse (or hopefully just unconscious body) for getting her dragged into all this, before racing down the empty halls (where is everyone?!). I can see signs on the walls with arrows pointing to various locations, but I can’t tell what any of them mean. I need to find the exit. Gotta find somebody who can stop her-

“You’re not getting away this time, Eleanor!” screeches Milly from somewhere behind me, compelling me to run even faster. Her thunderous steps sound a lot quicker than the ones I remember from her last fight, but looking over my shoulder to check really isn’t going to help me in any way here.

Coming up on a sharp corner, I get an idea and will a spear into my power fist’s grip. I’ve never done this before, so I don’t know if this will help me at all, but my instincts are screaming at me to move as fast as I possibly can. As soon as I reach the bend, I jam the spear point into the ground, embedding it in the floor up to its handle. Like swinging around a pole on the playground, I let my momentum spin me around and launch myself from the spear without losing speed-

And slam into the wall hard enough for it to hurt like hell and make it crack. Fuck, this was a bad idea-

Something crashes into the wall next to me with tremendous force and a snarl of pain. Dust and bits of concrete explode from the impact site as if a bomb just went off, shrapnel flying down the way I just came. I don’t pause to gape at how narrowly I avoided annihilation; I throw myself from the wall and take off running again.

Soon Milly’s screams of rage resume, followed by the metal clanking sounds gaining on me. Holy fucking shit, what –is- she?

>> ☐ Attarou 12/21/14(Sun)15:27:28 No.36897119

“Somebody HELP!” I scream, though my tormentor’s sounds of pursuit mostly drown it out. I barrel through a set of doors, and it’s another fucking hallway. This place is a maze. Which way is out?! A row of closed doors leads to the far end of the hall, and all of them look pretty much identical. There’s a set of stairs heading down at the end; probably not the way out, but I can’t just keep running straight ahead. I don’t know how, or why, but I think Milly is catching up to me.

Hauling ass over the railing, I drop down the flight of stairs to the level below. My hat falls off and flops down the steps, so I just leave it behind and dash off. Behind me, there’s another crashing sound as the railing tumbles down the stairs and clatters to the ground. Milly’s terrifying gait resumes shortly after that; I bought myself a few seconds, but she’s going to catch me at this rate. I’m going as fast as I can, willing myself to go faster, and it’s not doing a fucking thing!

Coming up on an intersection, I get another idea. And while my brain is screaming it’s reckless and stupid, my body is already performing the motions. I run toward the closest wall and jump at it, flat boots slipping on the surface from a lack of friction. I don’t know how they got so dusty, but this ‘kick off the wall’ stunt just ends with me once again slamming my face into the wall, rattling one of my teeth loose. Throwing myself off the wall yet again, I spit it out and try to ignore the salty sting of blood in my mouth. I awkwardly stumble back and try to pick up speed again, my pacing thrown off by vertigo. Then, I become terribly aware of some things that stop me cold at the worst possible time:

Milly is roaring a shrill, wordless battle cry. The clanking footsteps are slowing down. And they’re –right next to me-.

I spin around and bring up my metal arm to block, just as a spiked mace smashes into it like the wrath of a hateful god.

I don’t just give up ground from the blow; the strike flings my body back, making it spin in midair and skip across the ground and walls. Each bounce brings agony as my bones fracture from the impact. I want to close my eyes until it’s over, until my vision shows something other than a tornado of whiteness. WHY THE FUCK WON’T MY BODY LISTEN TO ME?!

I crash into some kind of machine, plastic shards and bits of twisted metal raining down around me. I blink a few times, trying to make my world stop spinning. I can’t even summon the strength to stand or move; everything feels like it broke all at once.

A familiar shuffling sound makes my breath stop. Something white flutters into the edge of my vision, time seeming to slow down as the horrible thing descends. Scrabbling at the floor, I flip over and crawl away as fast as I fucking can. I keep my eyes to the ground, my heart drumming in panic. I bump into the corner of what might be a receptionist’s counter – I don’t care what it is. I don’t fucking CARE! I am NOT going to die from a fucking Vanus trance!

The booming sound of Milly’s slow, stomping footsteps gives my cowardice strength I didn’t know it had. Everything throbs, stings, burns, or aches, but, after falling down a couple times, I get back on my feet. I’m power limping down another corridor, looking desperately for some place to hide. All the doors are shut, though, and even my panicked brain remembers that an open door is suspicious as hell.

...I stagger towards a door at the end of an intersection and try to push it open, but it doesn’t budge. The handle won’t turn at first, but my robotic arm tears it out. With that bitch drawing closer, I throw the door open enough to make it slam against the wall. That brings her running.

I go around the corner and hobble through even more of the glaring white labyrinth.

Even over my heavy breathing, I can still hear Milly’s hateful screams. It’s starting to sound far away now, but not far enough for me to feel safe. Not when explosions and gunfire punctuate them. I hoped for a second that it meant security arrived to deal with her, but her angry shouting and cacophonic running resumes shortly afterwards.

Everything is starting to take its toll on my body, but I keep moving. Any doors I try to open are locked up tight.

Fuck this. Fuck all of this.

I tear open the closest door I can reach, and toss the handle inside the room. Then do the same for another door nearby. And a third one a ways down the hall.

Okay, now… What was I going to do? I'm starting to get dizzy again, and I feel like I want to throw up, but I was going to do something. It's… it's something that I can't remember the name of thanks to this lightheaded feeling, but it's some kind of plan… starts with an 'o' maybe?

Well, whatever, the word's not important right now. I tear open one more door between the last two, and then duck inside. Crawling through the dark, I bump my head into something metallic – fuck, fuck… it's… it's just a headache, nothing huge, keep going – and feel my way around it. I think that it's another hospital bed. Those are things that you can hide behind, right?

At the sound of one of the rooms being ransacked – fuck, I thought I had more time – I move behind the bed-thing and look back. The light coming from the hallway is easy to see, and distressingly not obscured by anything but a few thin bars. If she turned on the lights, she'd see me right away. Gotta find somewhere else, something-

The destructive commotion is closer this time, and Milly sounds even angrier this time. I want to stop, but I keep looking for cover.

By now, her clanking is right outside this room. I drop behind what I hope is a nightstand just as she hurls the door open.

I can't see shit from where I'm facing, though even with the blood pumping in my ears, Milly's sounds of approach ring clear. I grab my knees and hug them as close as I can, curling up into the tiniest ball possible, and hope to anything I can hope to that this nightmare would end soon. Or at least end painlessly.

Milly's erratic footfalls echo through the place. There's a flash of blue light before a thunderclap erupts somewhere far too close to me. The stink of ozone fills the air as a jagged bolt of lightning dances across the wall I'm facing.

Fuck, I could have kept moving instead of hiding where she could find me. Maybe I'm too fucking tired for moving, but I still could have at least tried. Now she has me cornered and is going to kill me really fucking slowly. Why? Why the fuck have I been so FUCKING STUPID today? Why the fuck was I so stupid as to fight back during the Eversor examination? I could have just let her pummel me and gone back to business as usual until Checkers bailed me out somehow.

A shrill grunt of effort behind me indicates that she just lifted something up. She rips that 'something' apart with metallic squealing and hurls it at the ceiling. I hear it crash, and the sound of bits of… whatever the ceiling is made of, I hear that fall down and break on the ground.

I don't hear the metal thing fall down.

I curl up even tighter, pressing my eyes into my knees until I start seeing colors. My leg is starting to fall asleep because my metal hand is gripping it so hard. This is it. This is how I die: curled up in a ball, far away from home, after struggling hard… and accomplishing absolutely nothing. Tears of indignation and shame well up in my eyes, mixing with the cold sweat dripping down my face.

I know I deserve bad things. I know that, but… but this is just too much.

Checkers… Suzi… Russ… Jael… Crunch…

Somebody please help. I don't want to die like this…

>> ☐ Attarou 12/21/14(Sun)15:31:33 No.36897192

…Milly's plodding, metallic footsteps move away from me, and back into the hallway. The pace picks up as they run toward the last room I opened. I swallow hard, the metallic tang of blood reminding me just why I'm hiding from her this time, and lift my head up to rest it on my knees. I try to breathe in and wait for the spots and blobs of color to go away.

…Oh. I hadn't even realized I was holding my breath until just now. I let it out with a gasp as chaos breaks out in the next room. Milly is smashing stuff, electrocuting things, and shooting everything from the sound of things. She lets out a long, frustrated scream after the din dies down – I haven't heard her use words in quite some time. Does she even remember how to do that?

Finally, FINALLY, Milly's warpath heads away from me; her sounds of indiscriminate destruction fade out as she stalks the halls again, not even running at this point. Maybe she's tired. Or maybe she just wants to draw it out. I don't know, and I don't fucking care.

First things first: After I catch my breath, I quietly limp to an unopened room and break the handle as gently as I can. This time, after I go in, I shut the door behind me and feel around for a light switch. My shaking hand finds something promising and tries to flip it, but it's not moving… oh, it's a button. I press it, and find myself in a room that is pretty much identical to the one I woke up in. Now, if it's the same kind of room, with the same kind of bed, that means they have an emergency call button thing. I stumble over to the bed and fight the instinct to lie down and rest. It's late as fuck, and I'm tired as fuck, but I have to do these things.

I push the button, and a little light comes on. I... I don't know what to do next, but I hope that this means somebody's coming to help. I hope they can deal with Milly better than me or Tanis could.

…Fuck… Tanis is dead because of me…

I mull this over while going to the sink. Before now, before –this-, whenever I was at my absolute worst, I could take solace in one thing. I could remind myself that at least nobody's –dead- because of me. And now I can't even fucking do that.

…I grab a cup and fill it with water, and take a big sip. As tempting as it is to drink, I swish it around in my mouth before spitting into the sink. And I keep doing so until the water is no longer stained red, so that can I drink it up without choking like a moron. Yeah, it hurts to drink water on an empty stomach, but everything hurts anyway. What difference is it going to make? And I'm going to need a lot of fluids anyway, for all the crying I'm doing.

…Jesus Christ… you're crying like a little bitch again. Grow the fuck up, Eleanor. No wonder everyone treats you like a kid. You can't even stop yourself from crying anymore.

I finally have a chance to look myself over and see what kind of damage I let Milly do to me. There weren't as many broken bones or sprains as I had thought there were, but holy fuck… she put a spike-shaped dent in the battle arm. Crunch spent her own savings on it, and the people at the Second seemed so proud of it when they finished, talking about how strong and durable it was… and I've somehow gone and ruined it. Fuck me.

I remove the bits of clothing covering the sore parts and break out the first aid kit. It shows that I have no fucking idea what I'm doing when I've finished attempting to patch myself up. The bandages don't feel like they've been put on right, and I'm completely sure I forgot to do something important, but it'd probably be a waste of good medical supplies. They should be saved for somebody who needs them. I leave the kit out before putting my costume back on.

My heart's not pounding like a jackhammer anymore, and my breathing's gone back to normal. I did what I could with my injuries, drank some water, called for help…

…So what now? What do I do? Hell, what the fuck –can- I do? Saying sorry isn't going to bring someone back to life. Even capturing Milly isn't going to fix this.

It's my fault. It's my fucking fault. Because I didn't let Milly vent her anger in that duel, when there weren't any important things at stake-

No, before that. It's because I let my own anger get the better of me and trashed something she cared about. I destroyed something she worked hard at, just because I was having a bad day. Sure, she was mean to me… and everything was awful… but that's no excuse to hurt someone and break their things in a fucking temper tantrum.

And now, in spite of everyone's help, this is all I've managed to do. I just… I just make everything worse for people. Even Crunch didn't deserve the kind of guilt that my inability to defend myself brought her. Even if it was shortsighted… she really thought she was doing the right thing. And if I wasn't so fucking weak, it might have worked.

…I don't even care that I'm crying right now. The only one who can see it is me, and if my day getting worse means I'll finally be out of everyone's hair…

I will the blue gemstone around my neck to appear in my hand, and take a long, hard look at it. The soul gem's pretty, azure blue color is only slightly tainted by corruption. I run my metal hand over the smooth, polished surface, and make a fist. If I could just break this thing, then all this shit would be over. I mean, people might be sad. But they'd get over it, I'm sure.

…Really, it'd be doing them a favor.

…It's the nicest thing I can do for them.

…The gem reappears around my worthless neck as I glare angrily at the awful person in the mirror. You goddamn coward. You selfish piece of shit. You should have broken the goddamn thing already. You could have –helped- people.

Hey man, I am sorta frustrated that it doesn't really feel like we have any choice other than riding the Wendy train. I noticed it before, but this thread it feels even worse than usual. For example when we asked her if she still wanted us to be her Kong I read it as more a moment of asking if we she really wanted to try what with how much she is fucking up, but the next options all sorta felt like we were accepting her confession or something. I am one of the people who really don't like Wendy at all really, so maybe I am just being salty over how much we have to interact with her, but that's how I feel. None of the offered choices were significant from each other.

Also any write in will almost never gain a majority in that situation so it feels a bit like a kick in the teeth. Also any chance we can stop dealing with Wendy? As said, I really don't like her and am getting seriously sick of her nonsense. It was bad enough when she was just a write up character, but now it feels like she is being shoved down my throat.

I splash some cold water on my face and wipe off some of the snot with a paper towel. I guess all I can do is sit tight until somebody shows up. IF somebody shows up, that is.

I study my reflection one last time, for what good it will do me, and frown even harder. Something feels off, but I don't know what it is. It's just me though. And all the self-deprecation aside, there's nothing unusual to look at – it's the same curly lavender hair, same amber eyes, same childlike complexion, same soul gem-

The soul gem in the mirror is black.

I tear out my soul gem in shock. It's black. It's fucking black. It's turned black and it's starting to crack. How? Why? Whywhywhywhywhy? HOW? NO! I don't want to hurt these people! I DON'T WANT TO BE A WITCH!

I try to put the gem back. Put it back and everything will be okay. But it's not okay. My soul gem just shattered, its gilding left completely hollow.

I immediately clutch my head in agony as sharp points puncture my skull from the inside. Bits of metal force their way through my skin, the buzz of corruption drowning out my thoughts. Blackness drips out from the metal pen nubs, the horrible, nauseating smell of ink becoming my world. I cry, and my tears become ink. My nose leaks ink. My mouth fills with the bitter poison that is ink, spilling from my lips like drool as I start to scream. The same scream that my witch form acknowledged me with.

"NO!" I cry out, and smash the mirror into pieces.

...Like waking from a bad dream, my awareness returns. The pain from before is gone, and the air just smells like antiseptic. There's no buzzing in my head or anything, and… yes, my gem is still the same color it was before.

My heart's beating like crazy again, though. Sounds like-

"FOUND YOU!" screeches Milly triumphantly from the doorway, making me jump in surprise. Oh god, my outburst just fucked me over in the worst way.

Whatever happened to Milly, it hit her bad. Her normally braided hair is in wild disarray, and the part of her outfit that covers her stomach shredded and burnt. She doesn’t look like a magical girl anymore. With the crazed, hateful look in her eyes and tight-lipped smile, she looks like a monster. A monster that’s come here to tear me apart.

An uncharacteristic giggle forces its way out of her lips as she shambles over. “I’m going to wash away the disgraces you dealt me,” she murmurs, voice carrying a slight singsong quality to it. “I’ll wash them away with your –blood-, Eleanor.”

I take a step forward and bring up my arms in a show of surrender. “Please-“

“SHUT UP!” she barks, grabbing my normal arm and yanking me over. I stumble forward and bang my head against her stomach. There’s some kind of metal plating there, concealed beneath her skin. “Do you see now what you made me do?” she snarls, pulling her face close. “I had to sacrifice parts of my own body for these augmentations; parts that were perfectly serviceable, but not strong enough on their own.” Milly narrows her eyes at me. “You made me compromise my own beauty for the power to crush fools like you.”

I shake my head at her accusation. “How is that my fault?” I ask her. I mean, I blame myself for a lot of things, but you did this to yourself.

“And, unlike the pitiful little heap of junk those fanatical zealots tossed together for you,” she continues, ignoring me completely, “-my- augmetics were created by the Mechanicus of the Fourth Officio.”

“W-who?“

Milly giggles oddly again. “You really don’t know anything, do you?” she taunts, releasing my arm. “They make the most cutting-edge machinery of any Officio. Of any organization. This is only fitting for one such as me.” The tight-lipped smile returns as she looms over me, asking, “Do you understand what that means?”

I shake my head and slowly back away, hoping to distract her with more conversation. But she isn’t having any of that, and grabs me by the wrist. I struggle against it, tugging until my boots slip on the ground, but I can’t budge an inch. Now my arm’s sore, which is probably the least worrying thing.

“It means new legs! New arms! Toxin filters! Automatic weaponry!” she exclaims, crushing my toes with her foot stomp and making me scream in agony. Worse pain joins already horrible pain, as she starts squeezing my flesh and bone arm in her grip. I try to pry it off with my robotic arm, but it won’t budge! Why won’t it move?! Is it because it’s made of metal now?

“IT MEANS I AM STRONGER THAN YOU!” Milly snarls, and with cruel irony and a crueler smile, rips out my normal arm with a loud pop. I crumple to the ground, unable to stand.

“IT MEANS I AM FASTER THAN YOU!” she declares, kicking my shin until it snaps with a loud crunch. I’m starting to lose awareness of anything but the pain.

“IT MEANS I AM BETTER THAN YOU!” she screams, grabbing my body by the waist. She hurls me back at the wall. My body hits with a loud splat, and my insides paint the walls.

…I can’t feel anything anymore. I think everything just broke.

“DO YOU SEE, ELEANOR?” Milly asks, dashing over with heavy footsteps. “THE BEST AUGMETICS IN THE WORLD ARE –MINE-! AND YOU! ARE! NOTHING!”

…I can’t see her anymore, and my head refuses to turn. Then everything goes dark, and Milly’s bragging muffles to the point that I can’t understand it. The only good thing to come of this is that I can’t feel how much everything hurts now, but it’s starting to get cold…

…This can’t be how it ends. I can’t accept it. It’s not just unfair. It’s… it’s stupid. That… that bitch is blaming me for her own bad decisions. And I have to die because of it?

…Fuck… I don’t want to die…

…I don’t know how long it is before the world comes rushing back to me. I’m staring at a puddle of blood between my legs that hasn’t even dried yet… can I move? Yeah, I can move. I can turn my head and see the signs of my recent mutilation all over the wall.

…What the fuck? Wasn’t I just dying? While my blood and guts still decorate the walls, somehow I’m okay. I’m not even hurting anymore. I’m not even –tired- anymore. How did this happen? Didn’t my arm get ripped off? What the fuck?

I can see Milly sprawled on the ground, her wings laying flat. Her teeth are clenched, her eyes are shut, and she’s groaning in pain. There’s a double-headed axe buried in her spine; it’s surrounded by several wounds of similar shape. Somebody got in a few sneak attacks on her. Next to Milly is a pile of something translucent and brown, covered in blood. It kind of looks like... skin.

“I told you,” murmurs a determined, if quiet voice, “visiting hours are over.”

She looks… completely uninjured. She’s in much better shape than I thought she was before. As in, she’s alive, moving, and breathing. And she’s shed the surgeon’s gown for what can generously be called a bandeau, and a bow around her neck.

I groan a little as I pick myself up, and Tanis looks over at me. Her expression falls into nervous concern. “Are you okay?” she asks. “Can you walk?”

Taking a few steps forward, I nod dumbfounded.

Tanis smiles again. “Then, uh, we should probably run,” she informs me, removing her axe from Milly’s back. I couldn’t agree more.

Unfortunately, Milly has other plans. Already back on her feet, she brandishes her maces at Tanis. “I don’t know how you’re still alive, freakshow,” Milly growls at her, hefting her weapons, “but I won’t let you interfere again!” Tanis has enough time to turn around just to see Milly swing down to split her skull.

...With Milly distracted, I could make a break for it. I mean, Tanis came back from certain death before, and I'm pretty sure she brought me back from the brink as well. So she'll be fine. I keep telling myself that as time seemingly slows to a crawl, Milly's mace heading straight for the crown of Tanis' head.

…Fuck. I'm going to die if I fight here. I'm actually going to die. I don't have my soul gem safely tucked away in a little box, it's still right here with me… maybe Milly would stop hurting people if she got to kill me?

…No.

No.

Fuck that.

Fuck all of this bullshit.

But most of all, fuck you, Milly.

I spring forward and bring my metal fist back. Milly isn't quick enough with her strike; not slowing down at all, I punch at her mace head and deflect the attack. The weapon hits the ground heavily and embeds itself in the floor with a crash. My body is trembling in sheer terror as I pull Tanis back. Both Milly and Tanis gape at me, Milly more in shock, while Tanis is in awe.

I can't believe I just did that… no, no I can believe I just did that. I know why I did that. I don't give a fuck what happens to me, but Fuckerfly can't drag other people into her meltdowns. Tanis was just taking care of me because it was her job.

"Milly," I growl through clenched teeth, making her lip twitch in displeasure at the name, "even if I wronged you…"

Making a fist, I will a large spear into existence in my metal hand, which forces my fingers apart as it appears. I grasp it, lower it, and point it at Fuckerfly in challenge.

"…that's no excuse for you to hurt other people!" I exclaim with indignation.

Fuckerfly scoffs at me, ripping her weapon out of the ground. "Do you earnestly believe that you can win, you worm?" she sneers.

I shake my head. "No," I answer with brutal honesty, "but I'm gonna try anyway."

Trials of the Thrice-Cursed: X-chapter
The Nightmare Returns, part 2

This wasn't going anywhere.

I stopped my wild chase suddenly, my patience for aimless things having ran out. It wasn't good enough to give it my all, I needed to do this smartly rather than rashly. I barely paid any attention to the environment around me as I changed my plans on dime, the tall hedges meaning nothing to me.

It was easy to muster up the energy I needed; the power of this mad realm flowing all around me was like an all-you-can-eat buffet of magical force ripe for the taking; if you didn't mind the fact that it all tasted like Sorrows and was probably very bad for your health. Personally I was already used to pain, so the phantom feelings that flowed through me as I reached out for ethereal treads were familiar. I closed my eyes and the noise filled my mind as tiny, spider-like strands of the raw stuff of Unreality wrapped around my fingers and wrists.

Everything was a mess at first. Dozens of voices trying to crush one another in a horrible cacophony of screams, desperate pleas and hateful curses against life itself; dozens of pictures trying to supplant one another like as many semi-transparent TV screens merging together in one indescribable, unreadable mess.

STOP.

The noise refused to calm down even as I tried to bend it to my will, but the most distant voices vanished, leaving the ensemble slightly less sickeningly disorienting. With them, they took the images associated with their essence. I remained motionless and slowly, one by one, nine orange flames lit up around me, each at roughly equal distance of one another and one or two meter away from me. I could not see them just yet, but I could sense the heat and hear the cracking of their embers.

>> ☐ Zweihart 12/21/14(Sun)15:44:50 No.36897418

I focused my thoughts, shooing away the part of my brain that joined with the voices to scream at me how much of a retard I was for starting this ritual without properly checking my surroundings first. For all I knew, seconds might still matter, so it was a sacrifice of recklessness I was prepared to make. She was here. I knew she was here. I could definitely sense her presence now, somewhere far away... Now if I could only put the finger on where...

As I opened my eyes, the noises and images stopped, as if siphoned by the Warpfire. Within each flame, a solitary memory of an unknown source was held for me to observe more carefully. I could not move without breaking the treads, so the Flames moved for me. slowly, they rotated as one, keeping their perfect circle as they moved, and I peered deep into the orange blazes. Suddenly, a gruesome snapping sound caught my attention along with a sudden surge of pain. The pain itself was enough to tell me that it was my right shoulder, which had spontaneously dislocated from the magical feedback flowing into me from the strands of memories. I would have to take care of this immediately.

But for now I still had a bitch to find. The flames rotated faster and faster until they abruptly stopped. As I looked into the flame that stopped before me I knew instinctively this was the location I wanted. I knew that was where she was:

Some sort of large, tall building of some description filled to the brim with Daemon creatures with goat-like features.

Well that didn't help me at all, there's hundreds of those in this damned place!

I let the treads retreat to the fabric of the realm and brought my left hand to catch the dying sparks of the flame before me as it shattered.

I'm curious as to what about the Malal write-ups cause such an urge for vitriol.
There have certainly been write-ups I didn't like, and I could even understand saying as much in the thread if you lack tact or it's somehow important, but this elaborate campaign of abuse boggles the mind. To first care enough about the quest/write-up to feel this strongly in the first place, and then actually go to the effort of putting it down so thoroughly, are both bizarre things.

It was faint, but I managed to catch scent of the trail. It would be difficult to explain what I meant by that because this pocket hell disregarded the logics and laws of the real world so much that sometimes senses became jumbled and mixed up. I couldn't have found words good enough to describe the feeling of "hearing" colors or "tasting" the bitter touch of cold even if I had been on acid, and I can be quite wordy when I'm on acid.

I barely had enough time to acknowledge my new destination before some sort of whip raked my back with surprising strength and made me stagger, bringing my attention back to the Unreality around me. I would have told myself 'told you so', but I already had enough issues without adding 'talking to myself like a schizophrenic bitch' to the list.

The maze of hedges around me had come alive, as if the whole quivering vegetal mass was one, single, malevolent consciousness. It was probably part of a Witch, so that was more likely than not close to the truth. I had to dance to avoid the onslaught that followed; dozens of large vine-like tendrils covered in thorns flailed and struck out at me with no pattern or logic to observe. I brought my left hand to my right shoulder and snapped it back into place as I continued to whirl and leap through the assaults of the vegetal demon. Once this issue resolved, I looked out for options.

My first reaction would have been to jump and get out of this maze to get a top view and take a shortcut, but it turns out while I was focused on my spell the giant hedges have grown to easily a hundred meters, which threw that option out the window. I had no choice but to fight my way through this maze... which was the absolute last goddamned thing I wanted to have to do when I was on a timer like this.

Fuck it. Fuck this thing, fuck it to oblivion. Everything that stands between me and her will BURN. I'll obliterate it all.

The familiar scent of brimstone pleased me as it filled my nostrils, the energy it heralded coating my claws warmly. Mere seconds later it was unleashed; a purple Hellfire that set the ground around me ablaze and incinerated the vines foolish enough to try to hit me through them.

Everything will burn and turn to ashes.

The vegetal mass produced some sort of inhuman, disembodied scream as more purple flames seared though the hedge closest to me, leaving nothing in its wake but black ashes and a charred hole around the point of the impact of my projectile. I proceeded through onto a path that led straight in the direction I wanted.

The vines never stopped trying to grasp at me; trying to ensnare me, but it was futile. Thorns grazed and grazed, but nothing held. I was just too fast for it and what tried to block my path was ripped by either my claws or teeth. I've never had Witch-greens before. I expected it to have a different texture at least, but it tastes the same as flesh. So much for 'eat your veggies', but that's fine too. It's actually not bad at all once you get used to the after-taste.

I had hoped I could just avoid the Witch's main body, but it seemed like the center of the Labyrinth was dead ahead. On second thought, I could probably use the additional Grief Seeds. There was no way to tell how long I was going to be here nor how my Soul Gem would react to certain... stimuli. This thing would pay for getting in my way.

As I closed the distance, the maze started to shift and change, as if trying to interdict passage. Several layers' worth grew out to block the path but I incinerated right through and charged in ahead. The hedges tried to close behind and in front of me to trap me inside, but it was a futile gesture since I could just-- what?

Its not his writeups. Its a single person who clearly has it out for Malal who's using the anonymity of 4chan in a crusade against the guy.

>> ☐ Zweihart 12/21/14(Sun)15:47:58 No.36897484

A number of different vines, smaller and thornless ones, all converged on me. This time I didn't have enough space to move to avoid them all and many pierced right through while others coiled around my limbs. I immediately tore through but I could already feel the harm was done; poison was starting to sap my strength. Another horde of vines was generated by the vegetal mass and flew right back at me, putting me back in my precarious situation despite the swipes of my claws slicing down many. This was going to be a problem.

I gritted my teeth when a dozen more green needles stabbed through my body, but I'd be damned if 'id let this pathetic creature do me in now. I let it play its game with its poison and think I was growing weak and harmless, but its sadistic ways would be a fatal flaw as I closed my claws into fists and built up magic within. The process took no more than 10 seconds, but with the assortment of poisons numbing at my senses and the complete darkness I was in, it felt like more. Isn't it peculiar how even while looking like non-sentient beasts, Witches like this can still savour inflicting pain on others?

Another disembodied, out of this world shriek resounded as I immolated myself and everything else in a large radius, reducing my entire vegetal prison to ashes. The Hedge seemed to "recoil" in pain, temporarily stunned and making no attacks. This was fortunate, because my own body didn't make it unscathed either; my kimono had been destroyed and most of my skin was burned. My regeneration kicked in as I reached into my inventory for my Rose, flicking the container open and taking an extra-strong dose to counteract the poison.

I find it amusing that even the people who hate write-ups entirely are baffled by this guy.

>> ☐ Zweihart 12/21/14(Sun)15:49:00 No.36897499

My body flinched and recoiled as well. The drug wasn't an antidote, far from it, so instead of "curing" the poisons, it was more like having two hostile unnatural substance fighting for control over your body by flooding it with complete opposite effects. Not a very good solution, but it'd have to do for now.

I shoved the metal container right back into my Inventory and moved on. The Witch was still writhing from my last trick so I needed to seize the initiative even though my body would still take a bit longer to heal those burns.

I sprinted, giving all my speed into getting through the last of the maze despite my body's protests. Learning to ignore those were one of the first things any Eversor needed to do anyway. That was especially true when you were a Monat with no teammates to rely on to save your ass when you get in trouble.

The gates opened of their own and the sight I was greeted by was a particularly nasty one. Untold numbers of giant and mutated plant life were fused into one deformed and senseless abomination that would actually be worthy of the "indescribable Eldritchian horror" label medias seem to be so fond of nowadays. What really struck me though were the roots. Giant, impossibly large, half-exposed quivering roots that reached outwards from the central room. As I saw them I finally understood; the entire labyrinth IS the Witch's body.

A gaping maw opened from one of the twisted monstrosity's sides and it puked out what I could only describe as a torrent of acidic bile in my general direction. I managed to jump high enough to avoid the bulk of it, but some splashes hit my legs with a sickening sizzle. And I had just healed that too, bastard... I landed on my hands because the inner damage to my legs wouldn't let them support my weight until they were healed. I immediately pushed, propelling myself back into the air and adjusting to an upside down vision.

>> ☐ Zweihart 12/21/14(Sun)15:50:06 No.36897519

A lone tendril much larger than the previous ones -large enough to break my body in half if it hit - surged forth from the main body of the Witch while I was in mid-air, but my claws went through its mass like butter, cleaving it into impotent halves while I prepared my magic. With my legs too damaged to stand and my hands thus busy I had to improvise and gathered mana by my feet. They were damaged, but not too damaged for me to find them a use.

As I landed once more on my hands I flung forward two bolts of volatile energy with my feet, using my legs' remaining muscles. I was unbalanced by the endeavor and narrowly avoided falling forward flat before I pushed again and returned to mid-air. The attack didn't do much damage to the thing's sheer mass, but it bought me time as the Witch brought forward a thick weave of vines to shield itself. I repeated the process two more times before I was finally able to land on my feet once more, my regeneration having handled the acid by then.

The green mass belched some sort of distorted roar as it dispersed its blackened weave-shield. several more maw-like appendages rose from the main body in the twisted image of giant, bastardized versions of carnivorous plants filled with more rows of teeth than the nastiest of sharks. It was in times like this that I missed my old chainaxe. My claws could pierce nearly anything with ease, but they lacked the raw destructive power to just mow sheer mass and bulk down expediently.

I didn't have much time for regret as the ground I had been standing on mere fractions of seconds earlier was now filled with a giant mess of green cells and teeth that chewed at the soil with a disgusting noise punctuated by suctions. I landed onto it and sliced it open before getting back in motion. The giant appendages chased me, trying to corner me as they lashed and trashed, but I had recovered enough by now to keep them at bay, detonating or slashing down one whenever I had the chance. I managed to win some ground inwards, making my way towards the central body as I kept the appendages bu--

Darkness.

Ok what the fuck. How does this damn Witch keeps managing to blindside me like that, it's getting embarrassing. No, more importantly than that, why the fuck does it keep trying to eat me? Can't it see I'm not edible? If this stupid thing tries to eat me one more time I swear on the Blessed Lady's holy bosom I'm going to have Grief Salad tonight.

More acid rained down onto my body as I detonated another Doombolt inside the death trap of a flower but I paid it no mind. At this point my whole body had been wrecked three times over and reached far past the point where lesser Magical Girls would have been long dead, but injuries meant nothing when you had a goal that you were ready to lay down your life for.

I could feel the magic flowing literally through my body as it held me together and fueled my body, replacing tissue and tendons where they had melted. I had enough of this Witch, so I prepared a grand finale for it. My speed increased, further fueled by Empyrean energies as I weaved through more of the vegetal abomination's defenses and finally reached directly above its towering mass, baleful powers flaming upon my claws.

"If you want me this badly then HAVE SOME YOU SHIT!"

It opened its giant, primary maw and I dove, only to unleash a few seconds later utter destruction from within. Bolt after bolt, I continued with a vengeful fury until the Witch was nothing but charred stains across the central room and at the height of which I almost lost myself to destructive frenzy... and hunger...

I replenished my Grief Seed stash as the Barrier fell apart and I only now realized my... lack of any clothing whatsoever. My body had been burned so much that not even a single shred of my kimono remained. This wouldn't have bothered me all that much, but I was unable to head back to get a new one. I had to press forward... but on the flip side I couldn't let her see me like that. Not after all this time. Not after she probably forgot about me. I couldn't just stroll up to her stark naked she'd think I was some kind of fucked up sexual devi-- ok maybe I -am- that but I still have standards.

I needed to find some sort of solution and FAST. My mind raced to try to come up with something, but kept drawing blanks, the stress helping no one. Urgency and frustration rose when the seconds became minutes and I grew increasingly impatient, boiling inside at my own inability to find something, until finally I was inspired.

Ribbons.

Of course, I had heard stories that she could craft all sorts of things from her ribbons so if I tried to apply the same logic, then perhaps, just perhaps, while I'm in here...

Strands and treads of Unreality were pried apart by my fingertips and weaved themselves together, almost as if they had a mind of their own, guided by the designs in the back of my mind. When I looked back down it looked like I was clad in a Barrier, literally. The cloth was iridescent and colors flowed across it like the reflections of the skies on a body of water. Honestly, it was beautiful, entrancingly so, and I had to take several second to manage to pry my eyes away.

But I had wasted so much time already, I needed to hurry and reach my destination before the trail grew too cold.

Five Red Petals
Chapter Two - Sausage Links

I wasn't really a fan of breakfast food.

Scrambled eggs weren't really my thing. And sausage links would always be so goddamn oily to the point where it started to give you a headache. Eh, whatever. At least the pancakes had cinnamon in it.

Not that I was much a fan of pancakes, either. Much less breakfast food at all.

God, these fucking sausages.

The cafeteria was kind of what you'd expect from a military base: ordinary white tile floors, ordinary white walls, ordinary white ceiling and lights.

…Jesus, how long have I been here anyways? Must've been at least… two hours or something. I mean, there wasn't much to do, but just sitting here feels so… so idle. Unproductive. Something like that.

I pushed aside my plate for the tenth time and checked my watch. Still a good hour till we were supposed to leave.

Why the hell didn't I sleep in a bit longer?

"C'mon, Eve. Eat up. Can't fight on an empty stomach."

Lauren shot me an innocent glare from across the table, as if were in a game of chess and I had just captured her Queen. Not every day you hear a chess metaphor, is it.

And so, the plate found itself back in front of me, the only thing changing being the amount of holes in the sausages and eggs, while the pancake slowly disappeared. Very slowly. Painfully slowly.

"I'm not even hungry." I cut a sausage in half with my fork, then cut it up some more.

"Are you full?"

"No."

"Then keep eating."

God dammit. I mean… they're not even vegetables - not that I skip out on those. Can't I just go?

"What're you going to do till four, anyways?"

…Tch.

"I was just kidding, by the way. Just sit tight, Cynthia and Rachel'll be here soon, anyways."

Are you serious?

Popped another sausage and chunk of pancake into my mouth, glaring and almost grinning at Lauren. She gave me another evil look. Checkmate.

Took them long enough. The two girls walked through the double doors, and despite the lack of a grandiose look, drew the attention of… well, most, if not all, of the cafeteria. Teenage girls at a maximum security prison headquarters, something you don't see everyday.

Cynthia clutched a bunch of papers in one hand, her short, twin blonde twintails giving her figure more… flow - I guess - with every step.

Rachel, on the other hand, had dirty blonde hair tied in a bun under a baseball cap.

I mean, I guess that's enough justification? No one really wears something as casual as a baseball cap here. Just helmets, wheel covers, and garrison caps. Or something else related.

Cynthia threw her papers onto the table as I pushed aside my plate, unrolling them, revealing a map of Varrigan City. Rachel laid her rifle on one side of the paper to keep the paper from rolling back up.

>> ☐ Steph 12/21/14(Sun)15:58:50 No.36897698

>>36897680
The city was a triangle, kind of. Cynthia'd really taken the time to play with it. Sections of the city were labeled: "Horzine HQ" next to "Casino Town" in the northwest corner of the island, "Chinatown" directly south of that. "Downtown" was more of a generic area, stretching into the bottom corner, and the residential district filling up the northeastern corner. And some kind of huge natural park was smacked right into the center of the whole thing.

"Is a plan really the best idea?" Lauren sighed, eyes scanning the map. "I doubt we can stick to any kind of plan in such a… place.

She was right, I think. Where the hell did she get all this info, anyways?

"Previous excursions. And we can definitely keep a plan. We're magical girls, we'd be able to force anything upon anyone." Cynthia crossed her arms, puffing her chest with confidence, seemingly unwilling to budge from her statement.

Just saying that seemed like a death flag.

"Mmm? Is that why half the last group didn't make it back?" Lauren stole a sausage from my (pushed aside) plate.

"They pro'lly just screwed up hard. Nothing we can't not do." Miss Tactician pointed out a big circle with the letters "DZ" in it. "This is where we're dropping off. Residential district, then we'll be heading along the highway into Chinatown, then up to Horzine. Survive fucking everything. Evac's wherever we pop a smoke."

"…That's it? I thought you were planning something more bold, with everything you got planned there." Lauren popped another sausage into her mouth. Rachel took a seat next to me and decided to take one of her own, too.

"I'm not stupid enough to not realize that flexibility is key. I honestly don't even know half 'f what the hell we're gonna see out there." She then pointed to several points marked with crosshairs. "Did make sure Rachel could have a bit of fun though, with that rifle of hers."

Rachel smiled a bit.

"Flight leaves in like half an hour. I'll see you all at the chopper."

Seriously, the write ups are shit, but this is not the way to go about voicing any effective discontent. ---= SOLATIUM || PART 1 || ARXBOUND =---

Where the hell is it!?

I had swept my vision across the large room I stood in several times now, my focus entirely on my senses of sight and hearing. I had been hunting this witch for several days now, yet it's managed to evade me at every turn. After all, it's the first time that I had to deal with one that could turn invisible at will. At first it baffled me how something so large was so hard to find, but after I had witnessed one of its familiars fade from view it all made sense. It was only a matter of time before I found the 'boss room' after that, this witch had no choice but to face me so long as I was--

The moment my ears caught the rush of air, my shield went up, just in time to meet the impact. I pressed my central weight down and dug my heels into whatever strange material the ground here was made of. In addition, I angled my shield to try to deflect the giant object that just crashed into me, though the fact I couldn't see it made it hard to judge what it was exactly.

An intense silver glow had appeared at the point of impact, which quickly dispersed down my body. The moment it reached the ground under my greaves, a spider web of cracks radiated out along the surface, the shockwave kicking up dust and debris. Regardless of what it looked like, it felt like a truck just tried to run me over, and if it wasn't for my magic the damage would likely have resembled that.

Now wasn't the time to worry about these things, though. In the next instant, the weapon in my other hand had thrust up in a counterattack, and the blade at the tip stabbed into something rock hard. That was when I pulled the trigger.

<BANG>

The loud burst vibrated my body to the very core, followed shortly by the monstrous screech of the witch as it had become visible. The witch's arm, which ended in a mace shape, literally hung off of it by a couple of sinews. The witch's form was nothing special, resembling a tall humanoid with no head and a single large eye at chest height. The part that did catch my attention though were the peculiar wings on its back, which looked like they comprised of undulating, papery shadows.

Without skipping a beat, I had drawn back my weapon and swung it downwards, the blade sparked as it struggled to cut through the witch's skin. Once it reached the end of the arc and collided with the ground, I hammered on the trigger as many times as I could, each pull had let loose another loud burst into the legs of the hideous being. Another inhuman shriek pierced my now dulled hearing, as it collapsed down, surely unable to escape at this point. I jumped back out of the way as it had swung at me with its last good limb. My hair blew wildly to the side from the gust of air as the large mace whizzed past me. I distanced myself a bit further with another kick back, and pressed the release lever near the handguard, causing the breach to flip open. The empty shells had subsequently ejected from this action, as they clattered around me and left a heavy scent of gunpowder.

In a movement that I had practiced time and time again, I loaded new shells into the revolver cylinder, and used a downwards swing as momentum to shut it with a loud snap. I had already begun to walk forward, the plates of my armor clanked together with each step. It was time to finish this monster off once and for all.

For what it's worth, at this point they're entirely right about my writeups causing trouble in the threads. I've also been requesting and receiving criticism over on ask.fm for the week and a half or so since this started in earnest.

Don't actually do it, though, or deculture will get angry

As I stopped a few paces from the witch, it seemed to just glare at me and let out a low growl. That's fine, it just makes this all the easier then. I crouched down a bit, once again to center my weight, as my thumb flipped up the small lid that covered a red button. I pointed the barrel straight at the witch's eye and pressed the button, which caused the weapon to whir up and emit a loud hum. The cylinder that held all the shells began to turn, and rapidly fed each shell into the long barrel, as a bright orange light seeped from the opening at the end.

The witch suddenly let out a snarl and reeled back, before it flipped like a wheel and slammed it's mace arm down on top of me. I barely managed to move my shield up in time as the impact struck me, several tons of force striking into me from above. The light flared up again where it struck, but it was not as bright as last time. The attack I had been charging draws a lot of magic power from me, after all. The damage was still dissipated around me, the mace arm had been close enough to crack as well, but it hadn't been enough this time.

It was as if a rocket had just ignited in front of me, as the gunlance erupted into a focused beam of fire, which struck the witch right at the core of its body. I struggled with all I had to keep myself in place, my greaves dug grooves into the ground, as the effects of both this and the witch's attack caused my bones to fracture and my organs to rupture. With a final shriek, the witch disintegrated from the intense explosion of energy. I couldn't hold my ground any longer, and was thrown off my feet, the explosion caused my body to skid backwards until a wall quickly stopped me -- forcibly.

There was only darkness as my conciousness faded.

After taking a deep breath, I slowly exhaled and stretched my arms under the comfortable weight of the armor plating that covered most of them.

It had been around a week now since I had been at our home base -- Arx -- one of the most difficult to locate places in this entire country. I wouldn't be so brash as to say the entire world, though. After all, I haven't been /everywhere/in the world -- a lot of places surely, due to my line of work -- but not even close to everywhere possible. Of course, I would love to continue to explore the world, that was always a big part of my dreams. That being said, my only regret in having become part of a private military company is that I can't choose exactly where my jobs are located.

The Arx on the outside isn't much to look at, as it is almost entirely underground. If anything, it's so plain that you'd probably think it was just a normal house in a rather bad neighbourhood. Despite this though, don't take the security lightly. You'd be sadly mistaken.

With these thoughts swimming in my mind, I grasped the doorknob of the frosted glass door and swung it open. It was always necessary to duck so that the tip of my weapon could safely pass through with the rest of me. The wood trimming at the top of the frame was worn and full of pockmarks, a visible history of those who didn't pass with as much consideration. I think it's about time they got a bigger door.

"Ahh! Pira!" Speak of the devil, there she is now. "Thought I'd never see your tin can of an ass again, must have been quite the job for it to take you so long this time."

My expression twisted into a frown. I'll have you know that my armor is NOT composed of such /paltry/ metal, it is made ENTIRELY of -- ergh, there I go again. I quickly shake my head, my long hair lashed outwards from the motion, locks of fading bright gold caught my eye within the normally silver tresses.

Around the same moment in time, the girl that currently sat on the edge of her desk began to giggle. Her name was Nemi, the leader of Solus, crimson hair and a fiery temper to go along with it. The long braided ponytail tied behind her head was flipped over her shoulder, and hugged the generous curves down the front of her body. She usually kept it like this, which had resulted in me confusing it for a red scarf originally. Beside her, propped against the desk sat a massive weapon, someone's twisted idea of a sword and shield. I mean /really/ twisted, but when I consider the person that designed it, it doesn't come as a surprise. After all, they were the same culprit behind the creation of my very own weaponry -- the gunlance strapped to my back. Nemi's 'charge blade' was huge, at minimum the size of an average person in length, and entirely custom made for her. The large shield part was engraved with Solus's emblem on the surface -- the Ouroborus.

"I see you still have that crazy hair shit going on, not that you've ever properly explained to me what the fuck it is." Her hand gently caressed and fiddled with the end of her ponytail absent mindedly as she continued to look at me. I could only shrug in response. It's not like I had a clue either, if anything I want to know just as much as she does. I turned around and shut the door behind me, before I found a seat in one of the comfy chairs near Nemi's desk. She continued to stare down at me in silence, then let out a brief sigh and gave an exaggerated shrug of her own.

"Pira, a girl of few words as always. I may as well be talking to the fucking wall. At least you follow orders, I can give you that much." After she spat out her idea of a compliment, she twisted around in place and grabbed a fancy crystal glass full of an amber liquid. It was likely full of some sort of whiskey, or whatever sort of booze she decided to down regardless of the time of day. She held out the glass towards me and intended to offer me the contents, but I just shook my head. There are certain vices in this world that I take part in, but alcohol isn't one of them. Another shrug followed -- she tipped the glass back and downed it in one go, the soft lights in the room gleamed off of the beveled surface.

My gaze wandered away, as I glanced around at the contents of the office space, kept nice and tidy. No doubt the work of Nemi's secretary -- poor soul. All of the various paintings and decor that Nemi kept in here were in a pristine condition, and this didn't surprise me in the slightest. She really hated when things were messy, to the point of being OCD about it. Hence the sympathy for the aforementioned secretary.

"Judging from the fact that you're here in front of me, and obviously not some sort of ghost, I take it the job was a success in the end? Well, what 'm I saying, 'course I know it was already. Ah just sorta wish I could geh some goddamn feedback from ya here, you fuckin' silen' type er always ah pain 'n the fuckin' ass when it comes ta' debriefinnn'..." She roughly placed the glass back on the desk, the solid clink emphasized her increasingly inebriated words. It was clear she was getting drunk way too fast, her face had started to blush the same shade of red as her hair. Damn it Nemi, this is why you shouldn't drink booze...

"...Yah...Yah listen ta me, Pi...Pier?" Nemi slipped off the desk in a bit of a staggered motion, before she leaned over in front of me as I remained seated. Her face was flushed so much, I couldn't tell if she was embarassed that her cleavage was now draped in my face or if it was just the alcohol. "J-Jus...you wait, I'll make ya taalllkk eventually, ahh bet youu sound rehhly cute toooo~" As she managed to slur out her statement, she fell into my lap, then promptly passed out on top of me. I wish I could act surprised at this turn of events, I really do, but unfortunately it's a pretty common occurance. Nemi is an excessively light drinker, yet she always hits the bottle the moment there's something to celebrate. It's then that I start to gently pet the top of her head, as the leather interior of my gauntlets creaked in response. I wonder where my next job will take place? What will it entail? Who will I need to kill?

I came to find out, and all I got was a snoring red-head in my lap. Oh well.

Malal's. I'd say 'don't tell her I looked', but, you know. Second place is Enishi's, I was led to believe she was a lot bigger than that. I was a little disappointed.

>>36970353
The Fourth Warmaster once went an entire week with a refrigerator magnet stuck to her back, and nobody told her. The Sixth Warmaster has six nipples. The Eighth is afraid of the dark. The Tenth uses physical intimacy to escape from the reality that everyone she's ever cared about is deaaad. The Thirteenth's head rolled behind the couch once and nobody found it for three days. The Twentieth can drink two cases of beer in a night when throwing up, and there's this thing with a ping pong ball... ...Well, nevermind the ping pong ball thing.

"So, right after we did the last catch-up thread, Chiaki finally got to interrogate NECO, amateur journalist an' all around pain in the butt (pain to the max!) of all Magical Girls alive."

"Stuff was said, a cat got very nearly ventilated right in the face because she just didn't know when to shut up, but in the end Chiaki managed to get enough passwords to unlock all her diary entries and also make a deal with the interpid journalist. Of sorts. Overall it didn't go exactly as planned for either side, but that's what ya get for just being on opposite sides of the fence. And one side being a huge freakin' troll about it, I swear."

"Then after that, Chiaki decides to let off some stress by doing a bit of Golden Weapon training with Sayaka-chan. After a moment's indecision with what shiny thing to wave around screamin', she decides on those fancy axes with the chainsaw teeth in 'em, and meets the Blueberry in one of the main sparrin' dojos made for the Eversor Rank."

"A little bit into the training, Chiaki wakes the spirit of the Chainaxes up, and it's here that we meet Risa Scoobydoobydoo, who is completely fucking insane. She looks kinda cute, but those snappers, I don't know how to deal with them, seriously. She got cute wolf ears at least, I'll give her that."

"After a bit of banter and ol' Murderface gettin' an earful about what it takes to really unlock the full potential of the Golden thingies, she goes an' says yes to Risa's idea of fun."

"BIG MISTAKE."

"Apparently Risa's idea of fun is to scare the everliving bajeezus out of a sparring partner by goin' at 'em with a LIVE weapon, so that goes down as well as anything like that would: Chiaki and Sayaka start beatin' the everliving CRAP out of each other. They were spittin' curses at each other, manhandling the other person around, drippin' sweat as much as hate -- If they didn't want to kill each other so freakin' bad I'da felt NTR'd by the entire thing!"

"The fight goes down to just bare-knuckle brawlin' after a coupla minutes, and whether by pure luck or she was just that jazzed with the Golden Weapons, Chiaki manages to knock Sayaka out before passing out herself. She wakes up soon after, an' she and Sayaka get a few moments to talk to each other and figure out how just to work together better. Ya know, sappy shit like that."

"That ends well enough, and a bit of time after that, Chiaki gets the great idea to try an' contact whoever's inside her Golden Desert Eagle."

Ya got Braids, a cute little moeblob with a speech impediment harsher than Midori's, Dildoes, who sounds like the biggest tryhard ever with a thousand dildos up her ass, an' Murderface, whose EDGE is so EXTREME that she can probably murder someone with just her face if she wanted to. She's so edgy she fuckin' shits razor blades or something!"

"Anyway, they get to talkin', and Chiaki manages to fill a lot of gaping holes in her past - well, the past that every freakin' Chiaki out there seems to have except her. Loads of stuff gets revealed, and the three stooges freak out when they find out about Pinky and Malal and what's up. They also talk about some other Chiaki who's like really slutty and I don't really talk to in my dreams or whatever, but yeah. They make a decision on what to do from this point on, an' Chiaki finally lets 'em go."

"Some more stuff happens after that - Chiaki handlin' the paperwork, then goin' on a smash-and-grab mission with me an' Sayaka."

Kyokuddles...? Er, well, Miss Kyoko does get huggy and all, I suppose. But I'm doing fine, like I said.

>>36972126

Miss Malal trains a Culexus from day one to be one with her suit. Not only do we have to do everything with the suit on - with the exception of when we have to attend to calls of natures or hygiene, stuff like that - but we also have to make sure that it's maintained properly, inside and out, twenty-four seven. It's the only dress we'll ever get to wear out for the rest of our lives.

As for specific training exercises, well...there's this specific one that makes you realize just what you're capable of as a Culexus when you're pushed to your limit. Miss Malal goes around to try and find a Nightmare Barrier, then calls the entire rank into it. The initiate is then sent out to vaporize the Witch on her own with her suit disabled. Using nothing but your own anti-magic.

It's...well. It's the only Officio training exercise with a near 100% failure rate. No Culexus has ever managed it, except for Miss Malal herself.

Some of them I can't really talk about here, but one of my duties involve being on-call in case one of the squads in the Witch-hunting rotation needs Culexus backup for some reason or another. As I'm just the one left, I tend to get the calls where things are getting really hairy.

I'm also required to try and predict what kind of threats may attack the Officio, from within and without. That's the Prognosticator part of my duties, but I admit it's never been something I've been good at. Miss Haruka's much better and much more experienced at it than I am, which is why I default to her most of the time.

And yes, my suit can be adjusted to dampen my abilities enough that people feel more at ease around me. But some girls are just more sensitive than others - like Miss Sayaka.

Also put some bandages on that, you shouldn't expose that to open air. And remember to change them a few times per day!

Either find another Culexus you can tolerate the presence of long enough to like each other, or find a girl who loves you enough that she's okay with seeing you only in the inside of a Silent Room.

But yes, it can work. There's just a lot more obstacles in the way.

Miss Kyoko easily makes friends with everyone, so it's not a surprise that even the most unlikable of the Ninth is friends with her. ...That said, I do notice that they gel extremely well together, even with the Warmaster's bouts of amnesia. They never fail to bond, even if it gets rocky during the start. I think it's because Miss Kyoko sees a lot of her younger sister in the Warmaster? That's only my guess, though. Miss Kyoko never really talks about her family.

which ends on a good note - a good note bein' that we're all still in one piece and we got what we came for. We manage to get back to Mitakihara on one of Chiaki's stolen planes, and along the way, she learns stuff about the thing we were sent to steal -- err, retrieve -- and isn't too happy about it."

"She also goes and talks to Kirika for the first time in a long while, and they reach an agreement of sorts when they talk about what to do with Oriko."

"Chiaki gets up into more Officio-managing shenanigans after that, including throwing a fuckin' tomato at NECO during an M-idol show. Hah, I wish I was there to capture it on camera, that would've been awesome to see!"

"Chiaki gets home after that, has dinner with Midori, and goes to sleep - only to find herself in a nightmare with those freaky doll things and her slutty self that, you know, can at least try not to be a big of a bitch when she's trying to get my attention. She gets woken up by Sayaka who gets her out of bed by twin-turbo bitching, telling her that she needs to go train and shit. Chiaki then proves just how much of a softy she is to green-haired chicks by trying to say goodbye to Midori, but ends up bringin' her along instead. Ha!"

"But instead of training, it's actually a meeting between Chiaki and a rep of the Golden Church - a kinda religious sect that also got burned by the Prophet's attacks. They finally meet up, along with Mami an' a few other people, and Chiaki got the biggest surprise of her life when she met the rep - it was none other than Wendy Cooldown herself, her ex for long ago!"

"So Wendy and Chiaki sorta reconnect then and there, it's all nice and sweet, but Midori's not exactly thrilled about the entire thing, so she gives our Murderface the ol' tongue hockey business while she and Wendy are talkin' about how to deal with Oriko. I'm...I'm actually proud of her for that? Don't tell her or nothin', you're gonna make her too big for her spats or somethin', but yeah. That was pretty maximum of her, I loved it!"

"Anycase, that had the potential to make the entire meeting go to shit, but thankfully Mami was there to smoothen things out. Also, something else happened that made it hard to worry about that kinda thing - namely Yuma calling in to warn Chiaki that Misaka was in trouble. Prophet trouble."

"So everyone just drops it and goes to save her. Chiaki goes and picks Wendy and Sayaka to help her get to Misaka the fastest, and they manage it after a lot of spooky shit going down in Chiaki's Time Stop."

"They find that the fucking WAREHOUSE that Misaka chills in is on FIRE. LITERALLY ON FIRE. A FUCKING WAREHOUSE FULL OF AMMO, GUNS AND EXPLOSIVES ON FIRE."

"Seriously, it was pretty cool. But uh, it was also very dangerous, and we were very concerned for Misaka at the time. Chiaki especially."

DIDNEY WORRLL

"On the scene, they also find Tiny Pete, Misaka's huge robot buddy fighting off the rest of the Prophet's goons. Chiaki sends Wendy in to get Misaka out of that gorgeous house fire, seriously I wish I was there to just feel the heat, you know. Chiaki then tries to help Tiny Pete but he says 'yo, I've got it covered, go an' get Misaka outta there' and so Chiaki goes to do just that."

"Inside the house Chiaki bumps into the Red Culexus - the bitch responsible for what's been going down, settin' people on fire with her Culexus bullshit - and she immediately goes to town on her ass with the Desert Eagle. Blam, blam, blam, down goes Barbeculexus, but instead of a real kill it's not, because it was just a Callidus inna helmet. Wendy then comes out with Misaka and get out of there before shit explodes. And man did it explode!"

"After making sure Misaka's okay and stuff, Chiaki goes on and does more Warmaster stuff - paperwork, shootin' kneecaps off of people, that deal. We also spend some time eatin' and drinkin' and shootin' the shit, that was fun, although, uh, let's just keep some stuff in that conversation private, yeah? "Chiaki gets to be finally ratified as a REAL LIFE Warmaster after that, an' we get to see how good Midori looks in a uniform, and all that jazz. That was pretty great, actually - I'm real proud of Chiaki for gettin' to that level, and say what you want about her, but she pulls off the fuckin' hat like nobody's business. Anyone can wear the hat, but it really takes someone special to make it look good."

"It's also during the ratification that Chiaki meets one of the very first Warmasters of the Ninth, namely Karasawa Vintage. Through her and Kyuubey, she learns something about the Akashic Realm. ...Yeah I can actually say Akashic Realm, ya know, I ain't that much of a hick, but I like sayin' Wookie World more. Deal with it."

"Right after this, Chiaki gets a message from Lucius, the leader of the captured Third from the Kirishima op. Says she wants to bargain for Oriko's location. Chiaki goes to indulge her in her Silent Room, and learns that Oriko is hiding inside Wookie World - and only Lucius knows where the heck in that hellhole the Prophet is. In exchange for that, she wants a rematch."

"Chiaki says no deal, and has Yuma rip the information out of her skull through her own brand of Culexus bullshit. Of course, this triggers some sorta security measure, and Yuma gets toastyfaced. She pulls through it, though, and helps organize a kill-squad to finally end things once and for all."

Helicopter!

So, in between posts, work has been really rough lately and a drawing commission took a lot longer than I expected so there hasn't been much MGNQ stuff lately. Didn't even have time to prepare anything holiday themed. But here's a silly cute doodle for you guys.

Merry Christmas!

Pfft, like she'd even dare to answer this. The Transcendent One would never deign to give this any attention because it would be an actual contest. It would be something difficult.

The Transcendent one isn't the Homura we could pretend to know, she's warped and empty. Everything about her is a front and she gets what she wants because all she ever does is fuck with the mortals.

Why do you think she hasn't made a move against pinky? Because she lacks the parts of her that drove her to the endless groundhog day she had when she was still something human.

Give her a challenge she can't snap her fingers at and she folds.

Isn't that right? Transcendent one?

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/10/15(Sat)09:53:17 No.37282185 Archived

"We kill it." You growl as you glare up at the winged, cloven-hoofed daemon towering over you, the leather pinions on its back spreading to reveal a wingspan that wouldn't have shamed some prehistoric winged monster. The broken lips of its goatish maw revealing a yellow-fanged grin, each cracked tooth burning with god runes.

One of the remnants of the screaming, deformed horde tries to charge your flank, but you don't even turn to look as you reduce her twisted face into a cratered ruin with a single pull of your Desert Eagle's trigger. Her corpse tumbling back into the horde in a boneless crumple. Three other cultists attempt the same in quick succession, and you dispose of them the same negligent, uncaring way.

"I want it dead," You continue, not taking your eyes off your prey. Ignoring the faint edge of snarling rage in your words, and just how similar it sounded to the same brand of insanity that Kirika had been famous for, before you killed her on top of a burning helipad four lifetimes ago.

"I want it dead, and I want its fucking skull for my throne."

You sense Mami and Sayaka hesitate at this, the Eversor and the Vindicare glancing at each other for a brief moment before continuing to slaughter anything that threatened to get too close. A few heartbeats later, and your Equerry's irritated pulse on inquiry stabs into your mind, waspish and hot. + Understood. Orders, then, Warmaster? +

You tell them. Or rather, pulse it to them directly, just as you reload your Desert Eagle and continue blasting any shrieking fanatics coming to attack. Skulls and torsos exploding into bloody meat the moment they crossed your sights. No merciful kneecap shots here - you've no interest in prolonging their deaths or taking them prisoner, either. They made their decision to die the moment they allied themselves with Ahriman. They made their decision to die the moment they went after you and your own.

+ Sounds like a plan, then. + Sayaka grudgingly agrees. + Mami-san, you can manage something this big, right? It won't be a problem? +

+ No, but I won't be able to keep it immobilized for long. + Mami pulses in reply, just as she decapitates two charging cultists with a spent rifle by wielding it like a baseball bat. + You three will have to work quick once I have it restrained. +

It's here that the floor underneath you shakes as the collosal goat-thing takes a step forward, clearing half of the office floor in one stride and pulping a group of its screeching worshippers underfoot. It raises its weapon - an equally-oversized axe of beaten brass - and lets out a deafening roar, one that smashes any remaining windows left intact from its explosive arrival. The beast then points its axe at you - its grin turning into a sneer.

+ Fine. Sure. No problem. + Sayaka turns towards you as she sheathes Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie, before drawing two swords from her cape, one in each hand. + Murderface, your call. When you move, we move. +

Right. Yeah. Your call.

You glance down at the sword at your hip, and then at the gun in your hand.

The gold in both of them suddenly tempting, as if calling you to use them both at the same time.

What do you do?

[]Use your Golden Desert Eagle. No need to tempt fate by using Muramasa again.
[]Use the Golden Katana. You'll need to finish this quickly, there's no time to play it safe.
[]Use them both at the same time. Time to put the procedure to the test.
[]Put both of them away and go for whatever you can get from your Shield. It's time to go back to the basics.

You hesitate for a single moment.

Two Golden Weapons. Two of them, at the same time. It's...you've never done this before. You've only ever used one, as far as you can remember. You've carried more than one into battle, sure, but you've always swapped them out to use one or the other exclusively, never simultaneously. The chainaxes and the gauntlets obviously don't count, as they were clearly meant to be used in pairs.

Two pieces of a crazed goddess' soul, made into weaponry that turned their most devoted users into nothing more than mindless, blood-hungry killing machines, driving them to seek each other and fight until they died, and then trapping their souls in its core.

You've had better ideas, clearly. Even so, you want to make sure that the procedure you undertook was worth the horror you put yourself through for it.

And getting everyone out of the Akashic Warp alive would be the syrup on top of that pile of pancakes, too.

You shake your head again, banishing whatever trepidations you had left in the light of that urgency - before switching your Golden Desert Eagle to your right hand in order to pull Muramasa from its sheath with your left. The golden blade singing as it once more slid from its ebony housing, cutting through the air with preternatural smoothness.

And right at that very moment, with your breath catching in your throat as you held a Golden Weapon in either hand - you expected the worst to happen.

Something horrifying, to be sure, like suddenly having freaky metal shit for arms and legs, making going to the bathroom or masturbation an eternal tightrope act to avoid self-mutilation. Or your tongue suddenly growing a fucking foot in length. Or developing an irritating Russian accent.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/10/15(Sat)12:47:09 No.37284316

>>37284300

You even expected Kirika to interrupt your thoughts with her trademark sneering, or any of the three Stooges to screech at you for once more drawing the weapon that very nearly made you commit the sin of killing an ally.

What you didn't expect was nothing to happen, and, unexpectedly, that was what you got.

No freaky shit replacing your flesh and blood limbs. No sudden tongue expansion that you're sure would have killed you outright for making you choke on your own spit. Certainly no irritating accent either, although you've always had a shitty voice to begin with, ruined by years of alcohol and painkiller abuse.

While these revelations were a relief, what disturbed you was the silence that also followed.

Not a single pulsed word or sigh - not even the strange buzzing sensation that pressed against the back of your mind whenever you dared to hold Muramasa in anything resembling a killing grip. It was as if drawing both weapons had suddenly cancelled each other out, silencing the ghosts that lived inside each other.

What you did feel - in the moment when both weapons sat heavily in your hands - was a sudden surge of renewed vitality that set your muscles stinging. Not only eradicating the ghost of exhaustion that had followed you all the way up the stairs with a Callidus in your arms, but also making you feel - for lack of a better word - fucking invincible. Not as intense as the adrenaline rush of the chainaxes, but certainly approaching that state of murderous euphoria.

It felt as if you've suddenly become the biggest hammer in the world, and God was the last nail you needed to pound.

"Murderface?" Sayaka's eyes go wide at the sight of you, just as she pushes a cultist's twitching corpse impaled on her twin blades off with her foot. You blink at her, realizing suddenly that only a few seconds had passed since she asked you her question earlier - instead of the age that it felt like. "W-wait, is that...isn't that dangerous? Aren't you supposed to just use one of those fucking things? I--"

"It's fine." You hear yourself say to her, your voice cold and low as you turn back to the beast. It was still grinning, still pointing its axe at you in challenge. "I'm in control."

Kill them all. Clean up the world.

The Flesh of Fallen Angels.

"Yeah, but that's what you always say--WAIT! MURDERFACE!"

Without even waiting for Sayaka to finish - or even, waiting for her to understand just what you said - you charge the towering daemon head-on, sprinting full-out on legs that felt too light and too strong to be yours. Dimly you hear Sayaka and Wendy curse at you at the same time as they pursue - finally catching up a heartbeat later, their blades flashing as they started killing left and right, murderous sattelites guarding you from assassins as you continued on your suicidal one-way trip to the most one-sided fight of your life.

Seeing your approach - seemingly taken aback by this foolhardy frontal assault - the collossal freak of nature draws its gargantuan weapon back, and with a speed that would have impressed the Betrayer, swings its axe downward in a overhead cleave. One that would've easily seen you split in half and your remains pulped to nothing if it connected.

If.

Before the Golden Weapons, before you found out that a pink-haired monster with a vindictive streak that stretched for miles lived inside your Shield - you'd have dodged something like this with the help of your Time Stop. Just a split-second turn and re-turn to place yourself out of harm's way and into the best possible spot to kill your target from. Since then, you've tried as best as you can not to rely on that crutch, as the downside of freezing time (that being, Pinky herself) often far outweighed the benefit of being able to slip behind your defenseless opponent, unload a magazine into the back of their head, and then wait for the messy aftermath to play out in slow motion.

You didn't need to take that risk now. With both Golden Weapons glowing in your clenched fists, dodging something that even Sayaka would have had trouble avoiding felt like child's play. You even stopped in your tracks to watch the axe fall, watched the shadow of it fall over you as it descended. And at the last moment, as both Mami and Wendy screamed your name in concern - in perfect unison, only marred by the fact that they each shouted a different name - you simply took a single step aside.

The axe-blow SMASHES into the floor with the force of a bomb's detonation. Corpses that had lain in broken, boneless repose, corpses that you and your squad had strewn all over in the furious melee earlier are thrown up into the air, like dry leaves from a pile disturbed by a child's antics, only to burst against the shattered tiles as gravity once more pulls them back down.

The beast roars at this, clearly incensed that you had the temerity to deny it its victory, and makes to pull its axe free from the floor - only to blink as it sees you hop up onto the axe's haft and continue your mad charge from there. Running up the weapon itself, up its armor-plated arm, up, up, up--

And before sanity could stop you, you jump off of its shoulder armor, leaping right into its face - putting you at near point-blank range with its bullish features. Filling your nostrils with the humid stench of its corpse-stink breath and the animal stink of its sweat-soaked fur.

And right here, you can make a move that will decide how this fight will end.

What do you do?

In my experience, it varies. "crazy" is catch-all for various kinds of unhinged behavior, but there's different kinds of crazy, crazy comes in variants, or perhaps flavors. Some can be fun and kinky, some are nothing but trouble. That's why there's the "Don't stick it in the crazy." saying. Because if you can't distinguish the fun kind from the others, it's safer to stay away from all of them.

I... guess? Midori is a little taller so I suppose the explanation makes sense. MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/16/15(Fri)09:37:20 No.37413213 Archived

Screaming a wordless cry as you hurtle right into the beast's face, carried by the momentum of your suicidal leap at the very end of your psychotic berserker dash towards your prey - you drive your right fist forward with all the force you can muster.

You feel three things in instantaneous succession: first, a brief resistance, one that immediately gives way with a wet, greasy pop. The second: the sensation of your entire hand - tensed and tight as it already is, curled around your Desert Eagle - crunching right through a wall of white-hot flesh, hot enough to scald the skin. And finally, the third, and one that you will carry in your amnesia-riddled brain for as long as you live: the lip-curling satisfaction of knowing just how much pain you're about to skullfuck Oriko's little pet with.

Beyond close proximity. Beyond point blank range.

Beyond putting away a target cleanly and safely, without exposing yourself to danger - you'd jumped right into a monster's face and stabbed your arm right through its eye, before pulling the trigger of the gun you've just buried into the meat of its brain.

All in the span of time that it takes your heart to beat once.

>> ☐ Deculture 01/16/15(Fri)09:38:07 No.37413220

>>37413213

Your first shot is a wet, muffled-thump detonation that kicks in your hand and drenches you with hot, steaming gore. The sensation of something vital being pulped inside the demon's skull turning your smile into a grin, then into a laugh that would've made Kirika proud.

The beast HOWLS in unnameable, unthinkable pain as you blow its brains apart. It trashes its horned head from side to side, roaring, braying, squealing with desperation to fling you off. You thwart its clumsy attempts by reversing your grip on Muramasa and driving the golden blade right through its forehead, using its already blood-slickened handle as a handhold.

And without any other preamble, you pull the trigger of your Desert Eagle again. And again. And again. Emptying your entire magazine into its braincase, each shot slamming into the insides of its skull with the force of a thunderclap, until something wet explodes at the back of its head. Revealing a ghastly, gory exit wound large enough for you to climb through.

That should have been enough - realistically - to kill the beast twice over. Its brains pulped into slack, useless slurry by your pulverizing shots, and now currently draining out of the gaping hole in its scalp. And for a moment, it looked as if it would topple over and simply die from that catastrophic injury.

But whether to prove that it lived up true to its impossible existence - a malevolent, goatish neverborn that was once an angel cast out from Heaven, or simply because it was one of Ahriman's birthless, deathless summonings that could only be unmade through complete obliteration - it still stood. Despite nearly half of its skull annihilated through the repeated pummeling of something that could, in your experience, punch holes through a tank - it still lived.

And it was now driven mad with anger at the speck of dust that had inflicted such horrific pain to it.

Issuing another pained bellow - this one ripened by the sting of an injured, insulted pride - the beast drops its axe and snatches you out of midair in its fist.

Five spike-knuckled fingers - each one akin to a schoolbus in size and tipped with blackened claws - curl around your small frame in a calloused cage, trapping both your arms to your sides and rendering your Golden Weapons as useless as the Shield ticking on your right arm. You bite back a scream as its grip tightens around you, forcing the wind out of you and compressing your ribs, and you know with a cold certainty that they'll break before you asphyxiate.

But before you could suffer the indignity of a crushing death--

"HEY! GOAT-DILDO!"

A deafening bang, followed by a lightning-quick rasp of metal grinding against metal - and your scabbed, calloused prison immediately goes slack around you, the beast's fingers falling open at the same time that you yourself begin to plummet down to the floor as well. You grit your teeth as you brace for a hard landing, but something snatches you out of the air before you do. something soft, warm, and smelling of blood.

"...Gotcha, Kong." Wendy murmurs into your hair as she clutches you to her chest, in the same princess carry you'd carted her around in earlier. Despite the gore and blood flecking your face, you couldn't help but feel your cheeks heat up at this turn of events.

...Wait. Did Wendy just--

"Can't take the credit for that," Your ex murmurs as the both of you finally land, a safe distance away from the rampaging monster. She lets you down with a huff. "Mickey saved your ass."

>> ☐ Deculture 01/16/15(Fri)09:40:10 No.37413255

>>37413239

"ANOTHER ONE YOU OWE ME, MURDERFACE!" You look up and see your Equerry, still airborne, keeping herself aloft, kicking off of the demon's armor plates or whatever body part she could grab a handhold or get a booted foot onto. All while raking the electrified length of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie against the creature's bared flesh, drawing blood with every stroke.

After a particularly nasty cut that had had the demon reeling, half of its face sheared right off - the blue-haired Eversor finally leaps away, bloodied cape unfurling as she screams two words.

"NOW, MAMI!"

You whirl around to see Mami at the far end of the room, both hands held out at either side of her - and she opens her eyes just as a veritable storm of yellow ribbons shoot out from every conceivable nook and cranny of the floor itself. All of them snaking, whipping, and slashing through the very air, like an undersea school of long-bodied fish coming together before diving into one single point with hiveminded synchronicity. The point being the giant winged demon that had nearly crushed you in its fist.

And with a sound remarkably similar to that of tearing flesh, they begin to wrap around the daemon. No, not just wrap - they ensnare. They constrict. First looping around its limbs, then snapping taut, pulling this way and that. Robbing the thing of any chance of movement or even struggle.

The beast squeals again, all other emotion gone except for the primal fear piercing whatever was left of its ruined mind. It continued to make them, loud and long, until one of Mami's ribbons find its way around its throat, cinching tight into a neat and choking garrote.

>>37413255

More ribbons stream out of nowhere, even as the beast is practically mummified now, both its arms spread out on either side and its cloven feet lashed together in a pose that could not be called anything else but crucifixion. Before you can wonder if Mami was going overboard with this, however, you are silenced by the ummistakable sound of large, oversized joints giving out in a series of muffled pops. This is then followed by the tell-tale wet snaps of bone breaking apart.

...Jesus. That's...you thought she was just going to tie it down, or something.

"That IS how Mami ties 'em down," Sayaka grins as she comes up beside you, tossing her now-broken swords over her shoulder, before drawing two fresh ones from the inner depths of her cape. "Well, minus the part where she's breaking every bone in their bodies tying them down." A series of snapping noises, each one as loud as a thunderclap, makes her twitch. "Egh. That was probably that thing's backbone. You kinda feel sorry for the thing now, huh?"

"...Shouldn't we be taking it out now?" Wendy asks after a moment, manifesting her knife back into her hand, tossing it casually into the air before catching it with what looks like a clawed thing made out of pure shadow. The appendage jutting out of the still-bleeding stump where her flesh-and-bone arm once was, before a Culexus burned it off with her witchfire. "Mami did say she wouldn't be able to hold it down for long..."

"You know, I think we should." Your Equerry says after a moment, glancing towards the blonde herself - and you see, besides the utterly-focused look in the Vindicare's eyes, something that makes you feel relieved that you're both on the same side.

A cold, calculating cruelty. One that would see any obstacles in its way dealt with in any means possible. A merciless sort of cruelty, found in heroes and villains alike, made sharp and deadly with the conviction that they were doing the right thing.

Ah, I see you are in favour of the broad tastes test when issues of blonde-favouring Warmasters arise: to wit, that so long as any character within the picture can be established as a blonde, then that character for the purposes of satisfying the Warmaster of Happiness test ("natty lickaroo") will be considered a separate and dstinct blonde entity from all the other blondes in that picture, regardless of any character cloning.

However, and with respect, I must strongly disagree with you. As the natty lickaroo has thus far not experimented with the blonde clones of the Second, we cannot conclusively determine if two cloned blondes will be deemd as two blondes for the purposes of the natty lickaroo. Therefore, we must extrapolate from past precedent.

The precedents in general indicate that the Ninth Warmaster (on whom the natty lickaroo is based) has never slept with the same blonde twice after the single course of conduct known as "the one night affair" and "the morning after" (see "The Seventeenth Warmaster").

Furthermore, the rejection of the broad tastes test for the natty lickaroo is grounded firmly in sound policy. The entire rationale for the natty lickaroo is to ensure great luck in the Akashic Realm so long as Murderface & Co are in there, and, in particular, to prevent the termination of the death-flagged Sakura Kyouko. Therefore, it would be unreasonable to expect an average shitposter to accept four clones as four blondes for the purpose of saving Sakura Kyouko.

For the above reasons, I must dissent from my learned brethren shitposters, and accordingly declare that four Saber clones do not four distinct blondes make. A fortiori, four literal Marisa clones do not four distinct blondes make.

I agree that the four Sabers do not count, but I'd argue that it's 2 blondes and 2 clones as although Nero looks similar to the others she has her own distinct background and personality, and aside from appearance is absolutely not related to Sader.

The other two are shitty palette swaps playing with "what if" scenarios. What if Sader was evil? What if Sader was accepted as a grill in her home country? Those shoddy second-rate clones can piss right off.

"The plan was for us to finish it, so we'll finish it," You growl as you step forward, both Golden Weapons still gripped in both your fists. "I was serious about the fucking skull."

You sense your squadmates hesitate yet again - just for a split second - before finally acquiescing. "Fine. Whatever gets this done quicker." Sayaka says drily, grinding both of her swords against each other and making them spark in the contact.

What followed, then, was a quick murder of something broken and paralyzed - but nonetheless something that also continued to struggle and fight the entire time you were killing it. It still roared, it still trashed as Wendy and Sayaka tore it apart with their blades, dismembering it, hacking its wings off first before its limbs.

It gave the mercy killing the air of something foul, like a heathen ritual of sacrifice - but if your two squad mates felt the same way, they didn't show it, and merely carried out your orders in grim, tight-lipped silence.

The beast finally breathed its last when you took its head off with an executioner's beheading cut - the neck bared with the help of Sayaka digging an immaculately-gloved fist into its hollowed-out eye socket, grasping the lip of the ragged hole and then heaving back. Muramasa seemingly growing warmer in your grip as its golden blade tasted the last remaining drops of lifeblood that still coursed through the monster's veins.

"Man, what the fuck is it with you Warmasters and skulls?" Sayaka frowns as you tap your Shield against your gory prize, the car-sized severed head disappearing with a flash of purple light. "Is it some sorta habit you just compulsively pick up when you put the hat on, or something? I know Miss Vintage never got into any of that kind of nonsense. Hell, I doubt anyone before Kharn did."

You shrug. It just...well, it just feels right, you tell her. Like an acquired hobby.

"Yeah? I'll take your word for it." Your Equerry shrugs. "Anyway, where the fuck is Kyoko? She should've been here, she'd have liked to see you charge that fucking thing--"

+ Murderface...? + A weak and horribly-familiar voice crackles into your shared squad connection, and all four of you look up at the sound of it. Your Equerry's face draining of all color as she recognizes it before you could.

+ Kyoko? + You've never heard your best friend sound this weak. Sound this...close to death. Not even back at Big Shell. Not even back when she broke her own spine at Kilgore's. + Kyoko, tell me where you are, I'll get you--+

+ M'fine, really...Got her. Just...just like I promised. + Your best friend's trademark laugh is reduced to a feeble, lung-shot wheezing. + Put up a hell of a fight, but I got her in the end. Roasted the fucker in her own fucking suit. +

Another wheezing, crackling chuckle. + You...you guys go ahead, I'll catch up. Just gotta wait for the...Eversor healing shit to kick in. It takes a bit a'time, don't worry. + A wet cough, followed by a horrible rasping noise. + Sounds worse than it actually is, really...+

+ No. I'm getting you teleported out of here, right now. + You shake your head here, forcing yourself to remain calm enough to act rationally. To act like the Warmaster - the Leader you're supposed to be. + Yuma? Yuma, get Kyoko out of here and into sick bay, now. She's hurt bad, she won't be able to continue with us for the rest of the op--+

+...I can't, Warmaster. + Yuma's reply is a wretched one. + Her signal's too weak down there. Someone needs to boost her signal with their own teleport beacon. I'll be able to lock onto her position then and teleport her out. +

"I'll go," Mami suddenly says, stepping forward. "Chiaki-san, go with Sayaka-san and Wendy to the higher floors, you'll need them in case Oriko has more things like that stationed up there." She gestures to the daemon's corpse you've left in pieces on the floor. "I'll take care of Kyoko-san. Focus on getting this mission done as quickly as you can."

"N-no, I...I should go," Sayaka's face is ashen white, even underneath the mask of blood and gore from all the slaughter earlier. "Kyoko's hurt, and..."

"Sayaka-san, you are the most capable Eversor we have at this moment. Your Warmaster needs you. Finish this with her. I'll make sure Kyoko is safe." Mami gives your Equerry the smile - a smile capable of defusing any situation no matter how tense it got, a smile that could cool any soul running hot with anger or rage.

"...I'll go," Wendy murmurs. "My fault she had to fight that bitch. Let me--"

"Not in the state you're in." Mami cuts her off, frowning now. "We'll talk about your recklessness when we're all back home and complaining about how awful hospital food tastes." The blonde then turns to you. "Chiaki-san, please, let me. I'll catch up with the three of you once I get Kyoko home safely."

It seems you have to choose who's going to rescue your best friend.

Who do you choose?

[]Mami. You trust her. She'll get Kyoko home. She has to.
[]Wendy. Time for her to make up for her fuckup. She still seems capable anyway, even with her missing arm.
[]Sayaka. If there's anyone who's going to get your best friend back, it's the person who loves her more than you do.

Well, this quest is crossover as hell...and the Akiasic Realm is supposed to be The Warp/Limbo...so it stands to reason we could wind up briefly falling out of it anytime or anywhere?

Could you imagine us fighting a giant demon as we're falling out of a portal into another world.

We're standing on it's face, noodly legs bracing apart a jaw the size of a small building while we fire our gun into it as we pass through the scintillating light of a portal and into another world. The foreclaws of the beast hit water just before its hind legs and a giant metal fist slams into the side of the face we were shooting into. Chiaki turns to see a robot even bigger than Tiny Pete, with a nuclear coolant tower as an upper torso/head.

You decide to let Sayaka go and pick Kyoko up. While you can certainly see the wisdom of having Mami handle it - the blonde could probably handle anything Oriko throws her way, either with her ribbons or her impeccable lethality with her rifles - you also can't deny that if there's anyone who'll get your best friend back, it's the person who loves her more than you do. The fact that she's your Eversor Rank Leader and an absolute monster with a sword in her hands also helped.

Of course, you'd be lying to yourself if you didn't find Mami's eagerness a bit...strange. What she posited was logical enough, and again, you couldn't deny how tactically sound it was. But something was in her eyes when she pressed for you to send her to save your best friend. It wasn't the stoic, chilling cruelty from earlier, certainly not, but something oddly similar. Something oddly familiar.

...Fuck. No. You're just imagining things. Christ. Mami? Seriously? Her volunteering to fight her way down to your best friend to make sure she got home safe, when any other Magical Girl with her experience and rank would have told you to just suck it up and consider Kyoko's death a 'regretful, but necessary' one?

This place is getting to you, you tell yourself. This fucking place.

"Just try to keep it together until you find her, alright? Going in there like a dildo's not going to help anyone." This you tell the Blueberry just as she finishes healing Wendy's arm, your ex's shadow-prosthetic seemingly having disappeared along with her grinning familiars from earlier. "And after you confirm Kyoko's evac, I want you to sync back up with the squad as quickly as you can."

"You don't have to tell me twice, Murderface. I'm your Equerry, not a fucking recruit fresh out of basic." She snaps at you with her typical brand of bitch-laden venom - but it's spiced with an undercurrent of dread strong enough to make her voice tremble slightly.

She gives Wendy's arm one last once-over, before deeming it good enough for duty and nodding at the American. "I'm trusting you with Murderface, Cooldown. Try not to get her killed before I can."

"...I'll try my best." Wendy intones. "Thanks. And...sorry about--"

"I'll only take your apology if there's something to apologize for. Right now, I just want to focus on getting her back." Sayaka cuts her off, before turning to you and Mami. Offering a textbook salute. "Mami-san. Murderface."

She meets your gaze in particular, your purple eyes and her own blue ones - and something passes between the both of you. Not a pulsed message or even an emotion, but an understanding. A grateful one.

And with that, you watch your Equerry - bloody cape and beastly mechanical sword strapped to her waist and everything - charge towards the floor's stairwell. Descending to the skyscraper's lower floors in order to recover your best friend.

+ Or what's left of her, + Kirika chuckles, now able to speak again with your Desert Eagle holstered and the Muramasa back in its sheath on your hip. + I heard her pulse, Matsuda. It's less a plea for help and more of a mortis-cry of someone afraid of the encroaching oblivion. That one-eyed mongrel is dead, and you've sent off the one Magical Girl who can help you win this fight to play with her corpse. +

+ Don't listen to her, Nameless One. + Dildoes' voice is cold with dignified fury. + If it wasn't for her sentimentality regarding Oriko, this nasty business would have been concluded with the use of shaped charges placed in strategic points of this dreadful building. This mission would have been over long before the red one's life was placed at risk. +

+ Her name's Kyoko, + You tell your past self. + Not the 'Red One', although you have a feeling that Kyoko would have probably liked that nickname. + Sakura Kyoko. +

+ Her name's Kyoko, + You tell your past self. + Not the 'Red One', although you have a feeling that Kyoko would have probably liked that nickname. + Sakura Kyoko. +

+...Yes. Of course. Forgive me. + It's here that you're surprised again - a note of apology in Dildoes' voice, when the most emotion you managed to get from her was cold indifference. + Sometimes I simply forget their names. It's been a while. +

+ That's fine, + You pulse back as you and the remaining two members of your Kill-Team make to ascend to the last few floors of the skyscraper. There'd been a working elevator in the room earlier - Mami had seen it used by the deranged half-daemon, half-Magical Girl cultists - but the goat daemon's arrival had ruined it beyond any hope of utility. As such, you are forced to take the stairs again. + I guess you didn't like the Kyoko of your timeline much? +

There's a pause before Dildoes replies, and when she does, it's with the delay of someone choosing her words carefully. +...She was friendly enough. A bit misguided, and a bit too over-eager for my tastes, but...+ Another pause, and then, a cough. + She was there when I needed her. +

You furrow your brow at this as you, Wendy and Mami begin your ascent of the skyscraper itself, with you taking point, Wendy in the middle and Mami bringing up the rear. All three of you with weapons in your hands, mindful that a horde could come screaming down from the higher floors at any moment, taking each step with a hurried yet cautious pace.

Something's up with how Dildoes is talking about her Kyoko. It could be nothing, but...hm.

if it helps she probably isn't dead RIGHT NOW. that really wouldn't be dramatic enough. What is probably going to happen is Sayaka is either going to get waylaid enroute or they are both going to get jumped as Sayaka reaches Kyoko. Then the prophet will probably at least try some 'I'm going to kill your friend in front of you now because fuck you. suck my magic gold demon dick.'

so if we're lucky we might have one more chance to save her. if sayaka doesn't manage to just evac her out. we'll see how it goes, Sayaka could go crazy and brute force through ambush that might happen. We don't know.

You should be focused on the mission right now, seriously. With your best friend injured to the point that she couldn't even make a coherent sentence without coughing her lungs and this entire fucking op taking place in nowhere else but Hell itself - the last thing you should be worrying about is what kind of shenanigans one of your past selves got up to in their timeline.

But somehow, you couldn't resist. Maybe it's that thing that happens to the human mind when it's subjected to extreme amounts of stress for a protracted amount of time - it tries to think of anything else and holds onto that, just to prevent itself from breaking down. It's never happened with you before - but then again, you've never been in this kind of situation before, to be completely honest. If you have, you don't remember it.

To be this fucking worried about a team mate making it through the op in one piece. Not only that, but a team mate who's also your best friend.

So of course you ask the fucking question, as you and your team make your way up the stairs. Anything to stop thinking about that. Anything to stop thinking about what could happen if you lost Kyoko here and now. What you would do if you lost one of the few people keeping you sane.

...Well, for one, you'd probably quit busting so much ass to save Oriko, that's for fucking sure.

In any case, you asked it, and when Dildoes finally answered, it was with an ice-cold pulse-voice that could freeze spines and hearts in a single word. It reminded you of a harsher, less kinder Mami - one you accidentally stumbled upon during your days as Girl A. she'd been dressing a particularly-recalcitrant trainee then, reducing the hooligan to wide-eyed, world-shattering sobs.

Well, now. That's a bit harsh. You just--

+ You just wanted to know, yes. I'm well aware. + Dildoes snaps, before finally going silent. Her chilly presence melting from your mind, immediately and quickly, as if she'd stormed off.

...You hit a nerve there, most likely. You were preparing to apologize when suddenly--

"The next floor." Mami suddenly says, her eyes wide, and it takes you a moment to realize that Dildoes had just uttered the same thing, in the same exact moment. You turn to see the blonde Vindicare's grip shaking around her rifle. "Chiaki-san, Oriko is in the next floor. I'm sure of it."

+ Strange. That's what I was just about to tell you, too, Nameless One. + Dildoes murmurs. + But only because I sense the Golden Weapon nearby. Or at least its will. + A moment's pause. + It's the staff, alright. I can feel its malevolence, even if I were back in that vault you keep storing us in. +

...Does that mean--

+ I wouldn't jump to hasty conclusions, as I do not sense a Golden Weapon about her person. + Your past self's words seem tainted with hesitation, however. + But there are ways around that. Ways to conceal detection. I'd...advise watching your back, Nameless One, just to be safe. +

Christ. Not her too.

+ I am very precise with my choice of words, Nameless One. I rarely say things simply for the act of saying them. + A pause. + In any case, we both believe that Oriko is behind that door. I would suggest a more proactive plan of attack this time. +

Which is?

+ Charge in, guns blazing. Summon that metal-shod thing you call Teensy Peter, or whatever his name is. If it IS Oriko, then she'll have her usual coven with her. Strike them down with awe-inspiring force, and you'll have Oriko back even before the blue one returns. +

Hah. You'll keep that in mind, then.

"Chiaki-san?" Mami asks you after a moment, her own brow furrowing in concern. "Are you alright? We lost you there for a moment, I said that--"

Oriko's in the next floor, yes. You nod. You were just...talking to yourself, that's all.

"Ah." Mami and Wendy glance at each other, before the blonde nods at you. "Well, if she really is there, then I would suggest trying diplomacy one last time, Chiaki-san." At your expression, she smiles. "Yes, I know, but she must have seen how we've dispatched a decent portion of her troops. She knows what we can do, now, and she may be more amenable to surrendering this time." She nods here. "Always offer your enemy a chance to surrender, even while you're inches away from cutting their throat. The fear of death can always make a tyrant see his sins for all they are."

What do you do?

I don't think she's going to out right betray us, she's just super afraid of what golden weapons can do to people, or at least what she suspects they can do to people.She'll only try and put us down if we go super crazy I think.

You peer inside the abyss that is your inventory. From inside two huge eyes look back at you and gradually you can make out the creature they're attached to. You're looking at a HUGE man of vaguely asian descent with a stocky build and HUGE muscles. Atop his head are what appear to be a pair of bunny ears and a pair of cracked square glasses adorn his eyes. Your sight lingers on his glasses and you feel the beginning of a beautiful fetish blossoming in your heart, but all that is interrupted by his beautiful booming voice: "What the hell do you think you're doing in

You decide to stop existing.

Thinking about it. We do have one advantage over Oriko.

Remember when we used out timestop when we went to rescue our little sister Misaka? How the magical girls where were all like "You are not supposed to be here! Your were supposed to arrive too late!"

It looks like our timestop is the only thing that can throw off the future sight thing that Oriko uses. Once we use it we disconnect ourselves from the chain of events that Oriko foresees and we can take her by surprise.

Just a thought.

Wendy came back in a non-interactive segment of the story and Midori likely got a pass because we just did one really stupid decision (and we still had to pay in-character).

Erebus is a slightly more important character settingwise than she appears, but due to that we also got like three DM prompts for "do you really want to do this, actually want to kill this person?"

So for that same reason it would be very strange if Erebus was left alive. That would feel actually really cheap.

You shake your head at this, letting out a sigh. Fine. Even if your first impulse is to kick the door down and charge in shooting, Mami's logic is unshakeable here. You ARE still after saving Oriko's hide, and it does sound like there's a decent chance that she may surrender after seeing you and your Kill-Team make short work of her minions. Hell, you skullfucked one of her bigger, badder monsters with your gun. If that doesn't make anyone change their minds, well, you tried.

So yeah. You'll try diplomacy again, for all the fucking good it'll do.

But first of all, you want to know how Mami knew. How did she figure out that Oriko was up in the next floor?

Mami blinks at you, seemingly incredulous. "Really? You couldn't tell, Chiaki-san, even when we're this close, in this place?" She shakes her head here, before gesturing to the floors below you, down the stairwell. "I began to feel her presence a couple of floors back. It only got stronger every step we took, and only now hit me with full force."

...You didn't feel it, no, but--

"Felt it too," Wendy murmurs, her brown eyes looking up at you. "Clear as fuckin' day. Thought you knew, since you're point and everything."

Ah. Well. ...Fuck.

"You're distracted," Mami says after a moment. "If it's about Kyouko-san, I'm sure Sayaka-san has things under control. You have to focus on what we're about to do, here and now. More than just our lives hang in the balance, here - Oriko's depending on us, too."

Yeah. Probably.

But if Kyoko doesn't make it--

"Kyoko will. Kyoko's tough, and Sayaka's tougher. You know this." Mami smiles. "But if she doesn't? Then I'll be behind you on whatever you decide to do, Chiaki-san. I'll even pull the trigger myself."

You look into the blonde's warm amber eyes here, finding nothing in them but truth and honesty and not a shred of deception. Pure conviction, tempered by warmth and compassion. The cruelty was still there, but it blended into the determination in her gaze rather than standing out in stark relief.

You nod again, and making your way to the door leading to the next floor - the floor where Oriko would be - you prepare to push it open with your free hand, while keeping your Desert Eagle ready with your other.

Diplomacy, huh?

"Just one last time, Chiaki-san." Mami whispers. "If not, then we tried. At least we can say that much."

You push the door open and step into darkness.

An inky darkness that is then suddenly disturbed by a single light, flickering into existence, right in the middle of the floor. A single solitary candle, on top of a table, its soft light illuminating the tea set on top of it as well as the table's sole occupant.

A blonde-haired young woman with sharp features, her hair teased in an elaborate bun, and her form sheathed in an ornate kimono.

"Wendy Cooldown. Tomoe Mami. And the Angel Slayer Reborn." The girl smiles, in a voice that was and wasn't Mikuni Oriko. "Please, join me for tea. I do believe it's time to try and be diplomatic again, correct?"

You narrow your eyes, first at the girl sitting at the conspiciously-placed table, and then at the shadows dancing at the light's edge, horned and tusked ones with claws the size of scythes. Yeah, no, this isn't a fucking trap at all.

Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam and Magical Sawbones Tanis Nagi versus Magical Hanzer “Milly” Schulz

…I wasn’t kidding when I said I didn’t think I was going to win this. Fuckerfly’s an actual Eversor, and presumably she got the full training package. She’s already proven that she is now stronger and faster than I am; if she’s not lying, then ink poisoning won’t work on her again. This is a relief, since it was pretty horrific, but it would have made stopping her a lot easier. I also can’t do what Checkers told me and aim for the legs and joints, because Fuckerfly’s part robot now, apparently. Fuck.

I take a couple steps back before charging right at Fuckerfly, gripping the pen spear as tightly as I can. Fuckerfly rushes away from Tanis to meet me head on, letting out a war cry that drowns out the clanking sounds of her movements. She doesn’t even try to avoid the attack, and it runs her right through the chest, emerging through the other side with a wet, meaty noise. She cringes before her expression shifts into a sneer. “Are you scared yet?” she taunts.

I nod earnestly and let go and bring up my arms to block. I’m just in time to let my robot arm take the full brunt of her mace strikes, and stagger back. Fuckerfly tosses her maces up, then breaks the spear running her through before she catches them again. Fucking showoff.

I bring my arms up to defend against another attack, which knocks my fist into my jaw. The coppery taste of blood fills my mouth, and I spit at Fuckerfly’s face. This just pisses her off –more- and she presses her attack, my joints protesting as each block threatens to rip them out. My legs are trembling in fear as I get forced back, and my ears starting to ring from the loud clanging. Even my robot arm’s starting to feel numb, and that shouldn’t happen! She’s like a boss that can kill you in one or two hits!

…I can’t let terror stop me, though. Gotta suck it up and fight back.

There’s a meaty, crunching noise from behind Fuckerfly – while we were distracted, Tanis snuck up behind her and axed her in the back. This proves enough distraction for me to run back and charge Fuckerfly again, punching her in the stomach. It’s semi-ineffectual, as that area is plated with armor. However, she gets blown back by the force of the attack and crashes into the bed that I was hiding behind before, which buys us some time.

“Let’s make a break for it,” I suggest to Tanis, getting her attention. Clutching her bloodstained axe like a security blanket, she nods as we both return to the headache-inducing hallway. “Uh, can you lead?” I ask her. “I don’t know which way is out.”

Uh oh, the clanking sound is starting up again, which means Fuckerfly’s back on her feet. With some reluctance, Tanis grabs me by the arm and pulls me along, slithering as fast as she can. Which is fast, but not as fast as I can run, and definitely not as fast as Fuckerfly can chase us. Risking a glance back, I see her emerge, sliding on the floor from poor traction as she rounds the corner. Something black is poking out of her stomach.

“EAT THIS, YOU LITTLE SHITS!” she roars, and the sound of gunfire that I heard earlier returns. It turns out that black thing is a machine gun, and it’s shooting at us, bullets whizzing by and thunking against the walls. Who the fuck installs a machine gun in their stomach?

My left leg is suddenly filled with an intense, burning and familiar pain as a bullet lodges itself in my thigh, and my right leg shortly follows after. I’m almost knocked to my knees bow how agonizing it is, but Tanis pulls me around a corner before I can fall over. I end up with my back against the wall, my breaths coming out erratically from my body telling me to pass out.

“Hold on, I-I can treat that,” Tanis frets. Milly doesn’t give her the chance, though, appearing around the corner before Tanis can do anything about it.

>> ☐ Attarou 01/16/15(Fri)17:43:36 No.37420637

Marina said that you can either tough out a bullet wound, or dull the pain with intense emotion. Toughing it out didn’t work during the exercises, and I –need- to do something while Milly’s drawing out her attack to scare us.

So I get mad.

I think back to what I said earlier about trying, about not being good enough, and I let indignation be my anesthesia. The white-hot agony is reduced to a dull, stinging feeling, still painful, but something I can actually work around. Fuckerfly’s threat of violence is ruined by me springing back to my feet and connecting my fist with her face; I knock her into a nearby wall.

“Can you flank her?” I whisper to Tanis through clenched teeth, not wanting to risk running away while Fuckerfly can still catch us. The snake girl makes a small affirmative noise as I make another spear, and we charge down Fuckerfly again. The pain spikes with each step, but I gotta back up Tanis.

Milly growls, picking herself up off the ground and running up to meet the both of us head on. “You destroyed my memorial garden for my family, Eleanor! You ruined everything!” she asserts, “You –deserve- this! Now just give-!”

“SHUT UP!” I interrupt her, letting her deflect my spear attack. “Yes, I did something awful!” I jump back a ways to lure Fuckerfly towards me, and she takes that bait. “But that doesn’t excuse you at all!” I yell at her.

“I feel horrible and very sorry for what I did!” I insist, my spear snapped by a combined attack from her maces. “But I don’t feel bad for protecting people caught up in your hissy fit!”

”I –want- to make it up to you somehow!” I shout emphatically, Tanis delivering a sickening blow to Fuckerfly’s back. I follow up with punches to her face, words punctuating each hit. “BUT NOT! LIKE! THIS! I! DON’T! DESERVE! THIS! CRAP!” Finally, I hit Fuckerfly in the chest, cracking her ribs with a disgusting sound. “-NOBODY- DOES!”

Somehow this isn’t enough to make her stop, and she shoots me point blank. Pain comes back to me as my gut is shredded apart by bullets, and I stagger backwards in shock. I make a new spear at the last second, propping myself up with it like a cane as I try not to watch my insides gush out. Fuckerfly takes another one from behind, and whirls around to deal with Tanis, knocking the axe out of her hands and… well, her wings obscure what she’s doing, but I recognize the sound of somebody being literally beaten to a pulp. I’d throw up if I still had a stomach.

The inviting embrace of unconsciousness is there waiting for me, but I can’t. I can’t just leave Tanis to die for getting involved in my shit. So I find more things to get angry about, more things to focus on besides being disemboweled with bullets lodged in my legs.

I’m sick of people getting hurt for being around me. I’m sick of being outdone every time I try to compete in something. I’m sick of being scared by everything that happens around here. I’m sick of almost being killed every time I get in a fight.

The almost certainly fatal condition feels like a minor discomfort. Nausea, maybe, which is good enough for me. Wrapping myself around the spear as its tip embeds itself in the ground, I open my metal fist. Another pen spear forms, and I cock my arm back.

Please work this time, I silently pray as I hurl the spear at Fuckerfly, nearly stumbling over from the exertion.

Before the spear runs Fuckerfly through her chest and pins her to the wall, before she lets out her screams of pain and rage, I make another one. Once Fuckerfly starts struggling, I throw another spear at her chest. A third one follows immediately as her cries turn to gurgles. That should hold her for a bit. I don't have any delusion that it's enough to keep her down, but I have to keep Tanis from dying here, even though I'm probably screwed.

My rage and adrenaline are spent, so the pain returns in full force, like white hot metal and the unique sensation of having no stomach. I fall to my knees and start to retch, forcing myself to check the condition of the snake girl-

Wait, where'd she go?

Someone grabs me by the shoulders and pulls me behind a corner. There's a sudden, sharp pain in my neck, and the tickle of something else. I can't turn around to see what's going on, but the pain from the injuries is… fading is the best I can describe it as. I can even see the skin around my stomach reforming, though the costume that covered it stays torn in that area.

Finally I'm released, everything looking good as new, if a little pink. I spin around to find Tanis vomiting up blood and her insides spilling out, among other signs of things being broken. Fuck, even her posture's lopsided. Don't you smile at me, dammit! This isn't funny!

Now there's something moving around beneath her skin. Like it's scratching at the surface, trying to claw its way out. I… I don't know what to make of it, but it's not as distracting as the thunking of Fuckface's feet advancing on us again. I have to try and hold her off until help arrives or something. Fuck, I don't know, but I'm not just going to leave her here.

Fuckerfly rounds the corner in time for me to make another spear and lunge at her. She catches it with her hands, and I let her keep it. I make a new one and go on the offensive, forcing Fuckerfly to fall back. The fighting has managed to take its toll on her, Eversor regeneration or not. I can see that the freshest wounds aren't closing yet, leaving holes that show off her ink-covered heart and lungs. She's breathing pretty heavily, and even her robotic parts are dripping with sweat. I can't believe it, but she's wearing down.

I'm in better shape, at least, but that could change very quickly if Fuckerfly decides to start shooting again. She suddenly starts grinning, and I back the fuck off. This turns out to be the right choice, as she starts cackling while the machine gun thing keeps shooting. Diving behind the corner, I only get shot twice in the right shoulder thanks to my foresight.

What else is there to get mad about… I'm sick of being unable to read things without triggering a trance. I'm sick of only surviving due to dumb luck. And I'm really sick of Fuckerfly antagonizing me. The anger once again eases the pain of the gunshot wound, making it bearable for the time being.

Alright… alright… I can't go after her head on again. Without Tanis supporting me, I need to get behind her somehow and finish this. I spend way too long thinking about it before I run down the hallway and turn left, sliding a little thanks to the lack of friction. I scramble forward, rush to the end of the hall, and turn left again, Fuckerfly's heavy footsteps moving towards where I was before. I keep going and turn left a third time and find she has her back to me.

I make one more spear, and dash toward her as fast as I can, for what I hope is the last attack. Fuckerfly hears me coming, but she's not quick enough enough; as soon as I get close, I change my stance: feet open, shoulders back, body crouched low, spear forward. And then I spring at her, spearing her in the chest yet again, and keep going. Yelling the entire time as I tackle Fuckerfly into a wall with a loud crash, and pin her there yet again. I feel her ribs and spine crunch under my shoulder, and she coughs blood and ink onto my face in response.

Her normally prim and proper brown hair is wild and matted with viscera and ink. Her white costume is stained red and black. The gun barrel is bent at a weird angle. And she's… she's actually starting to cry a bit.

…She looks really pitiful right now.

Once again I'm aware of the wound in my shoulder, burning like molten metal under my skin. I can't stay mad like this. I just can't. For fuck's sake even she doesn't deserve this shit.

…It's not going to work. What I'm going to do isn't going to work. It's just going to earn me derision from Miss Schulz. She's just going to scream curses at me, or try and attack again, or something. But even so, it doesn't feel right to leave it at this.

"…I'm really sorry about all this, Miss Schulz," I murmur, staring at my boots in shame. "I, I don't want to die after all, but if, um…" I wipe at my eyes with my sleeve – a part that isn't covered in something - before I continue, "if we run into each other again later, and you're still mad…" Sucking it up, I stare her straight in the eyes, meeting her hateful glare with no such animosity left in me. "if there's anything I can do to make you feel better, or make things up to you somehow, then I'll do it if I can. I mean it. Just… just stop involving other people to get to me. Please."

Miss Schulz lets her face relax and looks at me with incredulity. Like she's actually considering what I told her just now. However, it turns into a scowl right after, and she starts struggling against the spear. Darn.

I think I've done enough, so I leave her there, walking back to where I think I saw Tanis earlier. Hope she's alright.

Tanis is standing by another bloody pile of brown stuff, apparently dusting herself off or something. "Eleanor!" she says, looking completely unharmed again. "Did, did you get her?"

I nod, relieved to see her okay. "Yeah," I tell her, "I don't think-"

And I'm interrupted by the erratic clanking of a certain someone coming towards us at speed.

"Oh, come on!" I groan at Miss Schulz as she comes into view, maces ready. "Do we –have- to keep fighting?"

"That won't be necessary," a stern voice informs me.

A wisp of smoke appears out of thin air in the direction of the mysterious voice, causing Miss Schulz to slow to a stop in curiosity. Swiftly, it expands into the shape of a tall woman in a vest and skirt, with her back to me and one hand on her hip. Her half-cape and shoulder length black hair billow out behind her as if blown by a gust of wind. Her other arm rests at her side, both arms covered in black tattoos that give a distinctly snake-like feel.

I don't know why I'm scrutinizing her like this. I know who this is.

Miss Madge clears her throat, seemingly ignoring me for now. "Lady Muck," she taunted, Miss Schulz going red in the face, "your performance was embarrassing. Have the dignity to bow out."

"Fuck off, Madge!" Miss Schulz snarls, stomping forward with loud clanking sounds. "This doesn't concern you!"

"But all of this –does- concern me," Miss Madge insists, her silvery voice clear in spite of the cacophony Miss Schulz's walking created. "See, the only reason you even made it this far is that I wanted to test Miss Slam, the Warmaster allowed it, and Miss Berry is indisposed at the moment." She glances over her shoulder at me, a small grin on her face. "I really didn't believe you would do as well as you did. Congrats, kid."

I probably shouldn't have blurted out the first thing that came to mind: "…You let other people get hurt for some stupid test about me?" I grumbled, then covered my mouth in embarrassment.

"I believed the risks were acceptable," Miss Madge responds, drumming her fingers against her thigh. She glances over at Tanis and asks her, "do you have any objections, Miss Nagi?"

"Oh, no. I mean, I don't," Tanis stammers, clutching her axe to her chest. "I don't have any objections."

This seems to satisfy Miss Madge, who turns back to Miss Schulz. The berserker pounces at Miss Madge, but the Callidus Rank Leader turns to smoke the instant Miss Schulz reaches her, flowing around her assailant and reforming directly behind her.

Miss Schulz has a faraway look in her eyes for an instant, then looks at her arms and starts screaming hysterically. Miss Madge calmly strides right past her as Miss Schulz begins clawing at her arms and legs, skin flaking off and metal screeching against metal. The girl falls over, grabbing her right wing and ripping it out with an agonized scream. After much groaning from the artificial enhancements, she even manages to tear her right arm and leg off, tossing them away and thrashing on the ground as she attempts to remove all her limbs.

The horror of the situation finally sinks in fully, and I yell imploringly at Miss Madge, "Stop that!" She quirks her eyebrow at me, but doesn't stop smiling or drumming her fingers on her thigh. "Please, don't torture her any more," I plead, balling my hands into fists. "I know what it's like to have a bad day that drags on for a long time, and I want to make it up to her somehow!"

Miss Madge doesn't really do anything for an agonizingly long amount of time. Miss Schulz's spastic motions seem to increase in intensity, and I wonder if she's doing the opposite of what I asked out of pure spite. Gradually, though, he screams turn to whimpering and she seems to tire out, taking big, heaving breaths. "Out of the goodness of my heart," Miss Madge informs me, still looking smugly confident, "I'll ignore the fact that you told me what to do." Turning her head back to face Miss Schulz, she asks her, "well? Do you have anything to say in response, Miss Muck?"

Miss Schulz tries to pull herself up to a sitting position, but the struggle proves pointless with just one arm and leg. Finally, she gives up and asks me, in a very small voice, "Why?"

I smile slightly at her. "Because it's horrible to kick someone when they're down," I answer. "Even if you don't like them, even if you hate them, even if they've done awful things to you…" I have to pause to wipe at my eyes a bit before I finish, "that doesn't mean you shouldn't help them when they really need it."

Miss Schulz looks incredulous. "You don't really think that, do you?" she asks.

"Yeah. I… I haven't been following that as well as I should," I say with no small measure of shame - a bunch of really bad days isn't a good enough excuse for me to be mean to people. I got a lot to make up for. "But it's what I'm gonna try to do from now on." That makes her go silent.

"If that's all, then," Miss Madge says, "Miss Schulz will be confined to the Silent Room until Monday." She looks back to me, looking very pleased with herself. "I'll give you your performance evaluation tomorrow. Think of whatever questions you might have for me. For now, go get some rest." She starts to turn to Tanis, but stops, her half-cape swishing around. "Oh, and a word of advice," she adds, "tell your boss about this. I believe she'd like to hear it."

I nod along, still trying to process the fact that I’m getting a performance evaluation for not getting killed. Miss Madge orders, “Miss Nagi, please tend to Miss Slam’s injury before you escort her to her quarters. You are both dismissed.”

Tanis moves up and signals for me to follow her. I’m more than a little relieved to be out of here.

…I’m not sure why, but I’m cautiously optimistic about things. Maybe they’ll turn around for real this time. I hope so.

No, things are going to get better this time. I’m going to make sure of it.

TTC X-Chapters: The Nightmare Returns, part 3

Finally some good progress was being made. I could feel I was growing closer to the goal, but at the same time a certain ominous sensation crawled over me, as if things were just about to or already had turned to shit. I didn't like this. I didn't like it at all. I was tempted to take another dose of Satrophine, but I knew it was too early. I had to wait a little more otherwise the consequences would be... unsightly.

No, I had to reach my goal on my own power. It was no good to get there early if I let myself become a crazed husk in the process. Accidently killing someone I wanted to protect because of a miscalculation was about the last thing I wanted right now. To be honest I wasn't sure if I could handle either at the moment, with how frantic my mind was. I felt vulnerable.

The environment around me suddenly morphed and changed, as if crossing biomes in one of those video games. No longer a tall jungle it was, but rather a broken wastelands of crystal. It looked like ice, but it was a sickly green tint and was not slippery, with rock-like formations rising erratically and randomly everywhere, some even taking intricate or impossible shapes. Under less stressful circumstances, I would have taken some time to observe and study the strange material, but my curiosity had to be postponed as I raced between towering pillars and giant flowers of crystal alike...

Only to be greeted with the second last thing I wanted right now... Great...

Too late did I realize; the crystals were scrambling my sense of smell with a strange, indescribable scent. Otherwise I would have felt the new enemy dead ahead much earlier.

Out of all the beings in this realm, they were the ones I despised the most. The witches I could find useful. The familiars might as well be prey. The twisted half-mutated abominations I could at least pity. But these? They didn't belong in here. Their presence was an eyesore. Could I really say I belonged any more than they did? perhaps I shouldn't, but against my better judgment, I still felt like I did.

There were seven of them, all clad in their iconic armor from head to toe except a lone blueberry with long twintails who forsook her helmet; probably the squad leader. A whole squad of these 2nd Officio bitches, and judging from their armors, it was a veteran one too. Religious fanatics, the whole lot of them, I hated them so much. I hated them even more than the Witch bitch who pretends to be Future Me. I've had previous run-ins with them before and they've always attacked me on sight. I tried to talk to them, get through those thick, indoctrinated skulls of theirs, but it's always proven useless before.

"One of them sneaked on us, be vigilant sisters." one of the helmeted dildos spoke up, pointing her sword in my general direction as I came to a stop.

"I don't have time for your shit! Get out of my fucking way or I'll MAKE you move." I snarled with poorly contained contempt.

"It speaks. Be on your guard, it has achieved sentience." It? Seriously? -IT-? I am so going to fuck you up Twintails. I WILL FUCK YOU UP.

The pleasant scent of blood and sulfur rose up, shooing away that of the strange crystals' and bringing a modest smile to my face. The feeling of baleful energies running through your veins was always exciting, no matter if it was the first time, or the thousandth time, and in my current state of irritation it was a very soothing balm.

I leaped, covering the distance in a blink as they were barely moving into combat formation. Once more I longed to be able to saw them apart like I used to, but simply feeling fresh blood run through my bare fingers would be satisfactory. If I couldn't see their faces, I could hear small gasps of surprise behind those helmets as my claws, fingers joined into single cutting tools, bit metal. The so-called 'Knights' closest to me managed to parry with their swords, but their blades were shaking heavily under strain, my claws pressuring both weapons as my smile grew lightly.

I would have pressed on to establish dominance, but the rest of the squad didn't stay stunned, instead reacting swiftly. I was forced to jump to avoid shots from the rear-most squad two members, armed with a gunlance and a heavy halberd with a grenade launcher attachment respectively. I landed on top of one of the many crystal formations, denying the remaining 3 'knights' who had tried to flank and surround me. A war maul, a chainsword, and Twintails was a dual-wielding bitch with a long Arming sword and a short rapier.

I took the precious seconds as they regrouped to gather this information and prepare something else, but War maul Bitch didn't seem to want to give me time since she bashed her weapon into the crystal I was balancing myself atop of. I had to jump to another perch as it crumbled down under my feet and Gunlance bitch started taking potshots at me. I turned to the side to expose my profile, using the dense metal of my forward hand to block bullets while gathering energy with my back hand.

They stuck together closely. This would generally be a good idea, but not so much against me. One might think they'd learn by now, but no. I don't know what they teach those girls back at the 2nd, but I suppose the -actual- Witches take priority. Well, their loss. Enjoy fire.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)17:59:42 No.37421055

I unleashed a barrage of bolts of Warpfire straight in the center of the formation, forcing them to split up as iridescent flames rose and raged, licking away at their armors. One of the generic Sword bitches, probably a younger one recently transferred to the squad, hesitated and failed to move in time. Her screams pleased me greatly as she dropped her weapon and frantically tried to take off the armor on her left arm and hand, ablaze.

"Evans, cover her! the others with me, we'll punish that Heretic with death!" Twintails Bitch roared and the other rookieslut helped her comrade into hiding behind one of the larger crystals.

Gunlance Bitch and Halberd Bitch kept trying to pin me down from a distance while the other 3 split up. They were learning, but it wouldn't save them. Actually, nevermind that, I don't even -have- to kill them all, I can just ignore them if I use the terrain right.

Deciding to try to simply shake them off, I stopped my current plan of separating them in two groups by falling back in a calculated manner and instead suddenly reversed gears. I rushed straight ahead from pillar to pillar, narrowly avoiding falling whenever Maul bitch went fatty smash or when Halberd Bitch used her grenade launcher, either resulting in shattered pillars. Already I was putting some good distance between them and myself, so with some luck--

The pain caught me by total surprise as some sort of energy beam hit me in the left thigh and somehow managed to cleave my left leg right off, causing me to plummet down onto the sickly green floor and swear profusely enough to make Daemons blush. I didn't have much time; I could hear their armors clanking in the distance as they kept giving chase.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:00:48 No.37421086

I glanced around urgently and spotted my severed leg. Without wasting a second I jumped towards it with my remaining good leg and landed with an uncomfortable roll, ended prematurely by one of the pillars hitting my side. I reached out with my left hand and grabbed it, putting it back roughly in the proper place while my right hand gathered more baleful energy.

I won't lie, I'm usually pretty proud of my regeneration, but this was too much for it. There was a whole chunk missing so it wouldn't be able to take care of it; I had to do something more drastic. Once I applied the sorcerous spell, it was my turn to muffle screams through my bared teeth. I hated having to use this spell because it hurt as much as being next to a naked Culexus, but I didn't exactly have a choice at that point.

The bone reformed first, baleful energies converging and shaping themselves into marrows and osseous tissues to bridge the gap. That was the easy part, though. The pain grew even worse as came the turn for cartilage and muscle tissues to grow around it, which took more time as well due to the bulk and complexity. I was finally able to take a breath as the skin finished, but it didn't last as I immediately had to roll out of the way due to Twintails Bitch's arming sword chopping down the ground where I was a second ago. She backed off when she saw I was fine, though, and motioned for the others to halt.

-"Baxter! You said you shot her leg off!" she inquired with a glance back as I got back to my feet.

"I did! I swear I saw it!" another voice came from further back, trying to catch up. Gunlance Bitch maybe?

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:01:52 No.37421116

- "Well her leg looks quite thoroughly unshot! we'll have a talk about exaggerating your achievements later." She then motioned to her buddies and Maul Bitch and Chainsword Bitch moved in to my sides. It looked like I wouldn't be able to shake them off so easily, but at this point, I wasn't really thinking much anymore. The pain, the hatred, the time running out, the tempting scent, this maddening realm...

The hunger...

"ENOUGH."

My irises shrunk to the point where they were barely noticeable among the black tar. My mind snapped as I reached the limits of my self-control and patience, becoming little more than a beast of instinct and murder. I raised both arms towards the 'knights flanking me and wide arcs of purple lightning fired from the tips of my claws, knocking them both back several meters and leaving the squad leader alone for me to close in onto.

She steadied her footing and readied herself for me. Commendable, in the situation, but I put a ruthless pressure immediately. Even with both weapons and her obvious years of experience, she was struggling to keep up with the sheer ferocity of my claws, swiping and stabbing with fury.

"Sisters! to me!" Shut up. I'll make you shut up. I'll make you shut up forever if you don't fucking stop.

Despite her best efforts my claws slipped through her defenses a few times and drew blood, ignoring her armor as if it was mere wet tissue and grasping into the flesh. I was only stopped in my fury by the intervention of Gunlance Bitch and one of the rookieslut; the former managing to sneak a shot into my left shoulder while the later jumped down from a crystal formation and tried to strike me from overhead in a fairly well-coordinated attack.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:02:54 No.37421140

My new wound was already smoking with baleful energies from my regeneration as I grabbed the sword approaching me in my left claw and pulled to the side, making her violently crash down to my side while Twintails Bitch was still recoiling from her own wounds. Another shot from Gunlance Bitch found its way into my back as I turned to take care of the downed Rookieslut, but it utterly failed to even slow me down. My right claw fell down on her neck, cutting through the steel and severing it. It was so quick it was probably painless, but the scent and feeling of blood stirred me on, made me rejoice. I knew I shouldn't indulge. I knew I had more important things to do. But I could hardly control myself anymore.

"What in the Blessed lady's name is this thing?" A recovered Maul Bitch managed to inquire to Chainsword bitch, the two approaching me cautiously and defensively. I stared back, blood dripping from my claws.

"I thought it was a Familiar at first." step "But it's too powerful to be one" step "so it has to be a Witch, right?" step.

"Probably." step "Think it's an Alpha?" another step.

"Pull it together you two!" Twintails Bitch's nagging voice rose up as she did, wincing visibly from the wounds I inflicted on her earlier. "I.. think I heard of her. If that's the Tarrasque, then we -have- to take her on all at once." Yes, please do. "Harlow, call for reinforcements, we'll do what we can." Oh great, more religious maggots. "Keep steady and cover for each others, girls!"

"E-evans? EVANS!! BLESSED LADY NO!" Halberd Bitch stared down at the headless body of the rookieslut with shifty eyes as she made it on the scene.

"Summers! Wait!" The squad leader's warning was useless as Halberd Bitch charged at me immediately, wrath no doubt burning in her eyes . She was probably close to the girl I just beheaded.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:03:55 No.37421159

She opened by firing a frag grenade from that weapon attachment of hers but I simply jumped clear of the explosion. She raised her halberd to try to impale me as I was coming back down, but I deflected the blade by sending out another, smaller and quicker burst of Warp Lightning onto her arm, earning me a pleasant sound of pain escaping her lips, quickly followed by another as I landed right up to her face and swiped my left claw up her chestplate, raking it across from waist to shoulderplate.

From the corner of my eye I could spot Gunlance bitch having jumped onto a Crystal pillar as well and preparing her light beam shit again, so I pushed Halberd bitch into the way of her line of sight, practically daring her to shoot through her friend if she could. I'd be in a pinch if she did, but fuck her either way.

The others had managed to surround me again, but this time I didn't back out. I was too lost in my bloodlust to relocate. The four of them began to slash and smash at me while Gunlance Bitch I could only assume waited for an opportunity. I was doing much the same as I whirled around, deflecting blows with both claws while waiting for a lull in the strikes, occasionally kicking one of them away when their strikes were coordinated too well.

And coordinate they did. Even though I did not have trouble keeping up with their attacks, they were all precise, meaningful strikes made by Magical Girls who knew well what they were doing without wasting any motions. Their teamwork was good as well, they had no doubt been working together for a long time and the Halberd-wielding one was particularly vindictive for her friend. That was good. You could only meet brutality with brutality. Ultimately though, it proved her undoing as she over-extended a strike and lost her balance.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:04:57 No.37421179

In a blink, I knocked away Twintails Bitch and Chainsword Bitch with a healthy application of baleful lightning and lunged onto her neck with an upwards strike more quickly than she could recover. Another head rolled down and Maul Bitch was too slow to stop it. Not too slow to hit me in the back and send me to the ground, though, preventing me from enjoying the warm sensation of flowing blood in the process. What an asshole.

I rolled onto my back and narrowly avoided a crushing downwards blow, but not the sniper shot from Gunlance Bitch who fucked my leg up with her light beam bullshit, AGAIN.I grabbed the maul by the handle before her wielder could pull it back up, resulting in a small gasp from the 'knight', whom I tugged towards me with enough strength to make her fall onto me. In any other circumstances, I would have taken the occasion to have some healthy "fun" with her and leave her safe but confused, but I had neither the composure or the leisure at the moment, so I just took her skull.

I had to roll some more to avoid more shots from the team Vindicare, who went for my head this time, but I had grown sooo sick of her by now. It only took a few seconds before a barrage of Warpfire took her by surprise and hit her squarely in the chest, setting her armor ablaze and making her fall down from her perch.

"Summers... Willow... Lyon..." Twintails Bitch was back on her feet, still jolting a little from the lightning as she looked frantically between my handiwork. Her body shook lightly as she fell to her knees, in shock and her own wounds not tended to. "Everyone... what.. what can I do...I have to stop her... There's got to be a way.. but how..."

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:06:00 No.37421206

That was good, because I needed time to fix my other leg. Unfortunately, I wasn't in such luck because Chainsword Bitch managed to stomach the death of her teammates more easily and crashed down her weapon on me. I had to use both of my hands to catch it since I wasn't really in much of a state to be dodging. The chain screeched onto the black steel of my claws, sparks flying wildly but the weapon not managing to dig through the tainted fleshmetal.

I held onto her weapon, locking it into a stalemate where she tried to force her way through, but I didn't give any ground. Even though I couldn't see her face, I could tell from the sounds she was making that she was driven by hatred right now. I would have wanted to say this was the same mistake as her comrade earlier, but really, who was I to talk about -that-? No one. I had no right.

I smashed into the side of her armor with my good leg, which caused her to fall down to the side and roll with a curse. I followed even though she tried to slash at me once more in her fall and ultimately ended up on her despite my reduced mobility. In a last, panicked gesture, her chainsword started to bite into my torso, but it was too late.

The beheading carnival continued, and Twintails was too broken to say a word about it. I flopped back onto the ground with a heavy breath as I let my regeneration take care of the injury to my chest for a handful of long seconds. With that taken care of, I sat up and reached for my severed leg for the second time in a far too short time, seating myself against a crystal tree and starting the same atrociously painful process all over again.

>> ☐ Zweihart 01/16/15(Fri)18:07:02 No.37421222

Doing so pulled me back from my frenzied state and into a more collected, if still fragile one. As I stood up, I noticed the squad leader's breakdown was getting worse. She held her head with both hands, eyes frantically cycling through the headless bodies of the girls in her care, the girls who had put their trust in her. I sighed heavily and made my way towards her, which caused her to gasp and her eyes to narrow. Damn I despised those religious fucks. I grabbed her by the throat and lifted her to my eyes' level, giving her one backhanded, if genuine, piece of advice.

"You want to do something about it? Calm the fuck down. Don't Witch Out, survive. I didn't crush their Soul Gems, so they'll be fine if you recover them." I spat out coldly before dropping her back down and turning around, resuming my own journey.

Lewd question for the Decu:

It's now been mentioned that it's not terribly uncommon for magical girls to temporarily become futanari abominations. It's not really my fetish, but it has left me with a question that will haunt me until it gets answered:

Between Sayaka and Kyouko, which one usually has the dick?

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/25/15(Sun)10:11:46 No.37611246 Archived

"Fine. I'll play your games, Witch." You growl this as you step forward, over the threshold and into the twisting, snarling darkness. Ignoring the bone-biting chill of the room that hit you like a combat knife between the ribs, your breath streaming out of your lips in white ribbons of smoke-like condensation as you lead the rest of your team to the only source of light in the damn place. Leading them to have tea with the fucking enemy.

It's not the worst decision you've made so far, but something tells you that it'll be one for the books.

+...No Callidus bullshit. Not as far as I can tell. + Wendy's pulse comes to you in a hurried stage whisper, quick but unhurried, tense but not panicked. + Then again, we are in an office building right in the middle of actual, literal hell, so it's kind of hard to tell with all the fucking interference. +

+ Interference? + You turn towards her, and she meets your gaze with a shrug.

+ You know. From all the souls screaming outside. Or all the goat-dildos trying to get in, driven insane by bloodthirst. Take your fucking pick, Kong. +

...Hnh. Well. You'll take what you can get, then.

+ We'll be ready to move in case she tries anything, too. + Mami's pulse, in contrast, is a soft nudge against your senses - urgent enough to get your attention, but gentle enough not to disrupt your thoughts. + The first sign of treachery, and we'll go for her throat. +

+ What about being diplomatic? + You couldn't help but pulse this back at her as you reach your chairs - wooden ones, carved from heavy teak, nothing that looked like they'd suddenly turn into full-body restraints the moment someone planted their ass in one.

So yeah. Looks safe enough to sit in at least, so you do.

+ Certain types of diplomacy work better than others in certain situations, Chiaki-san as I'm sure you've already figured out by now. + Mami replies as she smoothens her skirt down before primly seating herself beside you. + Most of the time, diplomacy works when you sit around a table and talk. Other times, it works better with you ramming a gun into someone else's mouth to help them to agree to your terms faster. +

Both you and Wendy - who'd taken a seat at your other side - smirk at this. Truth be told, that was one of the things you really loved about the blonde - sure, she was softness and warmth and smiles all over, but there was also an edge to her, a subtle one that she revealed from time to time. It made her relatable, even if she was a retreat from all the shit you had to deal with.

No time to think about that now, though. Not when the mission objective is sitting right in front of you, across the table, calmly sipping her tea as horned and bladed shadows twisted and trashed and cavorted behind her.

"...Witch, hm?" Ahriman says after a long, long while, looking down at her cup, before turning clear green eyes towards you, a smile curling her lips. Oriko's eyes. Oriko's smile. "I'd point out the delicious irony of you calling me that, Miss Matsuda, but I think we're quite past trading insults and barbs against each other. Not after all of this." She gestures with a kimono-sleeved hand to the shadow-covered floor, her own breath misting from her lips in a puff of white smoke. "All the killing. All the baiting. Chasing me to the depths of hell, where gods and mortals meet."

She forgot the bit about her mailing you body parts. Body parts she made to look like Mami. What kind of sick fuck even THINKS like that?

"..." Ahriman nods after a moment, the gesture seemingly more apologetic than anything else. "Lucius insisted upon that. She said it would be a clear warning for you and to the rest of the Ninth, and thus cow you into a position weak enough that you'd stay clear of us. It appears to have had the directly opposite effect."

Heh. She got that right. When you broke Lucius' Soul Gem with your own hands, back at the Silent Room, you still felt her shame at being soundly beaten back at the stadium.

"I'm not entirely blameless for that, however. I let her go through with it. I didn't care at the time. I only wanted you to suffer. I wanted all of you to suffer." Her tea cup clinks against its saucer as she places a hand on her chest, her green eyes glowing bright in the darkness. "Both of us. My heart, and that of the girl who helped me manifest in this realm."

...Oriko, then. She still hates you for Kirika.

"You have a talent for understatement, Miss Matsuda." Ahriman smiles, and it looks genuine for the most bit, if not for the fact that it doesn't touch her eyes at all. "Her hatred burns hot enough to hurt, sometimes. She knows that she hates for the wrong reasons, that your killing Kirika is justified, but..." She shakes her head. "Her wounds are too deep for simple forgiveness to fill. You've taken so much from her that simply understanding why you did it isn't enough."

Then what the fuck were you supposed to do, then? Just let Kirika live? Kirika was killing people left and right, and--

Ahriman holds up a hand. "If I knew the answer to that, Miss Matsuda, we wouldn't be here. I wouldn't be here. But here we are, sitting around a table, in a building rooted firmly in the ruins of madness. I am not telling you this to find a solution, I am merely telling you this so you are aware of what you have done. Nothing more."

...

"Now. Since you've chosen the path of diplomacy to begin with - a choice that I've been made aware is a rare one for you to make - let's begin being diplomatic." That smile again, followed by another sip from her teacup. "Let's enjoy what civilities we can trade before the hostilities inevitably begin."

Well. At least she knows where all this could go.

Demanding Ahriman to 'return' someone who likely willingly joined up with her to enact vengeance on us is hilarious. The best we can do is dissuade Oriko, take her on until she's satisfied or beat them down by force.

Right. Sure. Time to be diplomatic, like you agreed to.

You clear your throat here, before asking your first question. Something that she called you earlier - what was it? Angel Slayer Reborn? Did you get that right?

"Mostly, yes." Ahriman nods, taking another dainty sip of her tea. Beside you, you hear Wendy grumble something about it sounding like some sort of animated porn made three decades ago - and then, Mami hushing her a moment later.

...Yeah, alright. You can't help but agree with that. Shieldmaiden's kind of poetic in a dildo kind of way, but Angel Slayer Reborn--

"It does sound a fair bit overdramatic, doesn't it?" Ahriman smiles again, this time a rather self-deprecating one that you can't help but consider pretty, much more so with Oriko's features giving it shape. "I thought similar when I first heard it, but that is what they called you. Or rather...what they will come to call you, if you continue down the path you've chosen for yourself."

'They'?

The kimono-clad girl nods with a schoolteacher's patience. "The souls of the Empyrean, Miss Matsuda. The ones of those you've already killed, and those who you will kill in the future. All of them. That is how they curse your name, from now to eternity, with all the rage and anguish of those unjustly murdered."

She leans back on her chair as she presses one dainty hand against her temple, her expression one of dull, muted pain. "I hear them still, even now. Even the Witches that roam this particular slice of hell also scream your name to the winds, Miss Matsuda. Worshipping you and baying for your blood in the same breath. Never stopping, never ending--" A grunt passes her lips as her eyes flutter close.

You and your entire team, in unconscious unison, tense at this. Your fingers curling around your weapons.

...She alright?

>> ☐ Deculture 01/25/15(Sun)11:43:31 No.37612300

>>37612284

Ahriman laughs here, a delicate sound, and her eyes shine with amusement as she opens them again. "I'm supposed to the main objective of your Kill-Team, Miss Matsuda. That means that I am the target that needs to be put down before you can all go home. And you're asking if I'm alright, now?" She shakes her head. "I'm not turning into some hellish nightmare with cloven feet and goat horns, if that's what you're worried about. It's just that Miss Oriko is more...sensitive to the Akashic Realm than I had thought."

Oriko's sensitive?

Another nod. "The girl has untapped potential. Mountains of it. She would have made for a particularly insightful seer if she'd been contracted before I got to her. Foresight AND the ability to divine the Empyrean? I'm surprised your Incubator didn't jump at the chance to get her into your ranks, although I would hazard that Kirika had something to do with it."

...Yeah. That sounds likely. Crazy bitch must've strong-armed Kyuubey not to contract Oriko, just like when you tried to dissuade him from even thinking of contracting Iori.

"In any case, that is where the title comes from. It is how this place refers to you, Miss Matsuda. I only thought it apt to use it for our first meeting." A chuckle. "Well, I would say it's our second meeting, but you weren't exactly yourself then."

Well, She's right there, you agree. You weren't yourself back then. Back when Kharn fucked the Third up.

A shadow flits across Ahriman's - Oriko's - features at that, and something cruelly-bladed flits from behind her ears before disappearing entirely. "...Yes. That is exactly what I meant. I'm glad you still remember it." She takes another sip from her teacup, before replacing it on its saucer. "Now, ask your second question, Miss Matsuda. While we're still being civil."

...Struck a nerve there, then? Fine. What does she really want?

[2/3]

"Revenge," Ahriman says plainly. "Revenge for what you did to my Officio, and what you did to Miss Oriko. Vengeance for all the lives you've taken back then, and for the murder of Kure Kirika. I want you to suffer as I did. To suffer as Oriko did."

"Ahriman--" Mami starts, standing up from her seat - but Ahriman silences her with another upraised hand.

"You asked. I answered. Those are my terms." The kimono-clad girl says, lowering her hand - and you catch a brief glimpse of the black veins threading through her arm as it is momentarily revealed by that movement. "And they would still be my terms, had I not seen what I saw when you sent yourselves screaming into hell after me."

What? So...those aren't her terms? She doesn't really want to kill you, now?

"I still do," Ahriman nods. "But I'm willing to set that aside for something else. Something much more important than the collecting of debts and the silencing of angry souls." She drains her cup empty of tea, before setting it aside and then holding out her hand towards you.

"I need to show you something, Miss Matsuda, but to do it in the most efficient way possible, I need your Soul Gem."

What.

"Your Soul Gem, Miss Matsuda, in its passive form." She holds out her hand again. "Nothing untoward will happen to it, take my word for it." A smile curls her lips. "For what little my word is worth nowadays."

How do you react?

[]No.

You glare at Ahriman for a couple of incredulous seconds before shaking your head.

...Yeah, okay. Fine. You'll admit that you're not exactly top class Warmaster material here. You're not as brutal as Kharn, you're not as useful as Malal and you're nowhere near as capable as Mami. You've got a reputation for being a lousy drunk, you smoked cigarettes by the carton, and you went through painkillers like candy. If the First was going to do one of its rare recruitment drives, you wouldn't even be on their list of potentials.

But you're pretty sure you're not so stupid as to hand over your fucking Soul Gem to anyone who asks. And especially not to someone who'd been doing their level best to kill you in the first place.

What the fuck is so important that she needs your Soul Gem to be able to show it to you, anyway? If she's going to ask you for your goddamn SOUL - the egg-sized, egg-shaped object that is the fucking KEY to your existence - then the least she could do is to tell you that, right?

Ahriman's smile, while polite, is still cold. Colder than a walk-in fridge, cold as a gun.

"I suppose it IS hard for anyone to entrust something so important to someone who'd been a mortal enemy only minutes before." She muses after a moment's silence. "But at the same time, the message I have - the one I require to hold your Soul Gem in hand to give - is important enough that it requires a direct transference of thought, emotion and understanding. Anything less than that, and I risk the message being misinterpreted, or worse..." She looks pointedly to Mami. "...Stolen by the snakes you so readily allow in your company, Miss Matsuda."

You bristle at this, at the same time Wendy murmurs something foul and American under her breath. Alright, she can get protective over whatever the fuck message this is, but you're not going to sit here and listen to her insult Mami.

"...I apologize. I meant no offense or insult." Ahriman bows her head slightly. "I merely wanted to explain myself. Granted, I could have had my Culexus send the message for me, but..." She shrugs. "She is no longer with us, a fact that I've been made aware of moments earlier. My last officer and most ardent follower after Lucius, burnt to ash by the flames of her own blood."

Well, fine. That's her reasoning. But what the fuck IS the message, then? What the fuck is it about?

"About you, Miss Matsuda. About what you really are." It's here that Ahriman leans forward, both hands on the table. Her ice-cold, composed facade cracking slightly. Showing off a bit of the worshipful zealot that you'd fought and murdered over four lifetimes ago. "Why the Blessed Lady is so obsessed over you. Why she wants to taste your flesh so much."

What? Mami and Wendy both glance your way, and you meet their puzzled gazes in turn. Shaking your head, you turn back to Ahriman, doubt and confusion warring inside you.

...If she's talking about what you think she is, then you already know, you hazard after a moment, your grip unconsciously tightening around Muramasa's handle. You don't need telling again, and she certainly doesn't need your Soul gem to repeat it to you.

"And you actually trust them?" No trace of sneering mockery in her voice, no honeyed tones of deception - just a serious, frank query with narrowed eyes and pressed-thin lips. "I know who told you, Miss Matsuda. I heard them tell you. And you trusted them immediately, just because they spoke with your voice and smiled with your own face." Ahriman shakes her head mournfully. "Still so naive. Still so trusting. Such a pity."

>> ☐ Deculture 01/25/15(Sun)13:35:17 No.37614286

>>37614266

She turns towards you again. "They've been feeding you lies, Miss Matsuda. Nothing but lies." Ahriman's green-eyed stare roots you to your seat in its intensity.

"You are not their last hope, their last incarnation, or whatever it is they tried to herald you as. This is what the Golden Weapons do - they trick you, they twist you into whatever they want you to be. Turning you into a blood-maddened berserker is only one of their endgames. One can turn you into a daemon obsessed with martial perfection, another will twist you into a knowledge-hungry scholar desperate for all the scraps of information you can wring from the Akashic Realm."

Her smile, cold as it was, turns colder. "And there is at least one that will trick its wielder into believing that they have some sort of grand quest in front of them, a messianic destiny. But whatever they decide upon, well...it all comes down to bloodshed in the end. And the thirst of the Blessed Lady is slaked again then, but only for a time."

She holds out her hand again. "Give your Soul Gem to me and I will dispel all the lies that had been made to root in your mind, Chiaki Matsuda. I will teach you why it is foolish to heed the words of ghosts. I know, for listening to them was what brought me and my Officio to ruin in the first place."

"Chiaki-san..." Mami murmurs underneath her breath, looking at you. At the same time that Wendy breathes out your nickname.

What do you do? This...you weren't expecting this.

The Three Stooges, lying? It's...well, it hasn't exactly crossed your mind, and some of the things they told you and taught you were indeed useful, but...well, they did come from your Desert Eagle. Your Golden Desert Eagle.

Then again...

A moment's worth of focus, a snapping sensation of force being cinched tight, and your own Soul Gem manifests onto your cupped palm.

Slowly standing up from your seat - Muramasa gripped with your other hand - it's here that you make to hand over your Soul Gem to Ahriman. To the Prophet. To the main objective that you and your friends have been dying to kill.

Any other day, you would've hit yourself - or even kneecapped yourself - at the very fucking CONCEPT of doing something like this. Giving the crystallization of your own SOUL to a high-value target, one that had sent hordes of screaming magical girls at you to end your life - this went beyond making bad decisions, this was making bad decisions on PURPOSE. You weren't all that bright or clever, sure, but you never thought yourself to be infected with the specific kind of stupid necessary to do something like this.

But at this exact moment, Ahriman looked...well, sincere. More than that, she looked desperate. Not desperate in any cowardly, deceitful sense, where she only spoke what you needed to hear in order to leave yourself open to a killing blow - it was desperation that spoke of wanting to do something, anything, before it's too late. The desperation that made people rage against inevitability, to struggle against the dying of the light.

Was it enough to make you look away from everything she'd done so far and deem her worthy of trust? Of course not. You're not kidding anybody. You've never been that forgiving or that trusting.

But her desperation - and what she'd said - made her case one that was impossible to ignore, and something you just had to try. Because doing so otherwise would mean not knowing something that might help you deal with the situation you're in.

As you hold out your Soul Gem, to drop it into Ahriman's waiting hand--

+ Wait. WAIT! +

Your fingers close and your hand draws back in reflex. Ahriman frowns at this, and you turn to look at the source of the pulse.

+ Kong, what the absolute fuck do you think you're doing?! + Wendy's pulse is panicked now, at sharp contrast with her deadpan expression. The only thing giving her away is the sweat trickling down her face. + You're giving your Soul Gem to Ahriman. You're giving your SOUL GEM to the fucking TERRORIST that had a church full of our girls firebombed by a fucking Culexus. The only thing giving her away is the sweat trickling down her face. + You're giving your Soul Gem to Ahriman. You're giving your SOUL GEM to the fucking TERRORIST that had a church full of our girls firebombed by a fucking Culexus. Just because she seems to have a change of heart, you're trusting her with your life now? WHAT THE FUCK? +

'You know, this a real cluster fuck we've gotten ourselves in. Here we are. In Hell. Hunted by not one but two gods. And I'm about to give my soul gem to the person- well technically two people- that want me incredibly dead. And I'll do it too. Because I have to know what I'm up against. I know these golden... things twist their users. Look at you for example. Or what happened to she who has been screaming at me the past two minutes in this sword to slit your throat. Even while you wear the flesh of her lover, she just wants blood. After you do whatever you need to do with my gem -be it lies, a curse or whatever- you will then probably try to kill me. Hopefully you will politely pass my soul gem back to me in between but we both know how this will end.'

'Mami. Wendy. If I die either leave the gold here or lock it where no one can get to it.'

'Ahriman. Catch.'

+ Full of bad ideas, remember? + Even in this situation, you couldn't help but crack the smallest of smiles towards your ex. + And if it does go to shit, well...+ You turn back to Ahriman, giving the kimono-clad blonde a nod. + I have you and Mami to back me up, right? +

+ ...Yeah, but... + Wendy starts, clearly hesitant, before letting out a sigh of tense resignation. + ...She hurts you, I kill her. I don't care if Sakura gets pissy at me for saving her best friend's ass instead of this uppity bitch. Knowing her, she'll probably thank me afterwards. +

Heh. Yeah. Kyoko probably would.

You close your eyes and take a deep breath, forcing your pounding heartbeat to slow - and it's here that you finally commit the one sin that a Magical Girl should never even think about.

Of your own free will, you hand over your Soul Gem - in all its darkened, black-spiked glory - to someone you knew nothing about and trusted even less.

Gave it to them, to do as they wished.

Ignoring the sudden prickling feeling of impending doom making the hair on your neck stand up on end as you watch Ahriman close her dainty fingers around the bauble, bringing it closer to her face.

"Amazing," The blonde breathes, clear awe in her voice, her words escaping her lips in prayer-like reverence. "This is what the Soul Gem of one such as you looks like? It is...it is magnificent, Miss Matsuda. Sublime in its corruption, majestic in its malevolence." She licks her suddenly-dry lips, a gesture that you can't help but see as somewhat erotic, despite the fact that she's fucking talking about your SOUL. "I...I can almost taste the despair within. It's calling to me--"

"Stop looking at the fucking thing like you're about to shove it up your ass," Wendy suddenly growls, completely apropos of nothing. "And do whatever the fuck you were supposed to do already--"

"Wendy, please." Mami shushes her, her expression just as tense, just as drawn as Wendy's - but where Wendy was already growling and on the edge of panicked anger, Mami was still cool. Still professional. "Let her do what the Warmaster allowed her to do."

Ahriman glowers at your ex, before shaking her head, a pale flush of pink on her cheeks. "...Very well. Miss Matsuda? You might want to sit down for this, and hold on to something. This will be a bit...bracing."

Sit down? You manage to tear your eyes away from the horrific sight of your Soul Gem resting in someone else's hands long enough to look at Ahriman. Bracing? What...what the fuck is she going to do with your Soul Gem, anyway? Because if it's going to hurt--

A flash of light, outside the building, bright enough to shine through the blood-crusted windows and penetrate the darkness of the floor you're in, cuts you off as it illuminates everything for a split-second, blinding you temporarily. When your sight returns a moment later, you see Ahriman smiling from across the table, your Soul Gem sparking in her hands.

"Life is full of pain, Miss Matsuda. Some moments just involve more than others."

You open your mouth to reply - but only a scream tears its way out of your lungs as the pain smashes into you like a truck, knocking you off your feet, sending you tumbling back against the chair, before depositing you into a shrieking, writhing mess on the floor. Your fingers curling into arthritic claws as all the muscles of your body suddenly snap taut in a cramp, as if suddenly flooded with lactic acid.

"KONG!" Wendy screams. "AHRIMAN, WHAT THE FUCK ARE YOU DOING TO HER--"

"I AM REMAKING HER!" The blonde shrieks back. "I AM BRINGING HER TRUE FORM TO LIGHT, AND YOU CANNOT STOP ME!"

The pain is indescribable. You're no stranger to the sensation, as you've made clear countless times - but this was something else. This wasn't just the pain of a grievous stomach wound or the searing fire of poison designed for torture - it was both, combined with the ache of having all your bones broken all at once. Almost enough pain for your body to attempt shutting itself down to preserve what sanity you had left - but not quite enough to actually tick over to that blessed, stunted, comatose relief.

The pain. The pain is taking you to pieces.

With your entire being consumed by fire, you hear - rather than feel - something tearing away from your back, just above your left shoulderblade. Another follows it, mirroring the action on the other side, your flesh and costume giving way to it in wet, juicy rips.

Blood, hot and black and sweet, floods from your mouth as you gasp for air, and you watch with tear-blurred eyes as the gory puddle that had accumulated underneath you slowly moves to seep into your costume. Congealing into it. Staining it red, then black. Turning it into a mockery of its former self, before it wore the stains of a mission's worth of kills.

The pain abates enough for you to see your hands. No longer bare, they were now sheathed in black silk gloves, the tips ending in claws. Reminding you of the demon cackling inside your Shield.

No. Not Pinky. Not her.

You stare past your hands, and into the pool of blood in front of you.

Your breath catching in your throat as you see the Transcendent One looking back at you, her skeletal wings spread. The look of utter horror in her face matching yours.

No. That's...no. This can't be real. This has got to be some kind of Callidus bullshit, it's--

"Do you see?" Ahriman cackles, pointing towards you, a mad gleam in her eyes. "DO YOU SEE?! It was never the Blessed Lady that was at fault - it was you all along, FALSE GODDESS! It is YOU who will lead us to ruin!" With your Soul Gem in her one hand, she reaches behind her to draw out a knife - one with a wicked black blade, as sharp as hate and as black as death. The knife itself seemingly made out of pure, solid shadow.

With a speed fueled by rage, Ahriman raises it over her head, its point aimed to end your miserable existence.

"This is for Erebus,' She whispers. "Erebus and Kirika."

She stabs downward--

An Irish Girl's Wish Part 3: Let's Be Friends!

"Umm, m-my name is Ashlin McHale. I-it's nice to meet you all."

The room was silent as the eyes of a black haired, silver eyed girl, a short golden blonde, and a tall red head fell upon the petite Irish girl. She stood there, fidgeting all about, her silver-blue armored fingers clinking in the silence. A violet metal hand slapped onto Ashlin's shoulder, making the girl jump in surprise.

"Sorry ladies, Ashlin seems to be a bit shy." The hand retreated to its owner, a tall, wide built Light Ironform painted a soft violet. It placed its hands on its thick, metal pockmarked hips, bringing the girls eyes, including Ashlin's onto it. "My name is Serah Hanon, Secrutix of the Xiplos order. I'm here to introduce your newest squad member, little Ashlin here." The Light Ironform's red-pink spherical sockets scanned the room, resting on the tall, dark skinned red head. "Strike Leader Maria Brea, come here."

The fiery eyed Eversor stepped away from her bunk, placing the greatsword she was sharpening onto her cot. "Welcome to Strike Team Malleus. I'm the leader of this ragtag bunch, Maria Brea." She extended a hand, Ashlin giving it a firm shake. "The shorty over there-"

"I HEARD THAT."
"-is Edea Willows." Ashlin's emerald eyes glanced over to the tiny blonde, a mechanical hand waving at her. "Don't mind Edea, she-"

Serah held up a hand, bring Maria to a halt. "My apologies, but I have other business to attend to. I should return before the days end and have everything sorted out." The tall Ironform turned and left, leaving Ashlin alone with these new people.

"Don't just stand there, take a seat somewhere." Ashlin felt a gentle push as Maria bumped her forwards. "None of us are gonna bite, so come on."

The petite Irish girl shakily stepped forward, finding a seat on a vacant cot. The other three girls chuckled at her, making Ashlin blush deeply, her reddened cheeks clashing with her creamy white skin. "S-sorry, I'm n-not used to being a-around new people." Ashlin's feet began to tap on the floor out of nervousness. "But I-I hope I can work well with you guys!

Maria let out a hearty laugh, sliding over to the silver eyed girl. "Oh, I almost forgot. The last member of our little entourage is Natalie Miles." Ashlin beamed at the newly introduced Eversor, only to have a glare returned. "No worries Ashlin, she won't bite. Nat can be a bitch sometimes, but she means well."

Natalie begrudgingly got up at Maria's behest, wealking and extending an open hand to the armor clad magical girl. "Pleasure to meet you, Ashlin. Do as you're told and you'll be fine."

Ashlin took the hand in her own, gently shaking it in a show of good faith. "It's n-nice to meet you all. I hope we can be friends!"

~~~~~~~~~~~

The air was silent as Ashlin stood beside Natalie, their superior staring at them from behind her desk. The emerald eyed Eversor shivered, her soul gem 'burning' from the intense mood in the room.

"So, from the top. I want you two to tell me just what the hell happened and why." The bald headed Ironform gave a blank stare at the two raven haired girls, pointing a finger at Natalie. "I'll start with your side."

"Umm...how should I put it." Natalie thought for a moment, crossing her arms before speaking. "She insulted my friends. Plain and simple. I'm not gonna sit and let someone talk shit about my friends like that." She shot a quick glare at her fellow magical girl, making Ashlin flinch in surprise. "So, I got mad. How can ya blame me?"

The room grew silent again, Natalie still with her arms crossed, Lyssa staring at the girls, with Ashlin staring at the floor. She fiddled with her fingers as Lyssa aimed her glowing eyes at the tiny Eversor. "Now, your side, Ashlin."

Ashlin fumbled her words, taking a few seconds to form a coherent sentence. "W-we were talking, Natalie smacked my book out of my hands, we both said some things and then..." The Irish girl froze as her mind tried to find the proper wording. "...then all I saw was her on top of me, hitting me." She hastily finished how Nokota cleaned and healed her up, Lyssa simply staring and taking it all in. "I'm sorry, Miss Forax. I didn't mean to cause any trouble."

"Eugh...if this was any other situation, I'd have you sent back to the Olympia for proper punishment, but all things considered," A short wave of her arm brought the girls attention to the slow construction going on outside. "we don't have such luxury. So we'll have to deal with it here." Standing, Lyssa walked over to the far window, watching the busy body Light Ironforms outside. "...I remember being told you don't like Ashlin very much, right Natalie?"

The silver eyed Eversor snapped to attention at her name. "Y-yes Miss Forax. Ever since she was assigned to our squad, I felt I wouldn't like her." Natalie sighed, a tired look taking her face. "And today was just the end result. I knew something like this would happen, but not this fast."

"I don't need to know the whole story, just your opinion." The mechanized magical girl spun around to face Ashlin and Natalie, her LED eyes 'closing' in thought. "...very well, this is your punishment. No arguing, no complaining . For the next seven days, you and Ashlin will be on guard duty. No sleep whatsoever until your punishment is over. You may be trained for lack of sleep, but still, your body naturally needs it." The girls gasped at the revelation, Lyssa bringing up a metal hand to shush them. "You two need to learn to get along, and this will also work as a team building exercise. Keep each other awake, and watch out for each other. Maria and Edea will give you a one hour break every 12 hours for food and such, so use that time wisely."

Ashlin stepped forward, bringing her forearms over her chest. "Umm, I know you said not to complain, and I'm ready to take our punishment, but I've..." The petite girl fiddled with her thumbs, nervousness washing over her. Her gaze met the floor as she spoke. "I've never finished all of my training with what was happening to me., so that mi-"

"Yes, and?" Ashlin was quickly cut off, her superior staring at her intently. "You'll just have to deal with it. Your punishment is final, and that's all there is to it."

Lyssa pointed to the door, commanding the two girls to leave. "I have unfinished business with Miss Williams. You are dismissed."

3 nights passed for Ashlin, each night slowly becoming harder to stay awake. Multiple times she found herself dosing off, only to have Natalie smacking the back of her head to snap her back awake. Tonight was no different for the young Eversor.

The setting sun hung on the horizon as the two black haired magical girls stared off at the wind swept plains. Ashlin gently slapped her face in a futile attempt to stay awake, giving a worrying stare to Natalie. Her crimson clad companion simply scoffed. "At least you don't have to hit me again." Ashlin chuckled softly, shaking her head of drowsiness. A cool wind began blowing, making the two shiver. "It's pretty cold out, huh Natalie?"

The silver eyed girl curled her cloak around her, bringing the hood on as well. "Kinda, I guess. Could be better." Natalie turned to Ashlin, staring at the armored magical girl. "You're probably cold as hell, with you being half fucking naked."

"Yeah...but I'm fine. The cold will help keep me awake, that's for sure." Ashlin bobbed back and forth on the heels of her clawed feet, leaning on the railing for balance. "What about you? Skirt and leggings don't seem very warm."

"This cloak'll keep me warm. It's thicker than my costume anyways. And it makes for a good blanket and pillow too." Natalie pulled her cloak away, extending it to Ashlin. "Here, feel it."

Whisking away her gauntlets, Ashlin took the crimson material in her hands, feeling the rough texture of wool. "Oh wow! It DOES feel warm! But...it's wool. Isn't your costume made out of cloth and silk?"

"Yeah. This cloak isn't actually part of my costume." Ashlin let out a slight gasp, eyes growing wide. "Huh. I guess you didn't know that. A friend of mine made it for me. Kept me warm during the winter in Mitakihara. It means a lot to me, ya know?"

>> ☐ Dimunsis 01/25/15(Sun)16:50:18 No.37618066

Ashlin stared up at the moon, entranced by the beauty of the massive chunk of space rock. Her mind wandered as she stared; to the few friends she made in Canada, the painful memories of her surgeries and augmentations, and most importantly, her mother. Thoughts of her time in Ireland, the death of her father, and the move to Canada to stay with their relatives came soon after, making the extremely tired Eversor sigh in exhaustion.

"Hey Ashlin...I, uh, I have something to say."

Ashlin snapped back to attention as Natalie got her attention, rubbing her eyes. "Oh, sorry, zoned out for a sec. Wh-what's up?"

The silver eyed Eversor fiddled around in her cloak, her eyes staring at the cold metal catwalk beneath them. "Listen, I'm...I'm sorry for getting in a fight with you." Ashlin watched as Natalie stepped towards the railing, leaning on it, eyes still on the catwalk. "I wasn't thinking straight, and what you said just pissed me off really hard. I should've kept a cool head."

Ashlin stared in awe; from her experience, Natalie didn't seem the type to apologize, but here she was, saying those two simple words. The young Irish girl looked away, staring off into the plains again, gathering her thoughts and figuring a response. "Umm, thanks, I guess...sorry for saying what I said too." She glanced over to her crimson cloaked companion, seeing she was still staring down. "I guess we both said some things we shouldn't have."

Natalie whipped her head around, shooting Ashlin a seething glare. "I spoke the truth, and that's that. Don't get me wrong, beating your face in wasn't what I should've done," She threw her hood back, her voice turning to a deep growl. "but I still think you're a coward and a fucking crybaby, and I will stand by that statement till the day I die." She kept her eyes on Ashlin for a few more moments, eventually turning back to the grassy, rocky fields in front of them.

Before Ashlin could respond, Maria and Edea stepped up onto the catwalk. "Oi, everything okay up here? Thought we heard you two arguing?" The tall redhead placed her hands on her hips, walking over to Natalie and bending down to her eye level. "I don't have to intervene here, do I?"

"No, no, everything's fine." Natalie turned and walked towards the catwalk stairs, bumping into Ashlin's shoulder. "Was simply getting some shit straight, is all." She trotted down the steps, leaving the other 3 girls alone.
Edea stepped up beside her girlfriend, waving a hand at Ashlin. "Well, you better enjoy your short break while you can." Slipping an arm around Maria's waist, the short blonde nuzzled on Maria's shoulder. "So warm..."

Ashlin nodded and began to step off the catwalk before being stopped by Maria. "Hey Ash, I wanted to pass an idea by you." The armor clad magical girl turned to her superior, yawning. "After your punishment is over, and the Heavy Ironforms come back, what do you say to me training you? I know haven't had full Eversor training, so I figure once we have time, I could go over what you haven't been trained on."

"Oh, that's fine, I guess. I...can't really remember what I've done and what I haven't so..."

"Don't worry about that. We'll do what we can, okay? Now go, enjoy your break."

The week of pure hell finally ended, leaving Ashlin a walking mess of exhaustion and auditory and visual hallucinations. Natalie on the other hand, was merely tired, gloating that she could go another week without sleep. Maria attempted to take her up on that challenge, but the silver eyed magical girl declined. The two bleary eyed magical girls trudged to their sleeping quarters, Ashlin nearly tripping over the entrance.
Neither said a word as they de-transformed and slipped on their sleepwear, crawling onto their cots. Ashlin snuggled against her pillow, mumbling as she closed her eyes. "Sleep...is so good. So good. Goodnight Natalie..."

~~~~~~~~~~

Everything was dark. Explosions rocked Ashlin's mind as she peered into the darkness. Part of her focused on the noise around her; explosions, gunfire...and screaming.
"WAKE UP!"

A flash of light, and Ashlin bolted upright to the sounds from her sleep. She looked towards the door, Edea standing in the frame, ragged breaths coming from her bloodied and battered self. Ashlin's heart started racing, slipping off her cot, nearly tripping over her own feet. "Wha-what's going on?"

"We're under attack! A group of locals got us by surprise! We're pinned down by gunfire and I think mortar, come on!"

Edea bolted from the door, leaving the now stunned Ashlin alone with Natalie. "We-we're under attack?" Ashlin's body froze as fear took her.

"No time to waste, Ashlin." Natalie pulled off her soul gem, transforming into her black and scarlet costume, and pulled on her cloak. Her scythe formed in her hands as she whipped around to Ashlin. "Battle is the great redeemer, the fiery crucible which the only true heroes are forged. Try to not get yourself killed."

Magical Juggernaut Heather Crunch and Magical Ascetic Valentina Tenko

A loud voice snaps me out of my torpor. It's coming from my cell, informing me that I have a phone call. I flip the display open to see that it's coming from the number listed for Kyoko, and shows a picture of her grinning. Hesitantly, as if I can't believe what I'm seeing, I take the call.

"Kyoko?" I ask.

"Yo, Hothead!" rings Kyoko's cheery voice, "why'd ya leave me eight messages of you blubberin'?"

"I was worried," I confess, slightly embarrassed by how I reacted. "I thought everybody suddenly wanted nothing to do with me."

Kyoko just laughs at this. "Nah, I just couldn't find my phone again," she admits sheepishly. "Turns out I left it in the fridge this time."

"HAH!" I laugh in return, my spirits rising in relief. "YOU should tie it to a string or something, Kyokoooo!" I scold her!

"Yeah, Sayaka really chewed me out when she found out about it," she mutters, then returns to cheerful form. "Anyway," she asks, "about that, uh, 'love' question training whatchamahoosit?"

"Oh, right!" I exclaim, having forgotten all about that.

"If I had to describe it, it's like a potluck dinner." Kyoko informs me, sounding slightly embarrassed. "'cuz everybody's gotta chip in and bring somethin' to the table, an' sometimes people get greedy and don't share with ya." She then hastily adds, "but even then it's really good and totally worth it!"

"Got it!" I tell her, committing her answer to memory. "You have my UTMOST GRATITUDE!"

"Hey, no problemo. Ya gonna be okay?" she inquires.

"ABSOLUTELY!" I declare! "For, even if the rest of the world has forsaken me, I-"

"YOU HAVE A PHONE CALL!" my phone screams, startling me. Kyoko's face is switched out for the smirking portrait of Madge, indicating just who's calling.

"-am getting a call from Madge," I finish lamely.

"Yeah, better not keep Her Majesty waitin'," Kyoko answers sympathetically, then initiates her goodbyes. "So long, Hothead! And have a MAXIMUM day!"

"FAREWELL, KYOKOOOO!" I respond, adding, "AND GIVE MY REGARDS TO STRINGBEEEEAN!" before she hangs up.

I take the next call, and proceed to get a tongue-lashing from Madge. She tells me not to be a drama queen just because everybody's too busy to talk. After a bit more dialogue between us, she then gives her response: love is something you have to invest time in. And then hangs up as soon as I tell her I got it.

However, I soon get another call, this time from Cress. She also chides me for my behavior, and gives an answer: love is a treasure more valuable than any other. Oddly sappy for her, but okay. Bluebell calls next, asking what the hell is happening, and saying love needs to be stoked but gives light and warmth (that's just fire, though…). After her, the Warmaster tells me to suck it up, and says it comes in the most unlikely places – that love can bloom even on the battlefield. I am mortified, but no longer despairing.

And then Slam calls. She earnestly asks me if everything is alright, and keeps asking if anything is still bothering me. The more she asks, the closer to a lie my affirmations become, as I start to feel guilt for my lack of faith in these people, and for involving Slam in the first place. She doesn't have an answer for the Soul Temperer's assignment, but she promises to get Cooldown to call me back. Sure enough, minutes later, Cooldown begrudgingly calls back, says I'm not blocked, and tells me that love is like a greasy meal: delicious, bad for you, and something you'll keep coming back for.

…I should have known that if they wanted me gone, they wouldn't have been passive aggressive about it. But I didn't have faith in them and believed that they had abandoned me. Just thinking about how weak my trust in them was makes me cringe from humiliation.

I haven't been this disappointed with myself since I spectacularly failed to cheer up Miss Valnikov. Finishing my call, I head into the kitchen and pour myself some cereal, not really in the mood to cook anything. It tastes like wheat gravel, but I eat it all before I move on to exercising.

My confidence is shaken, though, and so my energy isn't coming back either. It takes a tremendous amount of effort just to perform the bare minimum one hundred push-ups, crunches, and squats. I think I'll have to save the running for later. For now I'll just get cleaned up.

Next I step into the bathroom and start the shower. Stripping off the nightgown and underwear, I step in and work the shampoo into a lather. Then I scrub down my body and rinse everything off, and get out to brush my teeth and dry my hair. Looking at my face in the mirror, my eyes look dull, as though the fire in them was extinguished, and my face is stuck in a frown. On a whim, I press my fingers against the corners of my mouth and drag it up into a smile. My eyes spark a little in response, but I'm still bothered by what happened, so it doesn't stick. I mean, I'm in a better mood than I was a few hours ago, but it's soured by the doubts I had in the people I confided in.

There's no point in lingering around. With that stuff done, I find myself drawn back to putting on the outfit they made for me. It's relevant to what the Soul Temperer said I should do – go around without transforming all the time. Unfortunately the maid uniform is wrinkled and wet from being wrung out last night. It feels cold and clammy against my skin, so I try to dry it off with the hair dryer. It helps a little, at least, but it's still severely wrinkled.

…I don't want to go back to sleep, but I can't do much else until I'm supposed to meet with the Soul Temperer. So I examine and take apart the beam katana I won off of Nakajima.

>> ☐ Attarou 01/25/15(Sun)17:03:18 No.37618324

Once I've put everything back together, I flick the switch. The beam katana hums and projects a stable green blade of energy. I wave it slightly to test it, and see that its shape remains consistent. I seem to have reassembled it correctly.

There's no receiver at the end to give it a definite size, which is why that massive attack she did was even possible after she switched off the limiters. This one wasn't designed to sustain a blade of such size for more than a few seconds. In fact, there was a failsafe designed to power it off after it reached a certain temperature to keep it from exploding or destroying the motherboard. It still would scorch an ordinary person's hands until they were charred black, but it's better than being perforated with white-hot shrapnel.

And from what I can tell, she made it herself. A stylized drawing of her face was on the motherboard, anyway. I have to hand it to Nakajima, this is one of the most well made beam katanas I've ever come across. I power it off and put it back into my inventory.

This sort of thing usually makes me happy. To take a weapon apart, see how it works, how it was made, and then put it back together. Whenever I felt depressed, this always cheered me up. However, this time, after everything is fitted back together, I am still troubled. I feel better, yes, but I can't quite get over how I let myself think that all my comrades had betrayed me. And, more than I'd like to admit, that fear of crushing, suffocating loneliness still hangs over me. Like this is just a dream, and I'll wake up to find myself isolated from everyone I ever knew.

…I'm sincerely starting to miss Nakajima. This issue may be worse than I had originally been led to believe. Or it may be sheer desperation. Neither possibility is good. I have to do –something- about this, but I can't just call everyone up again so soon.

I'll just go see the Soul Temperer and see if we can start early today.

My return to the Seventh Officio building is depressingly uneventful, so I had nothing to occupy myself with other than my own thoughts. Thoughts where that voice of self-loathing kept giving its unwanted opinion on things. After a while I shut it out by pointing out it was wrong about me being abandoned, and stopped listening to what it had to say. Again, I feel better than I did, but it's nowhere near my usual vigor and energy.

To my relief, the gates of the Seventh are open to me now. The monastery itself has its doors open as well, as though welcoming me back. Heading in and through the building, the utter silence is oppressive enough to put me on edge. I go towards where I'm very sure I remember the Soul Temperer's room being and throw the door open, not wanting to linger out here any longer.

I was right on the money. The rows and rows of swords lining the wall confirm it. And there she is, in the center of the room, but she's not really reacting to my arrival. She's sitting in front of a small table with some incense sticks burning, and she has her eyes closed, as if she's sleeping. I walk over and wave my hand in front of her face – nothing. Is that what meditation is like? If that's the case, I wasn't even –close- to this state the other day. And if I were surrounded by weapons while meditating, I would probably just have dreams I couldn't share with anyone.

…Okay, this persistent pessimism is pissing me off.

I lean in close to the Soul Temperer, close enough to smell peaches, and take a deep breath. "Soul Temperer!" I shout in her ear, attempting to rouse her and take my mind off my inadequacies.

The Soul Temperer shivers slightly and makes a small noise before opening her eyes, her formerly blank expression curling into a smile. "Have I reached heaven?" she asks me. "Am I dreaming?"

"I understand that I am a sight to behold," I answer her, trying to look confident, "but no. I just came in early today."

The Soul Temperer smiles slightly wider, rubbing her eyes. "Same thing, then," she says.

"Speak plainly!" I order her. I don't have the patience for her parables!

"Is there a particular reason you have graced me with your presence so early today, Truth-Seeker?" Tenko inquires, studying me with an eye of appraisal. "You have a look of someone who has tried to move mountains."

"Hah! I was told a long time ago never to try that again," I confess, reminded of my failed attempts to make a Mount Heatherest. "But I digress. For now the –real- training of the day can begin!"

"Hold, Truth-Seeker" the Soul Temperer tells me, her smile vanishing. "The blight surrounding your soul has not abated. It has merely changed its form."

"But I did what I was told to do!" I argue, stamping my foot in irritation.

"And that is what we will focus on later," she says, pointing to the ground. "Right now, however, you will sit."

Perhaps she had something in mind. For now, I did as she asked and sat on the ground, my legs crossed and back straight. The Soul Temperer's gaze lingers on my legs, but otherwise she seems serious.

"So," she begins, "the avalanche comes forth with the throw of a single stone."

"Pardon?"

"What is it that is troubling you this time, Seeker of Wisdom?" she clarifies.

I take a deep breath that comes out as a sigh. “Doubt,” I respond. “I called everyone I knew to answer your question. All but one of them didn’t pick up, and the one that did hung up immediately.” The Soul Temperer nodded along in understanding, bringing her hands up to rest her chin on them, so I continued. “I called them many times and nobody answered, and I started to despair. I began listening to that wicked voice of self-loathing that insisted it was my fault they weren’t calling.” Hanging my head, I murmur, “All of them called back earlier. They were concerned, even the kid that I’d gotten hurt.”

I look the Soul Temperer in the eyes as I get to the crux of the issue, even though my shame makes me want to turn away. “I had –doubts- in other people,” I explain, spitting out the words as though they were poison. “I –doubted- people I should have trusted. I thought they had –abandoned- me here.” Letting out a sigh, I murmur, “and I’m angry at –myself- for not trusting them, not thinking better of them.”

The Soul Temperer drinks this in with an impassive look on her face the entire time. I thought she wanted me to keep talking, but she spoke up first. “I see,” she says, leaning forward and resting her arms on the table. “Was this perhaps related to you banging on the gates last night?”

Nod.

“My apologies, Truth-Seeker,” the Soul Temperer apologizes with a bitter smile. “I had believed it was necessary at the time, but perhaps that was just the Black Templar in me talking, though.

“-You- were a Black Templar?!” I shout in genuine surprise. She really didn’t seem the type. They were so… uptight.

“It is not something I think back on fondly, nor do I enjoy talking about it,” she admitted, staring ahead at the empty space behind me. “I have remade myself since then as penance, though even that may not be enough for what I’ve done. The point is, we have all made mistakes.”

I shake my head. “I know that.” I tell her. “And yet,” I sigh again, bringing up my knees and hugging them. “Sometimes I wonder if that voice has a point. If I’m not only less great than I like to think I am, but also that I am actually an outright horrible, selfish person. That all the insults flung at me are true. That I’m wrong –all the time-.” Burying my face in my knees, my voice sounds muffled because I almost don’t want her to hear me when I say, “and that worries me.”

The Soul Temperer pauses for some time. And then…

“Once upon a time,” she began, “all the animals were called to a banquet.”

I lift my head up to ask her what she’s doing, but she continues before I have the chance. “Each animal group had to bring something to eat that could be shared with the others. The agile monkeys had picked bananas. The cunning wolves had harvested potatoes. And the proud lions were to bring grapes. However, the lions were very territorial, and could not tolerate the presence of other animals in their land. So when the laughing hyenas passed through, the lions chased them for days and days until they were gone. And in the process, the lions had let their grapes rot, and then trampled them underfoot. Too proud to arrive with nothing to show, the lions had to make do with the rotten fruit. So they gathered it in bowls of stone and presented it at the banquet.”

I raise an eyebrow at her. Why would the wolves have potatoes? And why do the lions have grapes? This story makes no sense! But before I can voice this, the Soul Temperer continues, “the other animals laughed at the lions, especially the hyenas, whose mocking laughter rose above the others. And yet, when the animals tasted what the lions had brought, they discovered something miraculous: the rotten grapes had turned to delicious wine.” The Soul Temperer stop speaking and looks at me expectantly.

…I was about to point out the inconsistencies, but she seems to be waiting for me to provide the moral of that fable. Hmm…

“You can mess up,” I venture, “but… it can still turn out okay?”

She nods once. “Even the greatest of kings were fallible,” the Soul Temperer explains, “and yet they are still remembered as the greatest of kings. Why do you suppose that is?”

Another question? “Because of the fact,” I start slowly, trying to put the answer in my head into words, “that they were still great?”

She nods again. “And so, what does that say about you?” she asks me.

Taking a little bit of time to piece everything together in my head, I speak with a bit more confidence this time. “Just because I have made mistakes, doesn’t mean I’m not great, right?” I questioned.

The Soul Temperer smiles warmly and places her hands on my shoulders.

“If that voice says things that make you think less of yourself,” she orders, “you tell it to be silent. Because you –are- great, Seeker of Enlightenment.” The Soul Temperer squeezes my shoulders slightly and says, “you are every bit as great as you say you are. And you should never, ever let anyone convince you otherwise. Not even yourself.”

…That is the nicest thing anybody has ever said to me.

The Soul Temperer draws back and stands up, motioning for me to do the same. “Now,” she asks, “what does the caterpillar want to become when she emerges from her cocoon?”

It takes me some time to get my voice back. Long enough to process what she said and understand it fully. “I… I WANT TO BECOME A BETTER PERSON!” I speak with conviction, standing tall again. “And I’ve come to realize I can’t accomplish that entirely on my own.” Curling my fingers into fists, I beseech her, “Can you help me, Soul Temperer?”

Homudevil told us that the dolls found Ai, the last one. They've also found us.
Homudevil-flavor homu doesn't come with time stop, she wished for something else. This is something you can see in the show and something she confirmed.
Clara dolls have powers that homu didn't have- there's even one that explicitly has her time-reversal ability
The last doll, Ai, literally looks like homu

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/26/15(Mon)09:46:12 No.37633285 Archived

A heavy metallic click. The teeth-itching whine of something huge and immensely, catastrophically powerful accruing lethal energy.

An explosion of blinding, searing light. A detonation of monumental, bone-crushing force.

You heard and felt nothing of this. Not Mami's declaration of attack, not the newborn star exploding a mere ten feet away from you, illuminating everything in the floor as it was spat through a silver barrel that would've easily fit an entire elephant.

You didn't even register the sight of Mami's monstrous shot smashing into Ahriman, hitting her dead center in an earth-shaking collision of golden energy and black, crimson-tipped witch-lightning. The impact blasting her across the room, and then blasting her through one of the plate-glass windows of the skyscraper in a deafening crash.

The squawk she emitted as she fell would've made you laugh. But laughing was the farthest thing in your mind right now.

You couldn't even move from your spot on the floor, unable to tear yourself away from your grimy reflection.

Who the fuck are you? If...if the three stooges were lying, if it was all some sort of huge fucking joke by Pinky...

Who the actual fuck are you?

THe last incarnation of a misguided Magical Girl who didn't know how to bow down gracefully to fate, and decided to fuck everything up for everyone else instead?

A painkiller-addicted drunk who never stopped being miserable all the fucking time, deathly afraid to enjoy herself even a little?

The embodiment of suffering that should be, by all rights, wiped off the face of the fucking earth?

Who the actual FUCK are you?

It's here, then, that you feel a hand on your shoulder - and you turn to see Wendy at your side. Her mouth making the same shapes over and over, repeating a single word. Her eyes wide with...what? Shock? Fear? Concern? You can't tell, much less hear what she's trying to say.

She pushes something towards you with her other hand. Something dark and palm-sized, with a frayed length of yellow ribbon tied hastily around it.

Your Soul Gem. It's your Soul Gem.

But different. It's not exactly how you remember.

You know because your Soul Gem isn't supposed to look like a fucking crown.

You make to say so here, to point this particular discrepancy out - when the floor shakes underneath you once more, nearly making you topple onto your back, onto your wings, had not it been for Wendy holding you up. Another oddly-muted blast, another strangely-silent explosion that once more throws everything into stark relief - and you see Mami summoning another phalanx of rifles to manifestation in front of her as Ahriman seems to manifest out of nowhere, Golden Staff in hand, Oriko's features twisted into a horrific expression of rage and pain and hate.

She points the staff at you, and it's with a strange detached sense of awareness that you realise that she's about to kill you. A blast of crimson-tipped black lightning surging from the hequin-topped staff's tip.

Wendy tugs at you harder, screaming at you to get up, to move. Her voice lost in the screams of the damned filling your ears. Cursing you and at the same time begging for your help.

What do you do?

[]Avoid Ahriman's attack.
[]Deny Ahriman's attack.

"No."

You whisper the denial as you raise a gloved hand. Slowly, almost leisurely. As if you had all the time in the world.

Something in the distance clicks, then snaps, then screeches - and the world slams into an absolute stop a moment before the storm of lightning and brimstone hits. The jagged tendrils of blackly-charged death glittering like frost-covered tree branches as they freeze in midair, locked in the inescapable grip of Time forced to heed your will.

And as you close your outstretched hand - curling your fingers into a loose fist - time resumes again, but with the lightning removed completely from existence. Not dispelled, not blocked, not even absorbed - simply erased. Simply murdered by the brief cessation and then immediate resumption of the world's inexorable turning.

Ahriman's eyes go wide at this - her green eyes shrinking into points, before finally drowning in sharklike black - and it's here that she tries again. And again, and again, and again, throwing killing magic and energy and hate at you, each blast enough to kill an entire Officio ten times over. And again and again and again, you negate every one, even going so far as to step forward with every nullification. Leaving a stunned Wendy behind in your trail of black feathers as you continued to do the impossible.

And it's with every step towards Ahriman that you start remembering who you truly are. Memories that had long since been locked away, now rushing back in a flood.

You were never Chiaki Matsuda. You were never Murderface, or Girl A.

Akemi Homura. That's who you've always been. Yes.

Yes. That's your name.

That's--

+ NO. NO, IT ISN'T. FOR FUCK'S SAKE, NAMELESS ONE. NO. +

Something screams inside your mind, freezing you in your tracks. Stopping your progress towards the now-backpedaling Prophet.

+ SNAP OUT OF IT. THIS IS NOT YOU. IT'S THE AKASHIC REALM. TRY TO REMEMBER. +

It sounded like a random pulse stabbing into your brain, coming out of nowhere. Someone spouting insane babble. Try as you might, you can't make sense of it.

But as you make to step forward again - you're hit with an overwhelming sense of deja vu. The speaker's voice sounding oddly and painfully familiar.

"My name is Akemi Homura," You murmur to yourself, shaking your head, your wings bristling in the same movement. You turn back to Ahriman - only to realize that she'd taken advantage of your hesitation, the Prophet taking flight upon wings of her own. In contrast to yours, hers are fully white, fully-fleshed ones, more akin to an angel's rather than that of your vulture's.

"BETRAYER! FALSE GODDESS!" Ahriman spits, her face twisted into an ugly snarl. She draws something from her sleeve - two Tarot cards, each one glowing golden, and tosses them onto the floor below her. "DEATH! DEATH TO THE FALSE GODDESS! DEATH TO THE NINTH AND ALL THE HERETICS WHO MARCH UNDER ITS BANNER!" She points a clawed finger at you. "JUST LAY DOWN AND DIE, AKEMI HOMURA!"

The cards explode into flashes of golden light the moment they slam into the floor - and when the light finally dissipates, you see that Ahriman is nowhere to be found, the only sign of her passing being the large burning hole in the ceiling. Instead, she'd left two creatures in her wake, most likely summoned by the cards themselves.

You let Ahriman live for a few moments longer as you turn your attention to these shades. These eyesores.

These perversions. Unworthy to even lick the dirt off your heels.

A flourish of your right hand manifests your Shield onto your arm - the beaten metal disc still sporting its scars and dents and scratches, but somehow more grander, more polished than it ever was. You reach behind it, delving into the space revealed within - and with your vision briefly sparking violet, you grasp and pull out a sword by its handle. A sword whose brilliant golden blade flashes in the trashing light of the warp as you reveal it fully. A beam of golden moonlight, frozen and forged into a weapon that can kill even darkness itself.

Muramasa.

You spin on your heel, your feathery dress swirling around your form, a flurry of black feathers spinning in your wake - and your blade crashes against the chewing edges of both Gorefather and Gorechild, the twin chainaxes wielded by a grinning maniac hungry for your skull.

"Return to me what I have lost," The shade cackles right into your face, through the grinding, sparking union of your weapons. "I am sick to the back teeth with regret and suffering. My mind is gone, burned away in my isolation and self-imposed exile. Return to me what I have lost. Return my Jager. PLEASE."

"You deserve nothing, wretch." You hear yourself say, and the shade's smile grows wider despite its efforts to break the stalemate, leaning its entire weight on its weapons, trying to force you back. You're aware of the monstrous force being exerted here, but you barely feel it as you hold the cackling thing back with just one hand on Muramasa's grip. "You devoured her, like you did all the others. You thought it would make you whole. It did not. You thought it would make you complete. It did not. Suffer for your gluttony. Suffer forever."

This time you move - stepping forward, now leaning your weight upon your blade. There's a creak, followed a snap of wet kindling as something in the grinning shade's wrists give way - and the axes fall from nerveless fingers, their roaring motors falling silent. All resistance gone, you step forward again, and cut once.

The shade's head is still grinning as it lands on the floor, rolling to rest against your foot. The body crumples to the ground a moment later, black blood still geysering from its stump of a neck.

You turn to the remaining shade - somewhat surprised that it didn't take the opportunity to attack in unison with the first - and see it stand up from what looks like a meditative pose on the floor.

"Return to me what I have lost," The shade intones as it clenches all four fists in a cacophony of grinding servos and screeching metal. "I am sick to my heart with regret and suffering. I dearly miss the heat of combat, the rise of my blood as victory is measured in reflexes and stamina." She steps forward, fists raised in a pugilist's stance, one food forward, knees bent, back curved. A boxer's stance. "Return to me what I have lost. Return my purpose. Please."

"You deserve nothing, worm." You hear yourself snarl, and the shade's glare grows hotter as it launches itself at you - its giant, brutal fists hurtling forward into bone-shattering, body-breaking jabs and straights. You bat away most of them with the flat of Muramasa, ducking and shifting away from those you cannot. "You abandoned all your years of hard work and practice for a false hope. You yearned recognition more than simple excellence, and you wanted it immediately. You thought it would make you whole. It did not. You thought it would make you complete. It did not. Suffer for your folly."

Two cuts. Two quick, gunshot-quick cuts, and all four gauntlets fall to the ground, severed neatly at the joint. Each one twitching on the floor, flexing and unflexing closed. The shade looks up at you with wide black eyes, right before you split it down the middle, from scalp to groin.

"Suffer forever." You say finally, turning your back on the shade to sheathe your sword back into your Shield - ignoring the wet smacking thumps of her bisected corpse falling to the floor.

Not even worth your time. Just like you said.

You shake your head, before glancing up towards the hole in the ceiling where Ahriman had left.

It's time. Time to catch a fallen angel--

"KONG!"

"CHIAKI!"

You stop in your tracks, but it's not the strange names being spat at your direction stopping you.

It's the...it's the ribbon around your ankle. A yellow ribbon, tied neatly into a bow, securing you to the floor.

...What? A ribbon...?

You look up to see the two Untouched Ones from earlier, running towards you. The blonde one, and the brown-haired one. Something in your chest beats harder at the sight of them, but you ignore this. Something left from your past, most likely.

Hm? They want you to take them with you?

They'll only slow you down. You can leave them here. This is no longer a game where mortals are concerned.

You turn to take flight again, when--

CRACK.

Your eyes go wide as all the breath is forced out of your lungs, out of your body - and you look down to see the brown-haired one's fist embedded deep in your midsection. In your gut.

And all at once, as if someone behind the scenes had suddenly turned the volume up, you begin to hear just what exactly she'd been trying to say.

"--Are you fucking serious? This what you came here to do? Just...lose it? Sprout some wings and go apeshit?"

W-what? What is she talking about...?

B-but there is no Warmaster. Not anymore. There is only you, the Transcendent--

"No, FUCK you." Her fist drives into your midsection again, making you double over. "Not after everything we've been through. None of that god shit, you stupid, shit-binging motherfucker. Remember who the fuck you are first, then save the bitch you dragged us all the way here to save. Or kill her, I don't care. Just...not this." QB was asking about something involving the Blessed Lady. There was a vote in which one of the options was to take QB in to a time stop and personally introduce him to Pinky. It "won" and the consequences were... not good.

Then it turned out that the votes had been miscounted and that option had been narrowly defeated. Since the consequences were so bad, Decu decided to retcon it. Apparently some people now see fixing a mistake as "bowing to anons".

I wasn't there either, but here's what happened.

Decu posted the scene with QB in the time stop. AFTERWARDS, Anons demanded a recount, found out that the vote count was backwards (NOT taking QB into timestop won actually). So at the start of the next thread, Decu rewound time a bit (HA) and went from there.

That could actually turn into a plot point.

Malal was only noted to have died in walpurgisnacht -after- Kharn's flashback. During it, anons were wondering whether Malal was still around.

The entire Walpurgisnacht situation is the result of allowing Third to keep a grudge and taking the axes all leads up in Walpurgisnacht being complicated like that. If Kharn even just attempted to reason with Ahriman, like actually try to get the information what's so special about Mami, everything could have gone very differently. Note seeing Erebus's purity seal is also what drove Ahriman over the edge.

At the same time, if she didn't take the axes, Malal may have also died right then and there.

"How can you want her back?" You ask the brown-haired one incredulously, your eyes wide. "She has broken every promise she made you. She spurned your feelings, forgetting you even existed, before finding solace in the heart of another." You turn towards the blonde. "She has been nothing but a burden to you, unreliable, unpredictable, unworthy of your attention. I ask you again, how can you want her back?"

"Because she's our unreliable, unpredictable, unworthy burden." The blonde one says gently, stepping forward, placing a hand on the brown-haired one's shoulder in an attempt for placation. "She has been working hard, very hard, to change for the better. Yes, we know she grumbles and complains and growls about it a lot, but she desperately wants to become the person she wants to be, rather than be someone else that Fate has decided for her"

"And who does she wish to be?" You ask, still confused.

The blonde answers with a smile. "Chiaki Matsuda, of course."

You shake your head here, before sighing in resignation. Closing your eyes, you begin to make their foolish request possible.

"I will never understand your kind." You murmur.

"Yeah, yeah. Just give her the fuck back already." The brown-haired one snarls.

And so you allow yourself to remember. Gently closing the opened gates in your mind once more with a touch of your psychic sense, and reopening others that have been barred shut by the flood.

Restoring yourself to what you once were. Not completely, of course. Just enough.

Which, by the way, still fucking hurt.

"...Kong?" Wendy steps forward, her usually-hooded eyes wide. "Kong, are you--"

"It's me," You manage finally, wincing at how dry your throat is. Mangling your already ruined voice even more. You shake your head at this, before glancing down on your costume. The draft of it making you shiver. "Jesus Christ. This'll get...this'll get a lot of getting used to." You shake your head again, just wondering what the fuck had to happen for you to get stuck like this.

Oh, wait, you remember. Bad decisions. Yep.

"Let's go finish this shit before I die of hypothermia or something," You growl finally, pulling Muramasa from your Shield once more - and surprisingly, instead of the bullish hunger that had always assaulted you whenever you held it, the sword seems...tame for some reason. Sated. Still dangerous, but definitely more cooperative.

Well, of course it came undone, your transformation suddenly made it grow to its original fucking length again. Long enough to fucking touch the goddamn floor. You--

You glance at the golden katana in your hand, and it's here that you make a decision. One that makes Mami gasp in surprise, and Wendy to merely smirk in faint approval.

"Couldn't you have waited until we got back for a proper haircut, Chiaki-san?" Mami pouts at the thick lank of black hair you'd simply tossed to the floor like garbage. "It was really becoming you, and--"

"I think she looks better this way," Wendy murmurs. "More...aerodynamic. She'll need it."

"Funny, Cooldown." You return her smirk, before pulling out your Desert Eagle as well. Your wings - still unnatural, still alien, like some sort of shadow limb but actually real - twitching in sympathetic excitement. "Now, come on. Let's go save Oriko from the Prophet. While you still can."

And so you head off, nearly tripping over your own dress all the while.

Prose Magica: A Serious House on Serious Earth

Two hours. It had taken two hours for Prime to catch sight of her destination. The Callidus couldn't help but feel a sense of accomplishment. Her first journey had taken three times as long. A muted sigh escaped her lips as she pushed her cellphone back into her pocket. The device was little more than an over-sized pocket-watch here, wherever 'here' was.

Prime only allowed herself the rewarding sight of the double doors at the end of the hall for a moment before forcing her vision elsewhere. She strode silently down a narrow hall, only large enough for two people to comfortably walk abreast. Deep, intricately carved mahogany lined the base of the walls, which were papered with scarlet and patterned with gold designs. Potlights ran down the centre of the ceiling, basking the hall with an orange glow.

It was almost exactly like a posh hotel hall, she thought, save for the fact that it had been two hours since she last saw a door. Not a single feature marked the hall - only the ceiling, floor and two walls. Worse still was the complete and utter silence. The only sound that accompanied her was the grating noise of her own shoes scrunching against the carpet. Something struck her as... wrong about the silence. It was as if she expected to hear some some sort of white noise. Whispers, perhaps. Something to make her fears more than irrational. Instead, she was privy only to the sound of her own heartbeat and stifled breathing accompanying her footsteps.

With another quick, shivering shake of her head, Prime withdrew her thoughts once more, clawing them back. She tried to keep her mind occupied, desperate keep herself from being lucid. When she finally reached her goal, she didn't want to remember a single step of her journey. She didn't want to think of the shapes on the walls that seemed to slither just on the edge of her periphery, or the dancing shadows that seemed to be cast by nothingness. For two hours, Prime fought to keep her focus, terrified of what she might behold should she lose it.

For a moment, she stopped thinking entirely. When she finally found her consciousness, she caught herself staring at one of the walls. Of course, there was nothing but simple, blossoming abstract designs. Of course. She used the thought to anchor her mind in the real. There was nothing unusual. And yet, why was it that - in some buried fragment of her mind - she couldn't help but shake the feeling that the markings were laughing at her. She could almost hear it, just on the precipice of perception. But, of course, there was nothing. Only deafening silence. Again, Prime pushed whatever thought she could into her mind and continued on.

Another agonizing hour passed before she reached the doors. They were at least ten feet tall, narrow and peaked with elegant golden angels for handles. She wasn't terribly keen on the angels' gruesome expressions, however. Nor the way they seemed to stare at her, even without irises or pupils. She wanted to blame it on her imagination. She very desperately did. But she knew better.

As quietly as possible, Prime tugged one of the doors open and passed through. She was met with the sight of one of the grand cathedrals of the Church of the Golden Land. Out of reflex, she almost made the sign of the cross before catching herself.

She couldn't help but notice the eerie darkness that shrouded the hall. It took her a moment of awe and two steps before she realized what was wrong. Not a single man-made light illuminated the cathedral - the only light shone through the numerous stained glass reliefs along the walls.

The largest was a grandiose rose window in the apse, casting its light on the altar. In the kaleidoscope of colours, Prime could pick out various figures and scenes. One of the figures, Prime thought, looked almost like a fish wearing a suit of armour. Another seemed to be a candlestick on horseback. None of it made any sense to her.

Prime had once asked Eliphas what the images behind the sanctuary were supposed to depict. Her reply came with a quiet, patronizing laugh and a shake of her head, as if to tell Prime that she could never hope to understand. Indeed, she didn't. "Deliverance," had been Eliphas' answer. After hearing her zealously tainted words, Prime had little desire to press the matter.

As she walked quietly down the right aisle, slowly approaching the altar, she could see several silhouetted heads among the pews, despite there being no mass going on at the time. Some were kneeling in prayer, others bowed their heads, while some simply seemed to be passing the time, admiring the artwork or reading. Strangely, she realized, none spoke beyond the murmured prayers of a few. Being teenage girls, she imagined they ought to be less concerned about religion and more about socializing. Prime couldn't help but admire their respect and dedication.

It didn't take long to find the innocuous wooden door to Eliphas' private chapel nestled off to the side of the right transept. It was too similar to the entrance for her liking - peaked, with the same angel for a handle, only miniaturized. For a moment, Prime considered knocking, but it was impossible for the Apostle not to know she was coming.

With a gentle push, the door creaked open, almost as though opening on its own. The chapel was modest dwelling, furnished with a few chairs around a table and a sofa along the right-hand wall. Even with as few as a half-dozen people it would have felt cramped. Much like the larger cathedral, the only light seeped in through a large window along the far wall, its curtains drawn tightly.

Prime's quarry sat at the table, to the right, sipping from an elegant porcelain tea set. Steam rose from another cup and saucer already set for Prime. The Apostle didn't even turn to look as her visitor stepped int other room.

Eliphas was an unusual looking girl, or so Prime thought. She was small and thin, giving the impression of doll-like delicacy. Next to Prime, who stood nearly six feet tall, Eliphas would have been dwarfed. Her hair flowed down the back of the seat, and would have reached her knees had Eliphas been standing. It was so pale as to be white, but under the proper lighting one would see shimmers of golden blonde.

Prime bowed her head as she took another step closer. "Good afternoon, Elly," she said, fighting to put a warm smile on her face.

Eliphas turned to face her. Prime almost wished she hadn't. After spending so long in the cathedral, the girl's skin had turned an unearthly grey colour. But it took more than unusual skin pigmentation to rattle Hydra Prime - it was the girl's face itself. Once, she would have been attractive - beautiful even - but that time had come and gone long ago. Her eyes were solid, milky white, and the scars... The scars made a shiver run up the green-haired woman's spine. They were no badges of honour won in battle like those worn by other magical girls. Eliphas' scars were carefully self-inflicted. They showed strange runes and symbols, deliberately carved onto her face as a sign of devotion. The most prominent was an eight-pointed star centred on her right eye, even extending to her eyelid

"Prime," Eliphas said, smiling with the sort of serene contentment that seemed reserved for the so-called 'enlightened', "come in to my home. Have a seat. What brings you here?"

Prime bowed her head again and did as she was asked. "We need to talk," she said. "Plans have... changed."

Eliphas cocked her head. Her expression seemed change in the subtlest of ways. Something hid behind her smile, and Prime swore that she saw faint movement in the white seas of the Apostle's eyes. "Changed?" She asked. "Changed... how? Has Miss Odette accepted The Word yet?"

"We underestimated her," Prime admitted. "Maybe we overestimated Vance. I don't know. Brighton didn't cave and now she's stronger than ever. Even if we got a last minute miracle, she wouldn't be turned fast enough."

The smile and warmth faded from Eliphas' face almost instantly. "Is that so?"

"Hey now," Prime said, putting on the same cold, biting smile that she often used on her own subordinates. "Your gal is the one that fucked up, not mine."

The Apostle's scars danced as her lip twitched, but she conceded. "So what is your plan now, exactly?"

"Joe's getting antsy," the Callidus explained, resting her arm on the chair's back in an attempt to seem at ease, "he wants everything finished 'fore the Warmaster's inauguration."

Eliphas cocked an eyebrow, incredulous. "That's impossible."

"Impossible is our speciality, hun," Prime laughed. "We'll handle everything, but I need everyone you can lend on standby. They'll get their pretty penny for the trouble, of course. How many can you get me?"

Eliphas thought for a moment, hemming and hawing as she tilted her head this way and that. "Perhaps a hundred," she said at last. "I can't say for certain on the spot. The Black Myriad, the Obsidian Roses," Prime mentally took note as the Apostle rattled off names, "the Mourning Angels, the Children of Bone, and, of course, The Inheritance. I can guarantee those at the very least."

"It'll do for now. I'll have my people run checks on them."

Eliphas nodded, her serene aura returning as she sipped at her tea. "The Word has already spread to the Seventeenth's Vindicare rank," she said, just above whisper. "The Eversors turn slowly as well. Soon our ranks will swell with the faithful once again. You do us a great service, Hydra Prime."

"Now, Elly," the green-haired woman said, "let's not go there, m'kay?"

"It's natural to fear the Truth, Prime," Eliphas replied, her voice soothing, almost motherly. "In time, you, too, will conquer this fear and accept the Black Testament."

"Y'know, I think folks would be a lot more open-minded if you picked better names for things," Prime scoffed. She took a loud sip and chuckled to herself. "'I mean, really. 'Black Testament'? Name that one yourself?"

Eliphas glowered, burying her face behind her tea cup. "You would not scoff if you knew the profundity of the Truth. I know full well of the glimpses you've seen," the Apostle said. "You've walked our halls and gazed upon our wonders. You've watched the barriers between the material and the empyrean crumble. How long do you think you can deny the reality in front of your eyes?"

"Great speech, but lemme ask you a better question," Prime replied. "Why do you care so much? As far as I can see, getting me to go to church would only hurt your little operation here."

"Perhaps you don't see far enough."

Prime couldn't help but snicker. "Sometimes I worry that I've rubbed off on you a bit too much," she said before taking another sip. "Maybe I should be the one trying to recruit you."

"Ah, yes," Eliphas murmured as a wry grin crawled across her face, "Araghast, too, once thought I would be an asset to her cause. Look to what has become of her."

"Araghast was an idiot."

Eliphas simply smirked and took a long sip.

"Snarky little piss," Prime muttered.

The atmosphere lulled into a comfortable silence, broken only by the occassional sounds of slurped tea and clinking of cups on saucers. The longer the silence dragged on, the more Prime found her eyes drawn to the covered window behind Eliphas. The Apostle's words came trickling back into her mind. She had walked the corridors of the cathedral. She had seen the wailing chandeliers and the halls of glass and bone and screams. It was an impossible structure built from a broken mind.

As if reading her mind, Eliphas turned to look longingly at the window. She seemed to breathe in the sight and bask in it, despite the curtains being drawn.

"You're curious."

The words slithered through her lips. For a brief moment, Prime almost thought she hadn't spoken at all, that it had been a figment of her imagination.

"Would you like to look?" Eliphas asked. She turned her head just enough for the white corner of her eye to show. Even without irises or pupils, Prime had the distinct feeling that the Apostle was staring straight at her. No - not at her -through her, at something buried deep inside her very soul.

"Not really," the green-haired woman lied. She couldn't deny that Eliphas was a master orator. She knew exactly how hard to push, and the precise moment and length of time to let up, allowing Prime's own thoughts to get the better of her. Prime only wished that her subordinates had such talent.

Eliphas stood, clutching at a tome that hung from her waist by a golden chain. Very slowly, she strode over and brushed aside a curtain, revealing a sliver only wide enough for her to look through. The Apostle's body heaved with a deep, profound sigh, as though she was never truly at peace until that very moment.

After staring for a time, she turned back, and asked, "Won't you join me?"

"That doesn't seem like such a good idea."

Eliphas' smile deepened, once again taking on that particular matronly air. "I assure you, your brain won't melt out of your ears. Come," she murmured, "sate your curiosity."

"Peer pressure's a terrible thing, Elly."

"Would you like me to hold your hand?"

Prime glared at the Apostle. She recognized that smug hint of premature victory in the Apostle's expression. "You remind me of someone I hate," Prime muttered as she rose from her seat. "I've got calls to make, sweetie, so I'm gonna call this meetin' adjurned."

"So soon?" Eliphas pouted, stepping away from the window at last.

"While your sermons are passionately delivered, I think both of us have more important matters to attend to, don't you?"

Something dangerous lurked behind Eliphas' smile as she took her seat once more. She wore a very specific expression, caught somewhere between patronizing and... something else that Prime couldn't quite put her finger on. Again, the faintest hints of movement danced behind the Apostle's milky eyes.

"In that case," Eliphas said, "shall I have Daedalus show you out?"

"I'm sure I'll find the way well enough," Prime muttered. She had met the Architect only once before, but was already keen not to repeat the experience. "Y'all should really get some segways down here or somethin'."

"I don't think I will ever fully understand you, Hydra Prime."

"That's the idea," Prime said with a wink, “Elizavetta.” She curtsied, then disappeared through the door, the final seeming to hang in the air for a few extra moments.

Eliphas' lip twitched at the name as she turned her chair to face the window once more. As she felt the green-haired woman's presence fade, Eliphas thumped her gold-gilded black tome on the table and opened it to page marked by a red silk bookmark. Her finger ran across one line, the ink coming off the page like blackened ash.

She rubbed her fingers together to clear off the dust and whispered, "Eques."

+My lady,+ a rough and grating, yet high-pitched voice replied.

"Follow her and find Vance."

+As you wish, my lady.+

The Apostle wiped a second line away.

"Episcopus," she called out.

+Your will, my lady?+ A second voice asked with a voice deep and rich like dripping molasses.

"Assemble The Inheritance. I wish to address them."

+It shall be done.+

Once more, Eliphas's finger reached for a third line, but hesitated. She clenched her fist, debating whether or not to call the final name. Several seconds ticked by before she finally shut the grimoire and shoved it to the side. Breathing a sigh of contentment, Eliphas sipped at the last of her tea.

"Someday, Prime," she muttered. "Someday..."

The Account of the Damned ch. 3 – shards of red

A week after I had been re-limbed, things were approaching…as normal as they were liable to get, though Enyo had to be beaten away with a stick before she'd leave me to resume my duties. And everyone else's duties.

It felt like damn near anyone else of serious importance was laid up or drowning in paperwork, a terrible obligation that I had not managed to evade even the slightest by being conveniently crippled. Quite the opposite, really; since Arty was still out after her lengthy brush with the Grand Terrible Asshole of the World, and the High Inquisitor was ALWAYS up to her mosquito bites in paperwork even without the world ending beneath her, I had a stack that was literally as tall as I was waiting in the office once I finally returned.

Naturally, I had resolved to put THAT nonsense off as long as possible, load as much as I could on Enyo, and shred about half of the rest. The tactic had served me as well as any sword. No, for the time being, I…

Today, I decided I'd bug Arty.

Her room in the hospital wing seemed brighter than mine, as I stepped over the threshold. Her Majesty and the rest of the Pure Bloodline Crew had rooms set aside from them, the ones the sun caught just a touch better. The ones with slightly newer paint, slightly nicer beds. I would have resented that a few days ago, but I'd gone back to not caring now that I wasn't stuck in a bed nearly soiling myself.

…Her hair was down, and it suited her. Didn't see her that way often, it was…probably nearly as long as mine was, and you'd never guess. It looked a little pale, a bit too white – for that matter, so did she. Not quite all there at the moment, either, as she sat and stared out the window. It was hard to blame her - apparently the extraction team didn't find her until a few days after Walpurgisnacht, just…standing there in the Point in a sea of grief seeds, murmuring. The squad with her was gone, but frankly, none of us were worried about whether Arty herself would come back.

And at the risk of sounding cold, we got a massive load of grief seeds out of the deal. Walpurgisnacht tended to be good for that, if nothing else.

I landed on the bed next to her with a pomf and a squeak, and she jumped, her hand snapping to where her scabbard would usually be. Whoops.

“Quite a welcome, Highness. You look, if I may, like hell warmed over.” I smiled and tried to play it off. She didn't seem amused.

“It's good to see you on your feet. In a manner of speaking.” When she spoke, it was slow and careful; she was biting back some barely-restrained irritation. Good, good. Arty was probably going to be alright. “We were…worried. That you wouldn't be fit for duty anymore.” After a moment, she added, “Not that that's…the only reason.”

“I know, I know. I'm not sure what I'd do, either, if it weren't for…well.” I raised a blacksteel hand and wiggled my fingers. “…So, how'd it go? Run into any interesting witches? Mine, maybe? Always wanted to see what she's like. Probably awesome.” Probably like a terrible monster of blood and steel and fucking chainsaws.

“That isn't funny.”

“…No, it isn't.” My smile faltered a bit, and there was a flicker of sympathy in her eyes.

“The truth of it is, I don’t remember much. Fighting with the puella I’d chosen to bring along with me, a…witch, of a rather personal nature. No, it wasn’t yours. …I’d rather not discuss it. And…” A flicker of hesitation, and the reassurance that Arty was still a terrible liar. “…I don’t remember much else before the extraction team arrived and I awoke back in the castle.”

I decided not to press her too much. Lord knows I didn’t want to talk about work too much, either.

“Didja talk to what’s-her-face yet, then? She know you made it out okay?” One of Arty’s…well, to be blunt, rare friends, apparently met her during one of those days we sent her off to the city to not work for a change. I think she was from the…Seventeenth? Sixteenth? Was there anyone in the Eighteenth? Couldn’t be the Fourteenth, probably wasn’t…bugger, doesn’t matter.

“…I’d like to wait for Doctor Liddell to finish picking my brain apart, and I’m sure we’re not the only ones with a lot to deal with.” I tried not to sigh, and made a note to get ahold of Frito or whatever her name was and let her know that Arty hadn’t kicked the bucket. Easier said than done. Without stealing Arty’s phone.

I made a note to steal Arty’s phone.

“She says you can’t avoid her forever, by the by,” she continued after a moment. “The doctor, I mean. I imagine she’ll start showing up in your doorway at night soon.”

I nodded absently – yes, that was about what I expected. Maybe best to bite the bullet. Or lock the-no, that wouldn’t work. Piss.

A few minutes passed as Arty returned to staring out the window, something inscrutable bubbling through her mind. I did the same, with a bit more scruting.

I still wanted to pay Elcarys a visit, and…Enyo and I really needed to have a talk that I had no idea how to touch. This was a lot easier when we just killed witches, wasn’t it? …I wasn’t sure I had time for either today, or even in the immediate future. I’d have to check in with El before the Grand Post-WPN Dickwave, at least.

“…The flesh of the fallen angels,” Arty murmured, snapping me out of my little reverie. I had to ask her to repeat it, to make sure I’d heard it correctly. “You remember it, don’t you? From training?”

…Of course I did. It was part of the…rhetoric that the old High Marshall had been spouting, after she went nutters but before Gerty booted her and her cult out. The Lady Ahriman’s gospel. At length, I nodded, and she nodded back.

“It’s been on my mind lately. Since…” Her voice was uncharacteristically quiet, and I nodded again. …I could swear I’d heard whispers of it in my dreams, too, under the screaming. The little, niggling sounds that don’t even strike you as memorable until suddenly they’re crystal clear.

“…It isn’t normal, Raleigh.” She pursed her lips, and…well. I’d known Arty Pendragon a long time. We’d contracted at nearly the same time; we were basically kids when we started training in the Templars, and even then, I’d only seen fear on her face twice.

Three times, now.

“…The Realm’s hard on everyone. Walpurgisnacht, doubly so. You’re a bit fucked in the head right now because… Lady knows how long you were actually in there, or what actually happened. But you made it out, yeah? Just…” I tried to think of something adequate to say. A kinder lie, something at least a little convincing.

“Just don’t dwell on it. Something in there struck a nerve, happens to everyone. Even me, now and again.” I winked at that and patted her shoulder, and she bristled a little. Good. I had no idea what I’d do if she started crying or something. Probably check to see if I was in a barrier. Or if I’d died and hadn’t…I could be a witch RIGHT NOW and not even realize it.

No, that was not a rabbit hole I was at all comfortable with going down.

I forced a smile and pushed myself to my feet.

“I’ll be acting in your stead as an aide and whatnot, so if you need anything done in an official capacity…I can grossly misuse my new power and make it happen. Until you’re feeling fit to fly again, at least.”

She didn’t smile at that, either. As expected of Her Majesty.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/01/15(Sun)08:53:15 No.37770699 Archived

You are a Magical Girl.

...

Yeah, that's what you are. Just a Magical Girl. You've always been one.

And nothing will change that.

Not Ahriman, not Oriko, not Pinky. Not even the gaudy cocktail dress you're wearing for a costume - or the skeletal wings sticking out of your back - will change that either.

You are a Magical Girl, and you'll stay a Magical Girl until the day you croak.

And your name has never been Akemi Homura.

It has always been Chiaki Matsuda.

And you are going to kill everyone involved in making you look like a slutty cosplay of some character in a after-dark anime that people like Souji masturbates to--

...Oh. Wait. You already were, even before this.

Well, shit.

No, you're just going to kill Ahriman. Or at least, kill her enough until you can save Oriko, just like you promised.

You and your fucking promises. When will you ever learn?

File: cantwin.png (492 KB, 1428x1284)

To do that, though, you have to get where the bitch is, first. And from what you can gather, she'd flown her way up to the penthouse - or whatever's the highest point in this fucking skyscraper, things stopped making spatial sense and logic after the magic-slinging cunt sent a giant goat demon at you - and was now doing somethig vile up there. You don't know what, but it sounds like she's shrieking, chanting, crying and laughing. All at the same time.

Bad news, most likely. It was always bad news.

So you and your team pound your way up again through the stairs, humping the weight of your readied weapons as well as your own tired bodies in pursuit of the main objective. Mami at point, Wendy in the middle, and you bringing up the rear.

...You were supposed to be point, and for a couple of floors you were, until Wendy finally complained of being slapped in the face with your wings one two many times. You tried to snap them close to your back, but it only made them twitch and quiver in response.

They moved out of the way out of everything else without you having to do anything, though, so there was that tiny consolation. You wouldn't be dying an embarrassing death with your new wings catching you up in some narrow corridor or doorway just yet.

Besides, if there was anything from your new...transformation that had a chance of killing you outright, it would be your goddamn cocktail dress.

It is, without question, the worst thing about this entire deal. Worse than the wings. Worse than the stockings. Worse than the huge red ribbon in your hair that slapped against your face with every movement.

Worse than hearing the faint echo of a thousand magical girls screaming in your head whenever you exhaled.

First off, it's thin - whatever material the damn thing was made of, it was a material that's markedly thinner than silk, and clung to your figure with an annoying bodysuit-like tenacity. Second, it barely covered anything - or at least, anything that fucking mattered, whereas your original costume covered enough of your body that you could at least feel safe in a firefight. Finally - the skirt or the train or whatever the fuck it was, it was long enough to drag on the floor behind you, emitting a snakelike hiss no matter what surface it rasped against.

You would've been annoyed by the ever-present distraction of the noise if you hadn't already been fucking PISSED at how the dress seem to actively trip you up every couple of steps. This of course forced you to wield the Desert Eagle with one hand, while the other hiked the garment up enough so you can move without the risk of breaking your face open with an ill-timed fall.

...So, yeah. Briefly transformed into some kind of super-slutty super Witch, before suffering through a particularly bad case of combined megalomania and schitzophrenia, with wings poking out from your shoulder blades like some kind of original character a gloomy pigtailed kid in the second year of middle school would scrawl at the back of her journal...and what you complain about is the fucking dress.

At least your habit of focusing on the small problems than the bigger ones is still intact. Might be a good sign.

You growl something foul underneath your breath and press on, pounding after Wendy on the slow ascent up to Ahriman's final stand.

And then--

+ This is Miki Sayaka, Eversor. + The voice of your Equerry rakes over your mind, pulsed through the mental connection you shared with your entire Kill-Team. Her voice, but...changed. Stiff, somehow. It's Sayaka, alright, but...not her at all.

Ahead of you, you hear Mami gasp, at the same time you see her knuckles turn white on her rifle's handle. + Miki-san, we're headed towards the top of the skyscraper. Ahriman's waiting for us there. Please hurry. + She pauses here, before continuing. + We'll make it out of here. All of us. Even Kyoko. I promise, Miki-san, so please-- +

+ Orders. Received. + The same dull intonation cuts her off. + En route. +

...How do you react?

[]Ask Mami what's wrong with Sayaka.

"What's wrong?" You call up to Mami, speaking in your real voice, unwilling to let anything inadvertently slip through the pulsed connection. All three of you still moving, still pounding your way up the stairs, not missing a step despite the unease clear in the atmosphere. "Mami? What's wrong with Sayaka? Why the hell is she--"

"It's something about her contract," Mami suddenly replies, and you're shocked to your core at the tremor in her voice. "All contracted Eversors usually develop something inside them that makes them go....well, berserk during times of stress. It can usually be trained out of them during basic, or at least controlled enough through meditation and behavior modification." You hear her swallow painfully with a dry throat. "For Miki-san, though, she got something worse. Something much more dangerous than just a hair-trigger temper."

...You're not liking the sound of this.

"Let's just say she learned how to control that side of her in a different way, and from how she sounds..." She pauses again to take a breath. "...that way has been...severely compromised. It also means she's..."

...close to Witching Out?

Mami nods after a moment. "...Nothing we tried worked. We tried everything, bar shoving her into a Silent Room and keeping her sedated on narcotics. Whenever that side of her woke up, it also corrupted her Soul Gem to the point that we were burning a month's supply of Grief Seeds just to get her above the breaking limit." And then, of all things, a smile breaks upon her face - a hesitant, fearful one but a smile nonetheless. "If...if she's still talking, though, that means Miki-san is still with us. She's still fighting."

You mull this over, confusion and relief warring inside you. On one hand, you'r relieved Sayaka's not going to Witch Out in mid-operation - your relationship with her had been rocky at the very start, but things between the both of you had been improving, helped massively by Kyoko herself. But then, if she's in this state...

You stop in your tracks, and the remains of your Kill-Team immediately stop with you.

Then, Kyoko's...

No. Not Kyoko. Not her.

"We don't know for sure, unless we ask." Mami shakes her head. "And at the moment, I'm...not sure we should ask, either."

What do you do?

You nod. Yeah, it...might be a bad idea to ask Sayaka about Kyoko now.

It doesn't matter anyway. Not right now. Someone still needs to pay for everything that's happened, and you're not the one getting stiffed with the bill.

Your grip tightens on your Desert Eagle as the three of you resume your way up the stairs. Whether Kyoko was still alive or not - and you desperately hoped she still was - you swear that you'll make Ahriman apologize for hurting your best friend before you kill her.

And then, you'll save Oriko. Because that's what Kyoko would've wanted.

After a few more floors, though - and hearing Ahriman's waspish chanting grow louder and louder with every floor you ascend - it's here that you grit your teeth and indulge your own burning curiosity. Briefly closing your eyes to focus on your connection with Midori. To ask her about about how Kyoko is doing. Just a clue, just something to go on.

...

Nothing. Not even a pulse of acknowledgement. Only dead, empty air.

So not even that, then?

"It must be whatever Ahriman's doing," Mami calls down to you. "It's getting increasingly hard to try and even pulse to each other. I just tried to ask Yuma for a teleportation lock, in case we need it. Nothing's going through."

Great. Just...fucking great.

"...We need to get up there faster." Wendy says suddenly, turning towards you briefly, her eyes narrowed. "The stairs are just going to slow us down. We need to take the same route she took - straight up, right through the floors."

What? Like, flying, then? She wants you to fly?

"Can't you? You've got wings, right? We can just hang on, and stuff."

...You don't even know HOW to fucking fly! They're just sticking out your fucking back like...like dildos! You're not even sure if you can carry their weight along with yours--

"No need to fucking shout, Kong. I just thought you'd want to get this over with faster." Wendy shakes her head at you, frowning. "Fine. Let's just keep humping up these stairs, then. Hopefully whatever shit Ahriman's doing up top doesn't finish before we get there. Feels like she's trying to set up something huge for us."

Hnh. Yeah, you get that too. If you were in Ahriman's place, and you knew your assassins would be charging up the stairs, then you'd be doing all you can to prepare for their arrival. Readying one big final showdown that'll make them regret ever trying to kill you in the first place.

"Right? And seems to me the fucked-up chanting has something to do with that, besides blocking pulsed comms." Wendy's knife gleams in her hand. "Your choice, Kong. This is your op."

What do you do?

...Against your better judgement, you decide to give flying a try.

Seriously? Flying? With these things? They barely even look like wings! They look less than something that could actually get you airborne and more like some art hipster's idea of a 'deep' and 'philosophical' metal sculpture about the impermanence of life - with feathers pasted onto random spots using a fucking glue gun!

"...This kinda place, you learn really quickly that it's not always about what it looks like, but what it symbolizes." Wendy says quietly as all three of you look down from lip of the crater that Ahriman had made on her way up to the top. A look up gets you an eyeful of the roiling sea of black that was the Akashic Realm's sky - with what looks like crimson stormclouds manifesting here and there, barely visible in the gloom yet clearly illuminated by a gibbous moon. "For all we know they could work like fucking jetpacks themselves, since they look freaky enough."

Is that right?

"Not like we haven't seen anything just as weird. Or weirder." Despite her perenially-sullen tone of voice, anyone could have detected the smile in her voice. "Like a Warmaster of an Officio Assassinorum handing over her own Soul Gem to the main objective."

Tou-fucking-che.

"Not the time, you two." Tomoe says mildly, managing to look calm despite the fact that Ahriman's chanting has all three of you on edge. "Well, Chiaki-san? Are you up to this or not? We can have Tiny Pete summoned instead if you're not sure--"

No, you shake your head. You'll do this. You have the fucking wings on anyway, and they don't seem to be coming off so you may as well try.

Mami nods. "Then, please be careful. Just shout the moment you think it's going badly or you're going to fall, and I'll catch you." She presses what seems like a bit of yellow ribbon into your gloved hand. It's...you're not sure what it's for, but it's comforting to hold at least.

Right. Now...

You close your eyes and focus. Focusing yourself like you've done a hundred times before, just like whenever you wanted to speak to the spirit inside a Golden Weapon you had on hand. Focusing on the wings half-spread, have-folded on your back. Concentrating on spreading them to their full wingspan, to control them, to use them for flight. To use them to help you kill Ahriman.

Something screams in the distance, and you jerk your head to try and hear where the sound came from without opening your eyes. Another scream, this time much closer, so close you swore you heard what killed the screamer as her last cry ends in a burbling hiss. A cut to the throat, simple and quick and horrifically messy.

Then, more screaming. And more. And more.

Filling your ears, filling your every thought, overlapping them and erasing your own. A cacophony of death screams, their seperate agonies melding together into an orchestra of pain. All of them crying out your name in a thousand voices, begging for destruction.

And then, you open your eyes.a

And see yourself hovering over the crater Ahriman had left on the floor on her way up. Your wings fully spread, each feather streaming flames of cold black fire. Wendy and Mami looking up at you from below, the both of them looking rather surprised about the whole thing, but also...well, properly scandalized. Of the two, Wendy seems to be blushing the most, the American studiously keeping her eyes riveted towards a particularly uninteresting spot on the floor.

Alright, fine, you can understand being surprised, you ARE fucking flying on what amounts to skeletal wings with the barest suggestion of feathers. And you don't even have to keep flapping them to stay aloft - something, most likely the black fire, is keeping you airborne.

But what the fuck is up with Wendy now?

"I'm...pretty sure it's nothing to worry about." Mami says after a moment, her voice and words level, but there's an obvious hesitation as she says these words. "Um, well, at least this answers the mystery of whether you can fly or not, Chiaki-san, right?" She smiles here, the curling of her lips one moment too quick to be genuine. "...Do you think you can carry all three of us to the top, then?"

You look down on them again, before flexing your wings. ...Whatever is keeping you up doesn't seem to be relying at all on any sort of external propulsion limited by weight or fuel or anything like that. So yeah, probably. All three of you should be fine, unless you let go of them or something.

Another moment's hesitation. Just a single moment, nothing more, before Mami steps forward and takes your outstretched hand. "Good enough for me," She smiles, before turning to your ex. "Wendy, please take Chiaki's other hand. Come on, so we can get this over with as quickly as possible."

Wendy is slower to commit than Mami, but when she does, she looks up at you with clear concern in her eyes.

"...Doesn't it hurt, Kong?" She whispers.

Hurt? What, flying? ...Not really, why?

"Your wings're...they're using stuff from this place to make you fly." She murmurs. "You're literally burning the souls of the fucking damned to fly."

...What?

"...And that's the coolest fucking thing I've ever seen."

How do you react?

Guys, according to the write-ups, Amber Nakajima was contracted because she was a human that killed magical girls, so they forced or her unless she accepted death. So, probably, Oriko will have the same option. Also, think about this:
>Oriko, considering your previous acts, and given the fact that you were possesed, you are either going to contract or die. Your choice?
>Contract
>Very good. Now, Haruka Amane, with this new recruit, your prognosticator abilities are no longer needed. Your new role in the officio will be personal bedwarmer of Chitose Yuma.
>That will be all. Now, if you excuse me, I´m going to kill a bottle of wishkey and fuck Midori until she passes out. Have a nice day

Your wings are running on fucking WHAT?

You turn your head to glance at them, and Wendy is...well, she's right. Not that you're suddenly an expert on witch-born flight technology that's somehow fueled by tortured souls. You're not even into ghosts or stuff like that, even if you regularly talk to some and try to avoid one entirely.

No, you know she's right because each black flame licking from your wing's feathers seem to be flickering with the screaming faces of the dead.

...Yeah, you concede after a long moment, looking back at Wendy finally. Yeah, actually, that is pretty cool.

Just one thing before you get this started, though. She was looking earlier, you saw her, and...well, you really can't tell with this fucking outfit, but are you wearing anything--

Wendy looks at you in stony silence, her cheeks reddening, before shaking her head.

...Fucking hell, this costume. This fucking costume.

So, trying to put that particular tidbit out of your mind, your wings still aflame with the souls of the damned - you decide to get on with it, finally. Asking your two passengers if they're ready.

"Ready." They both intone, in perfect unison, both their hands holding tighter onto yours.

Murmuring something underneath your breath, you spread your wings out to their fullest capacity, and then beat them downward. Once.

And your own scream nearly joins the damned choir in your head as you shoot straight up, fast, faster than you've ever felt, faster than anything. Each floor flashing past in an ear-spitting roar of air and displaced sound. You hear Wendy screaming, too, just as her grip on your hand tightened even more.

Mami never screamed, though. Not once. In that fevered second of blinding, death-defying speed - she never screamed.

In front of you stood an army. One bigger than the horde of screaming fanatics you murdered earlier, along with the huge goatish daemon with the leathery wings. This time, Magical Girls stood before you, in neat and ordered ranks. Their costumes clean, if a bit washed of color. Their bodies untouched by the Akashic Realm's corrupting touch, yet...stiff, emotionless, implacable. Their faces blank, with the exception of their eyes: all of them glowing with a sick green light as they focused on you and only you.

"They're like zombies," Mami gasps as all three of you touch down, feet back on solid ground at last. The relief is short-lived, though, as even Wendy seems disturbed by the sight.

"THEY COME!" Ahriman shrieks at the other end of the courtyard, grasping the Golden Staff, her own wings brilliantly white and immaculate. An angel's wings. "COME TO SLAY US, TO WIPE OUR OFFICIO FROM MEMORY! THE HERETIC, GIVEN HER SECOND BREATH THROUGH FOUL SACRIFICE! THE DECEIVER, THE PRODIGY OF THAT TRAITOROUS WRETCH AND WHORE HARUMI RYOUNO - AND THE WITCH HERSELF!" She points the staff at you. "SLAY THEM, MY RUBRICAE! SLAY THEM ALL!"

Well. So much for fucking diplomacy, then.

What do you do?

Prose Magica: The Ballad of the Seventeenth 21

Two months, she had been contracted. In two months, her life had been battered, broken and reshaped into something that would have seemed utterly alien before. Her father had struck it rich. She found a true best friend. She had met and - if she was being bold - become friends with the most powerful magical girl in the country. She had lived in a true mansion for all of a week before her father was murdered and the mansion nearly destroyed in the process. Now, nearly two weeks later, she was back to the suburbs, living with her new best friend's family like one long sleep-over.

But all of that aside, perhaps the strangest thing of all was how... normal it all felt. Her old world had been ripped to unrecognizable shreds and Mona Bernard simply nodded and took it in stride. It was as if she had forfeited her normal, teenaged girl life upon contracting and already knew that everything was bound to fall apart sooner or later. She just had to pick up the pieces and glue them back together. Make something tougher. Something stronger.

For the third time in the past ten minutes, she pulled out her expensive new smartphone to check the time, as though waiting for a call that would never come. Across the room, Meg Laurie laid across her bed, playing yet another video game starring big-eyed characters with unusual hair. It was the only thing Mona ever saw her play.

The smaller girl rolled over on her side and cocked an eyebrow at Mona. "You okay?" She asked. "You keep lookin' at that thing like when people check the fridge and expect new food to appear."

Mona was shocked for a moment, then laughed and shook her heard. She didn't even realize that Meg had been paying attention. "Just... It's nothing, don't worry about it."

"You wanted to call Odette, right?" Meg asked. "Thinkin' about doing that?"

Mona sighed, then smiled at her friend. "Why do I bother?"

"I'm in your head Bernard!" Meg waved her fingers by her head like a pair of antennae. "I know all your secrets!"

"But it's seven o'clock..."

"C'mon, she went to go talk to whatshername at two in the morning," Meg argued, twisting around to sit on the edge of her bed. "Do it, nerd."

"But that was-"

"Doooooo iiiiiitttttt."

"Fine," Mona groaned as she heaved herself out of her beanbag chair. "I'll be right back."

The other Eversor flashed her a bright smile and a thumbs up as she stepped out of the room. Mona hadn't gotten around to adding Odette's number to her contacts - it felt far too personal - and so had to check back and forth from Holly's text to get the number right. Numbers had never been her strong suit. She leaned back against the wall just outside of the bedroom and stuck the sleek phone to her ear, still holding it rather clumsily after being used to cellphones that looked and felt like small bricks.

The phone rang over and over, giving Mona a sense of relief, thinking the former Warmaster might not even pick up. But the fourth ring was cut off by sounds of shuffling cloth before an increasingly familiar, and out-of-breath sounding voice answered, "Yo, hey, what's up, kiddo?"

"Uh- Hey," Mona replied, "is, um, is this a bad time? I can-"

"Nonono, well- I can talk," Odette said, sounding just the slightest bit guilty. "What's up?"

"I was just wondering if I could talk to you about the thing I mentioned early. I kinda wanted to get it out of the way before the funeral, but if you're busy-"

"Hey, no worries," Mona was constantly astounded at how friendly Odette sounded, especially compared to the rumours. "Sounds like something you might want to talk about in person, though, right? How about I swing by in a little bit and pick you up?"

"I, um," Mona stammered, caught off guard. "If you're sure it's no trouble..."

"Great! Fifteen minutes good for you?"

"Sure-"

"Actually, make it twenty-"

"Are-"

"OW," Odette shouted over the phone, "that hurt! Fu- Half an hour? Is that good?" It sounded more like the former Warmaster was asking someone on the other line. "Women. Okay, thirty minutes. See you then! And, uh, tell your friend I said hi."

"She'll," Mona paused, a bit incredulous that Odette even remembered Meg, "she'll like that. Thanks. Later."

"Good, good. Take care, kiddo."

As the phone went silent, Mona nearly collapsed against the wall. It didn't feel normal anymore. The understanding of who Odette was, the fact that she was dropping her business to visit Mona, on top of casually casually calling her 'kiddo'. It wasn't normal at all. Her back slid down the wall as Mona lowered herself to sit on the floor. A moment to collect herself, that's all she needed. Just a moment to make sure she wouldn't cry.

She wasn't sure how long she'd been outside when she felt an arm around her shoulders. It probably wasn't long, knowing Meg. The shorter Eversor pulled her close, rubbing her shoulder and whispering comforts.

"C'mon, Momo," Meg said, smiling gently, "gotta get ready. Can't have you lookin' all red-eyed and puffy-faced, right?"

Mona nodded, wiping her tears away with a sleeve.

"Here," Meg said, shoving a tissue into Mona's hands, "blow."

Mona did. A few tissues later and her nose was already feeling hot and sore. She could only imagine how red it must have been. Meg squeezed her shoulder and the pair sat together on the floor until they heard the low hum of an engine pulling up to the house. Mona was pulled to her feet and hurried along into the bathroom while Meg rushed down to meet their guest so fast that she nearly fell down the stairs.

By the time Meg reached the front door, Odette had nearly done the same. The door juddered and squealed as it opened, not quite fitting the frame properly.

"Yo, hey," Meg said, "she's just getting clea- getting ready. You wanna come in for a little?"

Odette laughed and shook her head. "Nah, nah. Nice and cold out here. Rough night?"

Meg opened her mouth to say something, but couldn't find the words. Instead, she just nodded.

"Been there," Odette said. "Too many times, really. How about you? Holdin' up okay?"

"Ah, y-you know," the dark-haired girl said with a shrug, "I'm still working through the whole 'Odette-freakin'-Brighton is at my house' thing. Just wish... y'know..."

"Under better circumstances, yeah. I've got a feeling I'll be swinging by more often. Hopefully you'll see me around the office more, too."

"Oh! You know what you should do is- is- um, actually..."

"What?"

"Well," Meg gave a sheepish grin, "I was gonna say you should come visit some of your fans, but I dunno if you'd want to do something like that..."

Odette shrugged. "Wouldn't hurt. Might help get some of that old Warmaster swagger back."

"SERIOUSLY?!"

"Sure, why not?"

"Oh man. OH MAN," the junior Eversor said, practically bouncing in place with excitement. "THIS IS WHY YOU'RE THE BEST! I gotta tell everyone. Oh man, oh man... MOMO, HURRY IT UP!"

"I'M COMING," Mona called back, moments before appearing at the top of the stairs. Though her face was cleaned, Mona's eyes were visibly red, even from the doorway. The tall Eversor wore the same plain, navy and white tracksuit that she usually wore for training, clearly in no mood to get dressed up, even for eminent company.

"Yo," Odette waved, then cocked a thumb at the steel behemoth waiting at the curb. "Ready to go?"

"Are you watching closely?"

"I'm watchin', I'm watchin'."

The Bartender kept close watch as the deck fluttered in front of her eyes. Across from her sat a golden-eyed girl with long, feathery pink hair topped with a gigantic, purple witch hat. She never seemed to break eye contact with the redhead as she shuffled the cards - never once looking down as her fingers moved faster than the Bartender thought humanly possible. She was Callidus Rank Leader, professional stage magician, comedian and three time winner of the annual Miss Seventeen beauty pageant, May White.

May flicked a card up, holding it between two fingers "Is this your card?"

The Bartender shook her head. It was the two of spades, not the four of diamonds.

"Damn it, I thought I had that one..."

"You're slippin', kiddo."

May pouted and her purple cloak flapped as she reshuffled the deck. "One more time..."

The Bartender's eyes wandered across her establishment. It was a busy night, to say the least. Normally, she could expect maybe a dozen patrons on a week night - tonight, however, the building seemed packed to the brim. Almost every booth and table seemed to be filled, leaving the cocktail waitresses very little room as they flitted back and forth. On the other hand, perhaps owing to the presence of the Rank Leader, not a single soul sat at the bar itself.

At last, the pink-haired girl slapped the deck on the table. "Pick any card!"

The Bartender rubbed her eyes and considered the cards for a moment, before splitting the deck in half and taking the middle card, eliciting a smirk from her companion. The smirk, however, faded as the Bartender flipped up the ace of diamonds.

"Well," the redhead muttered, "it would have been pretty impressive if it worked, I guess."

>> ☐ archivalfag 02/01/15(Sun)15:22:59 No.37776705
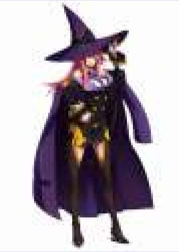
File: May1.jpg (98 KB, 731x1024)



May groaned, then swiped the deck off the table and stuffed it into her pocket. "Whatever," she grumbled. "Can you get me another coaster? My drink's sweatin' like a blind lesbian at a fish market."

The comment got a snort out of the Bartender. "Every time," she said, shaking her head as she reached under the table. "Hang on..."

May's eyes seemed to twinkle as an enormous grin crept onto her face. From under the table, the Bartender produced a crisp, new deck of cards, still wrapped in plastic.

"You're shitting me," the redhead laughed.

"Come on, open it up! Look at the top card!"

"See, this is what I like about you, May. Even the simple things can be," the Bartender tore open the pack and picked out the top card, "eeentirely underwhelming..."

A strained, painful laugh escaped May's lungs as the Bartender turned over the queen of hearts.

"Bullshit," the Rank Leader said, though neither her lips nor the rest of her face seemed to move an inch.

"You still need that coaster?"

May shook her head, then began to look through the cards. Her brow seemed to furrow harder and harder as she did, before she finally asked, "It was the four of diamonds, right?"

"Yup."

"It's not in here," May muttered. A moment later, she fished the first deck out of her pocket and repeated the search. "It's not here!"

"Is this another trick?" The Bartender asked, snickering.

"No! It's really gone!" The magician patted herself down and checked her sleeves. "I don-"

"Hey, what's that in your drink?"

May's head jerked up to her neglected piña colada. There, sliced down the middle to garnish the rim, was the four of diamonds. It was then that she realized the voice that had tipped her off didn't belong to the Bartender, who was already doubled over laughing.

"You BITCH," May hissed at the patron leaning back against the bar beside her.

"Aw, c'mon, kiddo," Lotte said with a wink, dressed in the latex, fur-lined catsuit that was her costume, "Red's right, that would've been really good if it weren't for me."

"This is- I'm your boss now," May pouted, crossing her arms and slouching over the bar to sip at her drink, "can't do this to me..."

"So how'd she do it, huh?" The Bartender asked the newcomer. "Free drink if you tell me."

"Nice try," she said, smirking. "Un mojito, s'il vous plaît."

With an annoyed grumble, the redhead went about making the drinking, leaving the two Calliduses to themselves. The senior of the two spun on her stool to face the bar, still grinning at her junior. May had always been Lotte's star pupil, so she found it only natural to tease the magician whenever she could. She still remembered being there for May's wish four years earlier. Something about wishing to impress people and put smiles on faces - she couldn't remember the exact wording, but it was the same innocent kind of wish that always made for talented magical girls.

May took to being a magical girl like a fish to water. Somehow she even managed to handle a career of stage magic and a smattering of stand-up comedy on the side, to boot. Had she been contracted only a year earlier, she might have even beaten Lotte out for the title of Rank Leader. As good as she was, though, May never managed to work her way into the old circle of friends that dominated the senior posts in the Officio. She never seemed to want to either, always being content to stay on the sidelines. Maybe it was easier to manage her career that way.

"So how's the new job?" Lotte asked. Her costume slowly disintegrated into particles of light, revealing a turtle-neck sweater and skinny jeans underneath. A moment later, the Bartender slid her drink in front of her.

>> ☐ archivalfag 02/01/15(Sun)15:25:17 No.37776745

May loosed a long and loud groan. "I don't know how you did it," she groaned. "One day they're smuggling booze into their bunks, the next they're sneaking out at night to go clubbing."

"It's good practice, really."

"And now all of this bullshit lately has them all riled up," May's expression sank as the brim of her hat seemed to droop further over her face. "They already want to go back to the old days with you running the rank and Odette in charge, and now Fubey does this whole invasion of privacy thing? How do you think that's going over with the prettiest princesses in the Officio?"

"Well obviously it'll ruffle some feathers, but is it really THAT bad?"

"If I had a nickel for every time I heard 'Warmaster Brighton wouldn't have let this happen', I swear. Worst part is the Vindicares being all gung-ho about this. Congratulations, Terry, you turned a grudge into a full-on blood feud-"

"Whoa, whoa," Lotte said, gesturing for May to be quiet. "Slow down, there. It's gotten worse? I haven't heard anything about this."

"Yeah, 'cause you're semi-retired," May explained. "We don't want to drag you back into that mess. And, well... yeah, okay? It's gotten worse. Feels like there's a scuffle every other day. Someone talks shit, someone gets hit. Makes me wish I was in Fred's place. At least with the Eversors I could just kick their asses if they got in trouble."

"I don't think it works quite like that," Lotte remarked. "So what's Frenchie doing about all this? Can't you guys do... I don't know, something?"

"Chloé? Christ, don't even get me started! She does so little that half the time I think she's just egging them on when I'm not looking."

"Wouldn't put it past her, I guess."

"So I figured I'd take a little time off, go do a few shows," the magician swirled her straw around. "Left Mercy and Sigma in charge of the place-"

"Mercy and Sigma 'Once Ate a Crayon On a Bet', THAT Sigma? The hell are you doin' to my rank, White?"

"Best twenty bucks I ever lost. But okay, maybe it's more like Mercy's in charge and she has her little cheerleader there for support. Can we just talk about something other than work?" May asked, trying to look a bit cheerier. "So what about you, huh? My little birdies tell me that retirement's been treating you pretty good the past few days."

"Hah, you could- you could say that," Lotte stammered, turning a bit pinker.

"So what're you doing here instead of spending time with the bae?"

"Please never use that word again," the blonde said. "Odette had to go look after some kid whose dad just died, because... Well, besides the dead dad thing, you know how O gets. Always has to be responsible for everyone else's problems."

"'Dead dad thing', very classy," May laughed. "I can see why Popsicle likes you so much."

"Shut up," Lotte laughed, "it's not like you even know the kid."

The pink-haired Callidus snickered and took a quick sip of her drink. "But I get what you're saying," she said, finally pulling the card off of her drink and flicking it at her senior, "she's got that whole- what's it called- reparation complex? That sounds like it might be a thing. Always feels like she owes the Officio more."

"That's pretty much it, yeah. Some days I worry she wants to go out with a big heroic sacrifice, just like the old lady."

"'s why you gotta tie her down, Shirley," May said, nodding at her own sage wisdom. "Give her a reason to stop sticking her neck out for every stray kitten that crosses her path. You know what I mean?"

"Don't call me Shirley."

"Point stands."

"Easier said than done," Lotte murmured. "I already tried asking her if she wanted to just settle down. Didn't work, but I still got this far. It'll take time for her to get used to a quieter life."

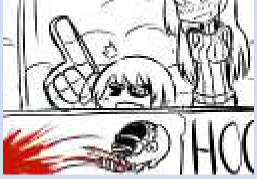
"You sure seem to have adapted to it fast."



"Eh," the blonde shrug, "things are never as simple as they seem."

May smiled and let out a soft chuckle. "Guess so," she replied. The magician's gaze wandered off to the stage at the far end of the building, where the Russian looked to be finishing up the night's performance. "Hey," May said, tilting her head in the direction of the stage, "you feel like giving the good people a show? Been a while since both of us were here at the same time."

Lotte turned to look at the stage, then glanced back at May as she thought. After a moment's consideration, she sighed, smiled and said, "Just let me finish my drink first."

Shattered Sword
Chapter 01 - Paperwork

Long, lithe fingers danced atop the admiral’s cap, jumping about and twirling in an elegant little dance. A skip, a jump, and a pivot, and the applause of nothing more than the sea gently pushing against the ship’s hull. Jessica sighed and set down the report, replacing it with a cup of coffee, watching the liquid slur about clumsily in the mug. She picked up the hat and spun it around a finger, before tossing it through the air, landing neatly on a coat hanger in the corner of the room behind her.

She kicked her feet up on the desk, electing to watch the sea. Though the boat seemed to sway softly to and fro, it never really bothered her. All the tales of people new to the ocean vomiting after just a while seemed almost foreign. Not that she held contempt against those who did, just she herself was never subject to such symptoms.

Paperwork was never something she could stand doing. The ridiculous amounts of effort that went into reading ‘professional’, ‘businesslike’ wording that filled the page was ultimately just something you could ask over the phone. In simpler words. But, Alice’d insisted she do it the formal way, to make sure nothing goes wrong. What a drag, Jessica thought. But, work doesn’t get done by giving it the stare of death. Unless, of course, your power had something to do with easily filling paperwork in almost nightmare-ish fits.

What a condemning power, she thought, reaching for a pen.

A signature and a generic stamp of approval sent the paper to the top of the other pile of papers that were looked at and similarly signed and stamped. She looked at the stamp for the thousandth time that day, and frowned for the thousandth time. She really needed to figure out an emblem for their little group. Though, ‘little’ probably wasn’t - definitely wasn’t - the right word.

She moved on the next piece of paper, cramped with some size nine, ten font explaining... something under the title, ‘Request to send the Third Fleet to Boston’. Jessica furrowed her brow and read the first few sentences of the explanation:

‘As part of your advising council, I, Diana Carolina, formally request to send the Third Fleet to Boston. Competition and Law Enforcement in big cities like Boston, New York, and Los Angeles grow somewhat checked, but factors are less monitored especially so on the East Coast. With your permission, I’d like to...’

As much as Jessica didn’t want to deal with Diana, this explanation was quickly becoming annoying to even look at; fluff on top of fluff. With a reluctant sigh, she picked up her desk phone, a line connected directly between her own room and Alice’s room.

“...Jess?” A grumpy, lazy tone.

“Morning. Did I wake you up?” Jessica set down the paper and picked up a pen, twirling it between her fingers.

“N-“ A sigh. “Yeah. Yeah, I just got up. Good afternoon, I guess. Sorry. What do you need?”

“Can you send Diana up? She’s got some request about sending the Third Fleet to Boston.”

“...Sure. I’ll send her up. At least, tell her to go up. Not sure how much she’ll want to. Also, I’m going to get break-lunch, so... yeah. Be out a while.”

“Alright. See you later. Thanks.”

It wasn’t too long before there were three hard knocks on the door.

“Come in.”

Diana Carolina, Vanus. She flicked back her long ruby hair as she sat down, crossing her legs, keeping her posture straight.

“So,” Jessica started, “Why the hell do you want to send the Third to Boston?”

“You didn’t read the explanation?” Diana lifted an eyebrow.

“Of course not. I’m not going to read this long of a goddamn description.” She gave the girl across from her a look of disdain.

“Oh, right. I forgot I can’t expect someone like you to be stand reading, much less able to.” The farthest side of the Vanus’s lip curled into a smile, almost a smirk.

“Eat shit. I’m the one with power here. Tell me why.”

Diana’s smile melted. “The first few sentences explain everything. Everything is fluff, really.” Her sapphire eyes gestured to the paper. “The only important thing not in the first few sentences is that I also want to... deal with competitors and law enforcement, if you know what I mean.”

>> ☐ Steph 02/01/15(Sun)15:31:52 No.37776862

A nod and Jessica actually began to read the paper. She certainly wasn’t lying, it seemed. So far, at least.

“Fine.” She began signing, and Diana slouched a bit, letting out a silent sigh of relief. A stamp onto the paper - pressing with as much contempt as she could - and Jessica added it to the stack of papers. “Have fun in Boston. Don’t kill anyone too important.”

“Of course not, admiral~” The Vanus stood up to leave, heading for the door.

“Diane.”

“Yes, admiral?”

“Don’t... don’t nuke DC or anything.”

“Yes, admiral~”

With that, the girl exited stage left. Jess mused for a bit, unsure if she should’ve said anything at all. Saying that was implying that she was expecting Diane to break a lot of things. Besides, it wasn’t what she’d wanted to say in the first place.

All Jessica could do was hope Diana didn’t get too close to Varrigan.

Though the nighttime sky was lightless, below the clouds, the city glittered with stars of its own. Clocks read midnight, but the heavens were bright enough for it to still be just about evening. But time didn’t stand still in the outskirts - the ports, the slums, and the industrial sectors were dark as ever, if only just barely illuminated by whatever radiance out from the towers of light.

Two cranes stood above the labyrinth of shipping containers, slowly lifting them onto the cargo ship. Even they seemed to move with lethargy, groaning at the hour of which they were damned to work at. This worked in favor of the two girls, two silhouettes in the maze jumping from shadow to shadow.

Emi approached one of the containers, bearing a small red sticker on the bottom. This was surely what she was looking for, this one and the two to its right. She smiled and reached into her bag, pulling out a can of compressed air and flipped it upside down.

“Ema, I found it!”

The girl called over flinched, stealing a glance at the crane operators before joining Emi.

“Keep your voice down, for the Lady’s sake.”

“Sorry, sorry! I got a bit excited.” With a low hiss, she started painting the lock on the container a brittle white with the can. After several seconds, she summoned her own hammer and brought it down onto the lock, smashing it away with a loud clang.

“I swear, if we get caught, I’m going to kill you.”

Emi reached for the handle and pulled against a brief screech. A quick look inside revealed airtight bags cramped for bottom to top, and even a pleasant little smell.

“Yup, this is it.”

“Good. Throw that thing in there and we’ll finish up with these two others.”

Pushing her long blonde hair back behind her ear, Emi reached into her bag again, this time producing a small device, flashing every few seconds. A toss, a shut, and a lock followed.

TTC - Ch.X4

Once more, the environment around me shifted and twisted. The warped forest of deformed crystals that had been surrounding me a heartbeat ago was then replaced by a more familiar, if still ruined and tainted, city. I could sense I was growing close; very, very close. I could also sense all the death ahead of me; all the pain and destruction. It was all as if winds carried the last whispers and sorrows of the agonizing, but there was no breeze. Yet the pained pleas grazed me, brushed my ears. There's so much pain ahead.. and it felt invigorating.

I didn't waste time before starting to climb one of the tall, ruined buildings in order to get a vantage point. This had always been an useful way to use my claws for something else than destruction. I simply needed to position myself between two skyscrapers, jump once, create myself a holding point, then kick away and stab into the building on the other side. Repeating the last step I could ascend to the top of anything at ludicrous speeds.

Once I made it to the roof, I couldn't help but find a strange sensation of familiarity in the broken cityscape before me. I felt as if this was.. normal.. spending time in this place must have gotten to me more than I believed, or perhaps was it not the first time I had come here? I didn't feel alarmed or bothered by this realization in the slightest. How far gone was I really? How long had things been this way?

Always.

I would never admit it, but that nagging answer in the back of my head scared me slightly. My thoughts continued to wander as I reached into my inventory, taking out once more the metal tube containing my doses of Rose. It had been over a year now since I had lost my closest friends; those who managed to turn me into a decent person from the monster I used to be. Without them at my side.. would I regress to that state again? I couldn't help but feel this was a very real possibility...
[1/7]

>> ☐ Zweihart 02/01/15(Sun)15:39:47 No.37777041

Yet, I had new friends now. It wasn't the same, sure, but they were good people too. They helped me in their own ways, too, so it would be wrong of me to forsake them for the sake of ghosts from my past. I took a deep breath as the drug entered my body, my senses sharpening to impossible levels and making my skin feel the every shift and fluctuation of temperature and moisture in this whimsical, unstable realm; the tiny variations of light coming from its gibbous moon.

But I had no time for those thoughts. Even though things seemed fine... Even though my destination was now closely within my reach... I could still not become complacent. Despite everything, I relaxed, feeling the sense of urgency that had been driving me decrease and quiet down. Before long, I knew I was where I needed to be.

It was easy to tell for many reasons. Firstly, the overwhelming aura of death and destruction that radiated from the building. Secondly, the unnatural amount.. nay, -horde- of creatures that guarded it from outside. Thirdly, the trail I had been following ended there. Ideally, I should avoid dealing with the hellspawns below and try to by-pass them; they were too many and it would take too long to dispose of them... but then again perhaps that was my calling here?

Now that I thought of it, I had been on my fool's errand for some time now and the fact that I could not feel misery and regret from the one who wore the skin of my old friend meant that they had been managing to be doing "well" ever since.

She must have surrounded herself with strong people.

It crossed my mind that if she and whoever she had brought along were able to handle themselves, then perhaps, just perhaps, the "divine" purpose to my presence here was to clear this cesspool so that it wouldn't interfere with whatever was going on inside. But then again I wasn't exactly going to put much stock into blind mysticism, ironically enough.

Oh, uh, I meant to post this picture with that writeup post:

>> ☐ Zweihart 02/01/15(Sun)15:40:49 No.37777063

No, I would still by-pass it, and I knew exactly where to aim for. One floor in particular had all its windows blown away in a much more violent manner than the decrepit state of the rest of the building. Even if that wasn't where things were happening right now, it would most likely hold clues, so I opted to head there directly. I took a running start and leaped of the roof of the skyscraper I was currently on, aiming to burst in directly into the suspicious floor, but a strange force blocked my way like a solid barrier and forced me back.. and down.

Down into the horde. Even as I was still high up, my hyper-sensitized sight could make out their every detail already; goat-like daemon spawns with large furry legs and cloven hooves. They varied in sizes and shapes, but all shared that same main description. Some wielded weapons, others not, but it mattered little what they were and how they fought.

The only purpose to their existence right now was to die.

I no longer felt as if I had to hurry anymore; the proximity offering a strange, comforting sensation. I took a deep breath as energy gathered and built up in all my limbs, but mostly in my ebon claws. I was going to enjoy this, for once, like in the good old times...

A thunderous whip-crack resonated as I landed and released the Fel power. Baleful lightning far more massive and potent than the ones I had used on the 2nd's patrol rippled out in wild arcs and shocked everything in my immediate vicinity, clearing the area and filling my nose with the pleasant scent of freshly cooked meat while producing a massive, blinding light. I was getting pretty hungry.

My lips parted and a warm breath escaped them in the instant that followed. And so it began.

>> ☐ Zweihart 02/01/15(Sun)15:41:54 No.37777092

The first goat found itself impaled by the throat, its lifeblood flowing down onto my claws for with an obscene gurgle before being flung back into the fray of its comrades, which lost balance from the momentum. They never had time to recover; fleshmetal danced and rent, cutting down many, but there were many, many more waiting.

In this moment, I felt relaxed. The battle-lust was present of course, but before anything else, I was glad that things seemed to have turned out fine in the end. I probably jinxed it somehow, of course, but I wanted to allow myself some positive thinking.

fists, hooves and weapons of all kind flew around me, but they felt so slow. I could twist out of the way of the daemonspawns' attacks with contemptuous ease and every strike I sent back mauled the creatures beyond their capacity to keep standing. Even in all their numbers, it was hardly a challenge, but that was a good thing. I had forgotten to cleanse my Soul Gem for a while, so I was fortunate that this would not be too taxing. I did not truly worry about Witching Out, but it was still a thing I felt was simply appropriate to keep a closer eye on than usual.

But of course, it couldn't last. It couldn't have.

A crippling pain surged through my body, but I had not been wounded. It was feedback, feedback from someone nearby and in horrible pain. I flinched for a second, but was still able to bring my suddenly abused muscles around and defend myself. I could feel that something had gone terribly wrong, but I was at a loss as to what, let alone in a position to go check myself.

Mercifully enough, a hint presented itself to me when a massive blast of energy ripped out a part of the wall on one of the upper floors. I could recognize it anywhere; Mami Tomeo's Tiro Finale, but that wasn't everything.

>> ☐ Zweihart 02/01/15(Sun)15:42:56 No.37777112

I focused baleful energies and unleashed a barrage of explosive bolts around me to stop the goat-demons charging at me and deter the others for a moment so I could focus up there just a few seconds. Someone or something was falling down.

I could feel something was off as I focused my gaze onto the falling figure. She felt familiar, very familiar. The presence coming from her was one I recognized and knew well, but the body it wore did not look like the Magical Girl I knew. This body I did not know at all. I was confused. Still, there was at least one clue that would not lie: The weapon she held.

"Well, I digress."

"It's good that you do. Ah, the tea's arrived."

"I believe you wanted to talk about this?"

"Yes, and the tea is very pleasant by the way."

"Of course, I treat my guests well after all. What was it that you wanted to know? I cannot guarantee I will answer, but I can at least humor you."

"I used to have one like that too you know." a small sigh. "Not a staff, but you know what I mean."

"Oh, did you? That would be fascinating... if it were -true-, which I find hard to believe."

"It's a long story, trust me. I'll tell you all about it in due time. More importantly, there are a few things I need to confirm. If they really are of the same kind being one of them."

"I do not believe I can trust you enough to let you lay a finger on it."

"That's fine, just talking is enough for now. I believe you've had time to consider the other.. offers I made?"

"I have."

"What's your decision?"

Ahriman.

Yes, I could tell for certain now. There was no way I would mistake her. Another barrage of Warpfire licked at the ground, keeping the goats away from me for a while longer. In hindsight, I should have expected her to be involved in whatever was going on here, but I did not. Why? I can't tell for sure. But before I could do anything or try to contact her, she was engulfed by a golden light and disappeared.

And then something else even worse happened. The presence I could feel this time was commanding enough to instill a primal fear in sane beings. It was also familiar, but in a different, strange and uncanny kind of way that just beckoned my attention. Even the hellspawns around me stopped their assault as they, too, could feel it.

Who are you. What are you. I know you, and yet not...

Yes, I remember now, that day, when I was enlightened...

How are you here now? For what purpose?

...

I was snapped out of my stasis by the painful feeling of a giant fist impacting onto my back, but I felt almost nothing and barely flinched. Something strange was happening to my body; something I had never felt before. Everything suddenly felt dull. The thrill of the battle? gone. The urgency from earlier? gone. Even my perception seemed to have numbed slightly.

And yet as it battered down onto me, I felt no pain either. Only a resolve that was not mine. A contempt that was not mine. A goal that was not mine and the image of a pink girl I've never met.

No, that's not right... I've met her before.. haven't I? My memory felt scrambled and hazy.

I felt like I was no longer in control of my body as the battle resumed. My limbs moved with but a faint thought, spells were casted without even making a conscious decision to and the broken streets of this twisted city landscape were set aflame. Yet, I felt like all I could do was watch.

After what felt like an eternity, my vision went black for a few seconds and I returned to normal, feeling dreadfully exhausted. There were no more goat daemons in sight, nothing but charred meat and flowing blood as far as I could see. I would have been proud of that charnel before me if I didn't have the nagging feeling that I wasn't truly the one behind it.

The strange presence that had caused this outburst seemed to be gone from the top floors now. Leaving me more confused than ever. I tried to make my way to the entrance, but staggered and tripped, ending up painfully against a wall. A short grumble later I reached out for my Inventory and snatched a Grief Seed, applying it where it was sorely needed.. then another... and another... and another. Soon enough I had spent my entire stash and I felt only half-empty, but that was good enough to at least get back on my feet. I needed a drink...

Yuko had been a Magical Girl for three minutes, and she already stood in front of a Witch.

She had been doing that for the entirety of her miniscule career: she remained completely still, not daring to breathe or move a single muscle in front of the titanic monstrosity before her. It felt as though if this world had a sky, the monster would have been able to touch the clouds. At the very least, it had not noticed her presence yet.

Yuko wore a thin, black trench-coat with a tall collar, a red T-shirt underneath. On her head, a visored cap, adorned with a golden, round gem at the center. On her legs, a pair of slim-fitting pants, secured by a brown leather belt. On her feet, dark leather shoes. On her hands, a pair of brass knuckles, each as long as a fist; like a fist on top of a fist.

She looked like a stereotypical Japanese delinquent wearing clothing a size bigger than what fit her, but although her clothes were larger than what she was comfortable with wearing, it suited her well, because that's what she used to be - just a delinquent.

She was here to deal with the mistakes of her previous delinquent life. Daisuke Yuko harassed Ryouichi Miyuki into a miserable, grief driven suicide, the consequences of which threatened to continue claiming more lives; those very same consequences currently surrounded and towered before Yuko in a very literal way, and they threatened to take her life first.

Her brain only then started to register the biting cold haunting the Witch’s Barrier, this infinitely stretching field of cyan ice. The discomfort became considerable enough to snap her back to reality. Yuko realized that she was about to choke on her own saliva, so she swallowed. She found it hard to do so, and the noise such a simple action caused was loud. Comically loud. So loud that the Witch turned its head at the noise. The sound echoed as if in mockery, rubbing her mistake in her face. Yuko took a deep breath; the fight was about to begin, whether she liked it or not.

Her face twisted into a scowl. She wanted to get ready of her own accord, and wished she hadn't been rushed by such a stupid error. Though, Yuko beginning this fight of her own volition was unlikely to ever happen. After all, her courage hadn't been improving as she stared at the Witch; rather, the opposite was occurring.

There was no time to get ready, and the few minutes she spent in this world were wasted on cowering. She didn’t have the slightest semblance of the combat training or mental conditioning required to take on a monster like this. All she went through was an interview with a blonde girl, filled with more "subtle" psychoanalysis than should be legal. If they really wanted to know her mental state so much, they should have just made her go to a psychiatrist, she thought. At least it would have felt more honest.

The Witch was akin to a silhouette - its body consisted of pitch black nothingness molded into the shape of a human being. A blue dress that reached down to its feet gave it an uncanny semblance of immature innocence; it previously had been soundlessly frolicking about, as if overjoyed by the azure surroundings of its home. It had wings of ice sticking out of its back, two split halves of a single snowflake.

When it noticed the nuisance, it turned its featureless face towards the source, cocking its head to the side in curiosity. As if realizing that something fun could come out of the creature, who it most likely thought to be nothing more than a cute little toy, the lower half of its face spawned a set of pristinely white teeth, each tooth as large as a person. The Witch was grinning, a smile filled to the brim with childish cruelty.

In this world, Yuko was completely alone, save for the giggling monstrosity before her. No one who she could rely on, and no one who could interfere with anything. However, that was exactly what she wished for.

The Witch fluttered its wings. The motion created a gust of wind so cold that it felt like it could cut through flesh and bone. Yuko crossed her arms in front of her face, providing the kind of protection that served more to make her feel better instead of actually helping. She was forced back, not because she relented, but because the wind made her slide backwards along the slippery surface.

Yuko gritted her teeth and, the moment the wind stopped, charged at the Witch. She couldn’t even go at half her speed because of the ice under her feet. It was a clumsy, almost amusing display. If it wasn’t so difficult to keep balance, she would have been cursing out loud - at herself, no less. After all, this was her fault. Being here, and this Witch being at all.

It took her far too long to get close to the Witch. It just stood there, looking down at her with its nonexistent eyes.

Yuko raised her fist in an attempt to stub its toe, as that was all she could reach, but the monster fluttered its wings again, forcing her to the ground with gusts of icy, razor sharp wind.

The gigantic child then took off, making its way up towards the void that substituted the sky of this world. It hovered above Yuko, still with a grin on its face. Miniscule pieces of its wings split off, propelled downwards by the wind. It created a hail of deadly ice shrapnel, each shard as big as a person's hand.

Staring down impending, unavoidable doom, the girl somehow felt the power to stand up. Despite the wind pinning her down, she mustered the strength to get back up to her feet. It was the unnatural power granted by her wish, no doubt.

Even though the projectiles were as fast as bullets, Yuko's fists were still faster. There was a deafening cacophony of horrendous noise as countless shards of ice were struck out of the air in their bullet-speed flight, inches away from reaching their target. One after the other, the ice shards were smashed into tiny, harmless particles.

She wasn't even trying to move her hands - they, quite literally, moved on their own. When she felt the agonizing pain of one of those enormous shards of ice penetrating through her shin, she wasn’t able to even flinch - that would have interfered with her movements, so her body did not allow that.

Successful hits continued passing through her guard. One lodged itself into her knee, neighboring the one in the shin. One grazed her by the right shoulder, nearly lopping off the entire limb. About seven went into her torso, one making it all the way through and coming out on the other side, colliding with the ground. Some of her organs were turned to mush, and her ribcage, broken into pieces, was scattered around her insides.

No longer could she breathe, and no longer was there enough blood to transmit oxygen.

Yuko was about to go mad from the sensations of her brand new, undying magical body. She just wouldn’t die, even after receiving a dozen lethal injuries. Her arms continued to defend her head, even as she wanted them to stop. It was as if everything else, including her sanity, was considered to be an acceptable loss.

One of the shards, split into two with a sloppy punch, ricocheted into the right side of her skull. Yuko lost vision in one eye. The brain damage stripped away her sense of pain. Some of her other senses shortly followed, but Yuko could not even tell which. She was left as some kind of an unfeeling automaton only capable of throwing punches, which she aimed at the things recognized as danger, perceiving the world only through the lone remaining eye.

Her wish was to fight, so she was going to fight, whether she liked it or not.

The barrage finally stopped.

Despite being unable to feel her own body, she commanded it to leap. In response to that simple mental order, her body flew up several stories in just a brief moment, like a human bullet. Boosted by the momentum of the jump, her brass knuckles went straight into the Witch’s forehead. The impact was strong enough to make the monster careen backwards in midair, pushed back by the mutilated Magical Girl.

She then repeated the barrage she previously used to survive the hail. As if made of black ice, the monster's head began to crack and shatter under the force of the impacts, getting swiftly chipped away and leaving behind a hole. The Witch had no lips, but its teeth formed into a frown, as if it was unhappy with the outcome. Clear, watery liquid leaked out of the wound.

Yuko started to fall. Her body refused to move. She crashed into the ice below, breaking a dozen more bones. She couldn't feel the pain from that fall, but it still disturbed her. What little remained of her blood leaked out, mixing with the melting floor.

The Witch split into countless snowflakes. The barrier was losing its shape, deforming back into reality.

With no more magic left to support her consciousness, the girl had finally died.

However, for a Magical Girl, death was a negligible thing.

Thank you, Twiceborn, for posting the writeup for me while I fall asleep mid-thread like an idiot.

Was supposed to be a bit of a surprise at the end, so maybe I should've posted it before this thread, hah. Anyway, thank you for reading, anyone.

Also, apologies to anyone annoyed by the Harumi appearance. For what it's worth, my writeups continue to be basically irrelevant despite the reference, so they're still extremely far from necessary reading.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/08/15(Sun)09:28:50 No.37924495 Archived

You let out a slow breath as you watch Ahriman's ashen, blank-faced horde begin to march toward you - their neat, disciplined ranks bringing their weapons to bear. Weapons that, while resembling the kind bestowed upon a Magical Girl upon the moment of her contract, looked infinitely more dangerous, infinitely more threatening than the actual thing.

Because instead of the usual Magical Weaponry that gleamed and glittered and shone with a Magical Girl's resolve - the weapons that Ahriman's army now held in their hands only radiated hate. Hate twisted and turned into an empty, soulless, murderous rage. At least the Golden Weapons, for all the insanity they could put their users through, they still carried within them the vitality of the spirits that dwelled inside them. Not hollowed out to their core and filled with mindless fury, deformed into things that bristled with bloody spikes and bled crimson smoke.

Corrupted. That was the word you were looking for. Corrupted.

Just like everything in this fucking place.

Just like you.

"Let's do this fast," You tell the remnants of your Kill-Team as you pull your teleportation beacon from your Shield and activate it with a slap. An icon of what looks like a shrieking daemon's skull with wings flashing briefly on the display before being replaced by a ten-second countdown. "You guys hold off Ahriman's groupies until Sayaka gets here. Tiny Pete's on his way, let him take the worst of whatever they can throw at you."

Mami tears her eyes away from Ahriman's horde of magic-wielding zombies long enough to turn towards you. "And what about you, Chiaki-san?"

You turn to look at Mami, just in time to avert your gaze from the sudden manifestation of witch-lightning exploding into corrupted reality in front of the advancing horde. Tiny Pete's teleportation flare, no doubt - in a few moments, it'll explode, bringing forth a monstrosity of steel and hate that you've grown to be fond of. A monstrosity that will soon be crushing your enemies underneath its heavy tread.

"I'm going to try and keep a promise for a change," You growl before taking to the air again, your wings trailing cold crimson fire, each feather ablaze and screaming the screams of the damned dead. "Failing that, well, I'm taking Ahriman's fucking skull."

Mami looks up at you for a moment, before smiling as she summons her rifles once more, one in each hand and four ringing her in a protective ring.. "...Go get 'em, Chiaki-san. We're all counting on you."

Wendy, on the other hand, merely gives you a look, before turning back towards the fight about to commence. Her knife - and what appears to be a beam saber of some sort - coming alive in her hands. "...Good hunting, Kong."'

And with that, you soar skyward, the spicy cinnamon-reek of the warp's cursed air filling your nostrils, filling your lungs as your wings bring you above the horde. Your sights set on Ahriman, who seemed to have divined your intention and had taken to the air herself, her own angelic white wings gracefully keeping her aloft with slow, lazy beats. In stark contrast to your demonic, malevolent own.

"MATSUDA!" She screeches at you again, spitting your name like a curse. The staff energized with killing black lightning as she points it toward you. In response, you bring out Muramasa - the weapon growing cold in your grasp - and you blink as the blade catches on fire. Black fire, tinged with purple. Kirika's trademark cackle whispering in your ear.

+ I've always wanted to kill a god, + Her pulse is a metallic hiss of a sword being drawn out of a sheathe. + Present company excepted, I suppose she'll have to do. +

+ What about Oriko? + You ask her, alarmed, and for a moment you feel hesitation war against clear, blunt bloodthirst. The former winning after a brief second's worth of indecision.

+ ...Yes. Yes, Oriko. I remember her. Yes. I remember. + Kirika growls. + You know what I meant, Murderface. We hurt her enough to get Oriko back from her. Yeah. That's what I meant. +

Right. Fine. So long as she understands. You want to make sure you're both on the same page, here--

[TELEPORTATION COMPLETE].

A loud, bassy thump - followed by an ear-splitting whine of discharging plasma and broken witch-lightning - and chaos erupts below as your robot buddy arrives on the scene, blanketing the entire area in a cloud of dust, as well as throwing the rigid formation of Ahriman's Rubricae into disarray. This is then quickly followed by the sudden eruption of what sounds like artillery fire - loud, thunderous, booming. Each discharge enough to send shockwaves of pressure radiating outwards.

[2/3]

>>37924519

And if that's not enough, the distinctive whine of high-caliber twinned gatling guns spooling - and then their unmistakable roar as they open fire - reaches your ears, twinned with the melody of empty brass cartridges raining on cement tile.

Jesus Christ. What the fuck did Misaka bolt onto Tiny Pete? Did 'Mystery Mode' mean turning the ten-foot tall robot into a walking artillery platform? What?

You shake your head, putting the ongoing melee below out of your mind as you focus on Ahriman. The winged sorceress also somewhat taken aback by the violence taking place below the both of you, but visibly steeling herself to finish the task at hand. Two commanders about to kill each other in the skies as their subordinates wage war below in the dust and the dirt.

+ You should have let me kill you, + Ahriman pulses in a jagged, ragged screech - anything shouted here would have immediately been eclipsed by the deafening gunfire below. + Look at what you've become. A mockery of what it is to be a Magical Girl. A blasphemy given a revenant's wings. A nothing. + The staff crackles in her hand. + I'll finish what I started. Here and now, Matsuda, I'll-- +

+ Shut up. + You reply smoothly, pointing the burning length of Muramasa at her. Cutting her off. + No more second chances, Ahriman. I gave you one, and you used it to turn my fucking costume into a cocktail dress. + You bare your teeth at her in an almost feral snarl. + I fucking LIKED my costume the way it was. No more second chances. I'm going to KILL you, and I'm taking Oriko with me. +

>>37924542

A cold smile curls Ahriman's lips, and she spreads her arms wide. + Come, then. Let me see your resolve, Chiaki Matsuda. Let me see how the Angel Slayer Reborn fights.

You are a Magical Girl, and you're going to finish on your terms, one way or another.

How do you proceed?

[]Charge Ahriman, going as fast as your wings will allow. Put the pressure on her with close combat to make her lose her nerve.
[]Hang back and wait for her to make the first move with the intent of dodging it. Then counter at the first opportunity.

You decide to charge her then, seeking to play out this airborne duel up close. Everything you've seen from her mostly involves the snarling Prophet throwing killing energy in the form of beams, projectiles and forked lightning - which means there's a decent chance of her opening with a long-range attack, to try and kill you from afar. You getting right in her face would hopefully get her off-balance long enough for you to do...well, something. Just what that something is, you're not sure what yet. ...You'll think of something for sure. You always do.

And so, wings screaming bloody murder, Muramasa burning in your grasp - you send yourself hurtling towards Ahriman with a single beat of the skeletal pinions jutting out from your shoulderblades. One single beat enough to erase your perception of the world around you as you're propelled through the air in supersonic speeds - no, faster than that, faster than you have words for. Faster than Sayaka, faster than Kharn. Faster than the death that comes from the barrel of a gun.

One single beat of your wings is all it takes.

And it gives you one single split-second to relish the look of surprised dread on Ahriman's face before you strike.

The sound of a Golden Weapon smashing into another is a sound you'll never forget. You've heard it before, back during your sparring session with the Betrayer - but it was, admittedly, drowned out by the roar of chainteeth and gauntlet servos. With neither of those present here, and the tectonic thunder of the gunfire below too muted to even matter, the sound is as clear as day.

It sounds - and there's no other way to put it - like a goddess dying. The death-scream of broken, murdered divinity, clearly audible in the bell-clang of crashing, clashing metal. It is also loud enough to briefly eclipse not only the roar of battle below you, but also the ever-present rumble of the Akashic Realm's turbulent skyscape.

>>37925961

This sound is then repeated, over and over, as you press your attack - cutting and cleaving with Muramasa as Ahriman, to her credit (and to your mounting irritation) not only manages to block your first blow but all the other ones after that, with the consummate skill of a quarterstaff master. The Golden Staff turning into a whirling blur of black-streaked gold in her hands as she deflects the bite of your golden blade.

+ Someone must've trained her, + Kirika muses as Ahriman tries to break away, her wings beating frantically to try and get some breathing room between the both of you. You don't let her, your wings snapping taut and boosting you forward, sending you once more into stabbing range with the Prophet. The curdled sky shaking again as two godlike weapons are smashed into each other once more. + Self-defense with a staff, but nothing of offense - not from her movements at least. You're not going to get the staff out of her hands, though, that much is clear. +

+ Any suggestions, then? + You grit your teeth as a particularly nasty block from Ahriman very nearly jars the Muramasa from your grasp, the sheer force of it coursing up your wrist, arm and shoulder in a painful electric crackle. + Unless it's to chop her fucking head off, which is looking really tempting at the moment but probably not what we want. +

Kirika is silent for a moment, before she replies with a snarl. + Knock her out of the sky. Clip her wings, get her down on the ground, and she won't be able to do anything else. + It's here that she chuckles, low and slow. + Or you could just let me take control. Let me do it. +

What do you do?

[]Go with Kirika's plan. Knock Ahriman out of the sky with any means possible.
[]Allow Kirika to take over. Maybe the crazy bitch has an idea of her own.
[]Stop time with your Shield. You have to get the staff out of her hands somehow.

Don't trust a Kirika that's starting to even forget Oriko.

And using Timestop while looking the way we do is a surefire way to get Pinky to go on a rampage, or the Transcendent One to take direct action.

Noir quest is so convoluted and different from the source material that have no idea what you guys are going to wind up with in the end. its all kind of edge for the edge god at this point.

what I can tell you is that homura became a demon after awakening as a witch most of her facaulties. The only other character to show shreds of humanity from beyond the witches veil was kirika, both cases were borne of love for another. In kirika's case, oriko, in homura's case, madoka..

It's this honest villification and destruction of homura and madoka's connection, communication, and love for one another thats kept me at arms length from these threads.

You decide go with Kirika's plan. It seems doable enough - and admittedly one with the most amount of sense, which is surprising considering who it's coming from. Bring the fight down to the ground and the fight evens out no matter who you're fighting - whether it's an Eversor hopped up on battle stimulants, or a winged Prophet with a Golden Weapon in her hands

It's with a snarl, then, that you crash Muramasa against Ahriman's staff again - but instead of simply drawing it back for another cut, you lock it against its fellow Golden Weapon in a crackling, grinding clinch. Ahriman blinks at this, seemingly stunned - before grinning wildly, all teeth on show. Her eyes going completely black.

+ Your first and last mistake, Chiaki Matsuda. +

Witch-lightning EXPLODES out of the Golden Staff, crimson-edged forks of searing black electricity - and you scream in undeniable, excruciating torment as they make the split-second journey from Golden Weapon to Golden Weapon, the two forming an impromptu conduit with you as the destination. Prickling crimson light bursts inside your clenched-shut eyes as the cursed electricity courses through you, frying - no, COOKING - you from within. The scent of your own burning flesh and hair filling your nostrils, coating your tongue with the acrid taste of smoke.

+ This is how you fall, Angel Slayer. + Ahriman's pulse is a sneering thing, the ardent seething hubris coming off of her in waves. + This is how you fail everyone who's counted on you. Suffer, Matsuda. Suffer as I have--+

Even with your own vision reduced to dull smears of migraine-bright color - even with your body rendered insensate, your nerve endings fried by the spike-sharp torrents of malevolent warp-energy still being forced through it - you manage to grab her by the throat with one gloved hand, while still keeping your grip on Muramasa by the other. Silencing the Prophet as you pull her into a killing embrace.

Take her down. Clip her wings. Bring her down to the fucking ground where she belongs.

"Suffering?" You hear yourself whisper tenderly into her ear. "You don't know the fucking meaning of the word."

Half-blind, half-deaf and half-paralyzed - you twist the both of you into a spiraling dive, before spreading your wings to their fullest extent and beating them once. Exactly once.

And once, as you've found out, is enough.

The ground SLAMS into the both of you with a thundercrack of force, before shattering with a gunshot-loud explosion of tile and cement - and it's no exaggeration that you feel several of your bones break at the moment of impact alone. Even the body of a Magical Girl - even one as fucked up as yours - has its limits, and forcing yourself into a power dive only to crash into solid cement is probably somewhere along the lines of deliberate suicide. Or at least, sheer bloody-minded stupidity.

...In any case, this is probably the worst you've ever felt, ranking as one of the most painful events you've ever had the pleasure of going through. Very nearly outstripping Pinky's little torture session after your ratification.

But as fucked up as you feel, Ahriman - who you'd forced to take the brunt of the fall at the very last moment - should be significantly more fucked up than you. Your vision returning as blurry, crimson-tinged reality, you look to find this a reality: the Prophet is a bloodied, unconscious wreck in the middle of the crater the both of you made in your suicidal crash. Where she had a pair of angelic wings, only one now remained, with the other having snapped off right at the largest joint in the impact.

A fallen angel in all but name, brought down by the Devil herself.

You look down on your own hand. Muramasa is still there - the usually pristine blade now marked with soot and a hundred dents, most likely from being bashed against the staff again and again. Not like it matters, though - you can probably have those buffed out or something. It's not your concern at the moment.

Your concern is the Golden Staff. Still held tightly in Ahriman's - no, Oriko's - hands, the thing looks almost harmless, like some sort of costume prop for Halloween or a stage play. But you know that's never really the case with these fucking things.

What do you do?

Incubator tech only works as well as it does on Meguca because they already gave up their human bodies. It's relatively trivial to regrow a missing limb or whatever on a Meguca because that limb is already an ersatz substitute.

You look down at the downed Prophet for a long moment - before switching Muramasa to your right hand, in order to draw your Desert Eagle from your Shield with your left. As much as you're tempted to just walk on over, kick the staff out of Ahriman's hands and then call it a day, you've just had about enough of shit coming back to bite you in the ass just because you were too eager to get things over with.

No one would blame you for that, though. The suicide dive really worked you over something fucking wicked. Even your wings didn't escape - once vital and taut despite their clear, apparent lack of muscle, they now hang slack against your back, a disconcertingly heavy sensation there.

"Fool me once, shame on you," You grumble underneath your own blood-tinged breath as you advance slowly, your heeled feet crunching crushed gravel and tile with every step. "Fool me twice, I shoot all your fucking limbs off, and send you home in a bag."

Thankfully, even with your slow, careful approach, Ahriman doesn't seem to change her mind on staying as nothing more than an unconscious and bloody heap on the floor when you finally stand over her, the fallen Prophet not moving a single inch. Not even when you use the tip of Muramasa to lever her fingers open, to prise the Golden Staff out of her grasp.

A few moments more, and the pillar of cobalt-flecked gold finally rolls free from the Prophet's body. A Chosen, finally seperated from the Weapon that had twisted her, and brought her into this fate.

A fate that would've seen her dead if it hadn't been you she was fighthing.

Putting the Desert Eagle back into your Shield, you reach over to pick up the staff off the ground. Your fingers briefly curling in hesitation a moment before they touched the smooth, ornately-carved haft - before finally curling around the Golden Weapon to lift it into your grasp.

...

Strange. It...feels like an ordinary stick, really. Or a metal staff. Nothing special, a bit on the heavy side, and of course there's all the gold. Nobody forgets about the fucking gold.

The spirit inside not even bothering to let off a sense of malevolence, or even unease. Absolutely nothing. Zero. If you didn't see or feel this particular tool used to such deadly effect, you'd be hard-pressed to believe if it actually was a Golden Weapon.

But...this is it, then? The fifth Golden Weapon you've collected? Out of a possible fucking twenty?

Just how fucking long did it take, anyway? A month? Two months? Two fucking years? Ten years, probably. Or ten lifetimes. Either way, you feel every single fucking day of it.

Just as you make to shove the Golden Staff into your Shield and contact the others - to tell them that the mission is finally over - is when you hear a voice. A voice choked with pure, depthless anger. A voice that, despite having been made hoarse by too much screaming - or in her case, roaring in bloodthirsty rage - manages to say a name with crystal clarity.

One single name.

"...Akemi. Homura."

And you turn slowly to face your Equerry, Miki Sayaka.

Her face set in shadow, revealing only the pinpricks of crimson light where her eyes should be.

Her once-white cape now a dirty, ragged scarf the color of dried blood.

A sword in her hands - Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie - with the blade seemingly having snapped in half by something else. Despite this, however, you can make out the faint outline of another blade around it, longer and much more menacing, extending beyond the damaged weapon. Something the size of a greatsword, or a claymore.

And the warp is...boiling around her. Twisting in her wake like waves torn apart in a violent storm.

Your best friend's Soul Gem hanging from a chain on her neck.

...Shit.

"...Prepare to defend yourself."

And that's that for today's thread! Let's have the finale tomorrow night!

Thank you for everyone's participation, I apologize for the slower than normal posting due to some annoying things happening in the background, but feedback is always good!

We have some writeups incoming, but I'll be sticking around to answer questions even as they're being posted!

Magical Juggernaut Heather Crunch versus Magical Ascetic Valentina Tenko III: It Takes Two to Tenko

Once more, the Soul Temperer leads me outside the Officio. Rather than transporting me to the Valley of Eight Million Gods (sans ME, HAHA!), she leads me back to the waterfall cave, where I TRIUMPHED over those nefarious Nakajimas after they interrupted my meditation! I sidestep the waterfall at the last second, though. While she has been VERY helpful today, I am NOT getting drenched and wringing my clothes out in front of the Soul Temperer! I do NOT need her LURIDLY LEWD GAZE LEERING at my body -again-!

SPEAKING OF, she has her sword unsheathed and is using it as a torch to illuminate our passage. And she somehow appears to be completely dry as well. “So, Truth-Seeker,” she begins, as we follow the stream deeper into the cave, “what did you learn about love?”

“I have acquired no fewer than SIX different interpretations!” I declare with no small amount of pride. “FIRST! Love is SUPPOSEDLY like a potluck dinner, where everybody IS SUPPOSED TO pitch in, and where SOME may take more than their fair share from others, but is APPARENTLY worth the effort.”

“Interesting.”

“TWO!” I continue, not feeling even the most INSIGNIFICANT IOTA OF EMBARASSMENT about the current topic, “It is something one must INVEST in. THREE! It is a treasure GREATER IN VALUE than ANY OTHER treasures. FOUR! You have to feed it like a FIRE for it to comfort you with LIGHT and WARMTH.” Not that I need any warmth besides the BLAZING FLAMES OF MY WINNING SPIRIT! “FIVE! ‘Love may even bloom on the battlefield’-“

“Yesss!” the Soul Temperer abruptly hisses, punching at the air as though triumphant. Her sudden excitement briefly crashes my train of thought. BUT THE CRUNCH BRAIN IS SOON BACK ON TRACK!

“And the sixth is that it’s like fast food: unhealthy, but it tastes good, so you’ll keep wanting more,” I finish, folding my arms over my chest.

The Soul Temperer nods her head in satisfaction. “Much like the spider, you have opened all eight of your eyes,” she cryptically tells me. Does this have something to do with Berry? “So, Seeker of Enlightenment,” she continues, “What do you see with your eyes full of love?”

“About what I just said?” I ask.

“Indeed,” she replies, suddenly coming to a stop. The Soul Temperer looks at me from over her shoulder, and asks, “What did you learn from them?”

I clear my throat and keep my voice calm and steady, speaking with NO embarrassment when I tell her, “The testimonies I gathered demonstrate that a lot of -other people- seem perfectly content with it.”

“And so?”

...I hope it’s too dark for her to see how red my face is right now. “It is POSSIBLY not as heinous as I had originally envisioned,” I admit begrudgingly.

A slight smile forming on her lips, the Soul Temperer speaks once more. “So will you allow yourself to pursue what your heart desires?”

“NOT WITH SOMEONE LIKE NAKAJIMAAAA!” I shout, my denial echoing through the caves. “I simply CANNOT allow it to happen!“ I stamp my foot as a FIRM SHOWING of how much I DISLIKE this DISCUSSION!

And yet her smile only –grows-! “If she is undesirable,” the Soul Temperer states, “perhaps you should hunt a new crocodile in the river of desire.”

I stare at her for few seconds, trying to process what she said. “What?” I ask her. Is this about Winters now?

“I said you should put your eggs in another basket.”

I shake my head at her. “Once again, I cannot grasp what it is that you are saying.”

The Soul Temperer sighs. “What I mean is,” she explains, speaking slowly and carefully, “have you tried falling in love with somebody else who is not a scoundrel?”

“I WOULD if I COULD!” I growl! I am EXCEEDINGLY UNCOMFORTABLE with this line of questioning! ”Can we discuss this –later-? I want to get to today’s TRAINING already!”

This seemingly snaps the Soul Temperer out of whatever possessed her, as she recalls why we are here. “Very well then.” The Soul Temperer turns around and marches on, leading us through the cavern where I fought with the Nakajimas the other day. It’s remarkably barren, showing no signs of the struggle that took place. “It is interesting that you mentioned trust earlier, Seeker of Enlightenment,” she explains, taking us through a tunnel and into a different, larger chamber. “Today’s trials are focused on cementing and reinforcing the ability to trust other people, such as myself.”

“I don’t know if I –should- be trusting you like that,” I reply, my voice full of SKEPTICISM and UNEASE.

“Your words wound me, Seeker of Enlightenment!” the Soul Temperer exclaims theatrically. “I only want what is best for your development.” She uses the flame from her blade to light a row of torches along the wall, and reveals… an empty room.

“I don’t see how GROPING me is ‘best for my development,’” I mutter. This seems to give her pause, and she lets her shoulders slump.

“…it isn’t,” she admits with a sad sigh, sheathing her weapon. “Though the oak tree has grown mighty from a small sapling, it cannot escape its roots.” The Soul Temperer turns around to face me, though her eyes are downcast as though she cannot bear to look at me. “Nor can it deny how it yearns for the light of the sun.” Clasping her hands together, she seemingly forces herself to look me in the eyes, an earnest, hopeful smile on her face. ”But please believe me when I say that I sincerely wish to help you grow into an even more resplendent soul.”

…Maybe it’s just the lighting, but getting a good look at her now, she kind of looks…

“VERY WELL!” I shout, pushing such thoughts from my mind as I grant her my pardon. “For your aid earlier, I shall extend to you the benefit of the doubt!“

The Soul Temperer's expression brightens immediately. "You are as forgiving as you are radiant, Seeker of Enlightenment!" she exclaims, clasping my hands. "I shall not disappoint you!" And with that rejoicing and sudden invasion of space, she quickly releases me and draws her blade once more. She then stabs it into the ground.

I'm a little disoriented, but I'm –reasonably sure- the ground is actually shaking. The light from the torches flickers and dances as sections of the floor sink down. What it leaves behind is a long, winding platform of stone SURROUNDED by deep pitfalls!

"The journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step," she informs me as the SUDDEN SHIFTING of the earth ceases, prompting her to sheathe her weapon once more. "And your first step is to navigate myself to the end of this course unharmed." The Soul Temperer removes a strip of black cloth from her inventory and covers her eyes with it, tying it at the back to use as a blindfold. "Please take good care of me," she adds.

It takes me a moment to figure out what's going on. This all happened rather quickly, and I'm still reeling from… things.

BUT NOTHING CAN STOP THE CRUNCH TRAIN! "HERE WE GO!" I shout, my voice booming through the cave! FIRMLY GRASPING the Soul Temperer's shoulders, I PROPEL her forward onto the small walkway!

…Well, THAT particular trust building exercise was an outright DISASTER.

Not MY attempt at the navigation of the maze, mind. I ACED that in SPITE of its twists and turns! No, it was HER run where things went WRONG! I should have suspected as much when she REFUSED to take off the blindfold! I SCREAMED at her to stop, or to at LEAST put me down instead of carrying me like a newlywed, but SHE DID NOT LISTEN!

And her breasts kept smacking me in the face, too! I didn't even realize she –had- breasts!

AND SO, after much apologizing from the Soul Temperer, we return to her room once more. There, she has us sit at the table again. "For this next exercise," she says, "I shall tell you two truths about myself, and one falsehood." She gives a small smile. "You must guess which one is false."

In spite of what happened earlier, I'm inclined to give her another chance. My mood from before has improved yet again. Maybe it's because of this room. I rather like sitting in this room; seeing weapons on the walls pleases my sense of aesthetics.

It has absolutely nothing to do with the Soul Temperer herself.

"VERY WELL!" I concede. "Let us begin!"

Humming a little to herself before she speaks, the Soul Temperer starts us off: “I meditate for at least half an hour every day. I like girls like you who show great spirit. I eat my meat well-done.”

I snort. “OBVIOUSLY it’s the last one!” I declare. What kind of Eversor takes their meat well done?

“Correct, Truth-Seeker!” she says, beaming at me. “Now you tell me two truths and one lie about yourself.”

Oh, is that how this works? HMM… After a moment of musing, I present my statement to her: “I’ve never fought using an axe or a pole-arm. My favorite songs are STIRRING and HEROIC! And, uh… I, too, like my meat well done.“

“It is the last one that is untrue,” she answers with certainty.

“Indeed!”

“Now I’ll go again,” the Soul Temperer says, resting her elbows on the table. “I enjoy light reading and ballroom dancing. Black is my favorite color. I am extremely proficient at making dishes from fruit.”

I have to THINK about this one. She -seems- like she’d enjoy doing the first, and does appear to have some affinity for fruit. “Is it the second one?” I query.

“Right again, Seeker of Wisdom,” she praises me, which makes me smile. It almost –feels- like I am closer to understanding her. “It’s your turn again.”

“I have fled from battles with witches before,” I begin. “I have no fewer than TWENTY different subscriptions to magazines and journals on armaments, armor, and warfare. And I have an authentic M1 Garand automatic rifle.”

“I have to say that it’s the first one,” the Soul Temperer astutely answers.

“CORRECT! I have NEVER run from a battle against a witch!” I boast, puffing up with pride!

“How brave!” she cheers, resting her chin on her hands. “Now then, I’ve never gone on a real date before, though I wouldn’t mind trying one. I spent a long time wandering alone in exile. And I don’t put out on the first date.”

That’s more personal than I expected her to tell me. And it’s more difficult than the previous questions. I have no doubt that the last one is true – no offense intended – but for that to be true, then the first would have to be false, right? Then again, I was always stood up, so I don’t personally know. “The first one is false,” I tell her.

The Soul Temperer frowns. “Incorrect, Seeker of Enlightenment,” she explains. “It was the last one.”

Oh. Well. Okay then.

“My turn,” I say, BREAKING the sudden, awkward silence that set in. “I enjoy playing with robot action figures, watching sentai shows and reading about the history of war in my spare time. I am –naturally- bilingual. I have met with people from the First.”

“The first one?” she queries, uncertain.

“NAY! It is, in fact, the last one!” I shout in response.

“Truly? It is their loss,” the Soul Temperer responds. I acknowledge the TRUTHFULLNESS of such a statement by vigorously nodding.

“Let’s see,” she continues, leaning forward slightly. “I once replaced someone’s food with acrylic paints. I once spent a day in jail after being caught speeding on the way to an operation. My preferences include both domination –and- submission.”

“…I am hoping it is the last one,” I bluntly tell her, hoping she notices my discomfort.

“Also incorrect,” she replies, though she doesn’t look especially displeased. “I did pull such a stunt in the past, and I am very flexible, if you find that appealing in a partner.”

Okay, I’m getting seriously creeped out right now. “Uh, I never held the position of squad leader for very long. I always called my sword the Eversword. And I like having my personal boundaries RESPECTED.”

“It feels like the first one is the least worthy of you,” she says, failing to move back and give me room.

“And yet it’s INCORRECT,” I yell, sliding back a little. “I only named my weapon recently after a fit of inspiration.” And you’re NOT giving me my space at ALL, Soul Temperer!

“My turn,” she… purrs, her face coming closer and closer, and my face flushes redder and redder. “I have had hundreds of carnal conquests. I am afraid of getting what I want. And I really, -really- like you, Truth-Seeker.”

“FIRST!” I shout, as though putting EMPHASIS on it would FORCE it to be the ACTUAL TRUTH!

It FAILS TO WORK! “That is not correct. The second one is the lie.” She smiles a most SHAMEFUL smile before she gets RIGHT IN MY FACE, her hair brushing against my nose and hot breath tickling my cheek. “I might add that, through those hundreds of experiences, I have learned very much in the way of-”

I SCRAMBLE back away from her, my heart racing and my entire body on FIRE! “I WANT TO KEEP DOING THIS, THIS EXERCISE IS MAKING ME –EXTREMELY- UNCOMFORTABLE, AND I -DON’T- WANT TO KEEP DOING THIS!” I SCREAM at the possessed woman in an attempt to return her to her senses. I grab at my soul gem in warning that if she does NOT back off, I will FORCE her to stop this!

Her face falls flat as realization dawns. “…Oh,” she murmurs quietly. Finally, FINALLY she shows some sign of SHAME and REGRET for trying to RAVISH me!

I pick myself up and dust myself off. “I think that’s enough for today,” I state, wiping the sweat off my brow.

The Soul Temperer pouts and protests, “But I was going to tie your arm to mine for-“

“NO!” I exclaim, putting my foot down! “I won’t have any more of this until you get a hold of yourself!”

Moving away from the table, the Soul Temperer walks toward me and removes her hat. Clutching it to her chest, she prostrates herself on the ground. “A thousand pardons, Truth-Seeker,” she says. “Perhaps I was not ready to seek bonding activities from a book on marriage.”

I give the last sentence as much thought as I normally give to her parables. “Why did you think that would work?” I inquire in exasperation.

“It should have,” she insists, still prone on the ground. “And it would have, if I had the restraint of a squirrel preparing for winter.” She looks up at me, eyes shining with tears. “I was too eager.”

…I have to resist the urge to pat her on the head and tell her everything is okay. Instead, I tell her: “Very well, I magnanimously extend my forgiveness to you. We can train again some other time.”

This brings a smile back to her face. “Yes. Yes, we can try again,” she says, almost like she’s talking to herself. “I can be patient, now that there are no obstacles in my path.”

…After that cryptic response, I bid her farewell.

No matter what, we should just do a mea culpa on Sayaka.

Her anger is justified. Just parry her attacks and keep trying to calm her down.

The first thing I do upon my departure is go into town. I have several ERRANDS to run, after all. And what better opportunity is there to do so than before actually running? This quaint little town had better be ready for the CRUNCH TRAIN'S ARRIVAL!

I head out to buy some new clothes and shoes. After I finish with that, I go off to the dry cleaners to drop off the maid uniform. And THEN I do my running. Even if I am in civilian form, I KNOW, with ABSOLUTE CERTAINTY, that I can EFFORTLESSLY do it! Hell, I could do TWICE that much! I must PUSH myself EVEN FURTHER THAN THAT!

Fired up, I break into a sprint!

I realize that I must give the Soul Temperer credit; I DO feel more invigorated than I was this morning. For all her undesirable behavior today, she has still somehow managed to lift my spirits. Perhaps I was too harsh towards her.

…Okay, only a little bit too harsh. I had to draw the line SOMEWHERE, and that SOMEWHERE is between her face and mine.

And so, eventually, the day draws to a close, and night falls.

BUT HEATHER CRUNCH STILL STANDS! SUCK ON THAT, NATURRRRRE! HAHA!

And BECAUSE I am doing so well, I manage to both finish my runs AND extol my virtues to the LESSER stars in the night sky!

Yes, I have been EXCEPTIONALLY PRODUCTIVE today, to make up for how LETHARGIC I was before! I even worked up a good sweat, too. NOT the unwanted sweat of discomfort, but the GLORIOUS sweat of EFFORT and HARD WORK! THE SWEAT OF CHAMPIONS!

THIS is how I return to my housing. NOT moping around because of loneliness! NOT dragging myself along because I'd been violated! No, I return CONFIDENT and VICTORIOUS! I have SEIZED THE DAY and then SUPLEXED IT INTO SUBMISSION!

I turn the key and throw open the door – going through the wall is sorely tempting, though – and finally, FINALLY have time to myself here without having to worry about DESPAIR or VOICES or what have you!

You're not doing that well at all, said voice grumbles inside my mind. I IGNORE IIIIIIT!

Now, I should make dinner. A GRAND dinner- no, a FEAST! A FEAST for the return of my INDOMITABLE SPIRIT! And I, Heather Crunch, shall assemble such a feast BY MY OWN TWO HANDS, as I can't rely on someone else to do it like-

"H-heyyy, you're back!"

-Nakajima?!

"So, I finally got a chance to look over your report."

"Mm?"

"Don't talk with your mouth full, Eleanor."

"...Sorry."

"Just nod your head next time. Anyway! The reason you decided to work here is because, and I quote, '[you] wanted to open a candy shop'. Is that correct?"

-nod-

"Am I right in assuming that you have no experience with management, finances, or the other responsibilities necessary for running a small business?"

-nod-

"Good! I was about to get rid of these since I don't need them anymore, but I feel that even if they're a bit outdated, they should be a humong- I mean tremendous asset to you!"

"..."

"Ta-dah! I'm entrusting you with my old textbooks! They're not as good as work experience, but reading these should help prepare you for the real deal!"

"Textbooks?"

"What's wrong?"

"Well, I have to be honest. Textbooks aren't something that I wanted."

"Oh."

"...but they sound like something that I needed. So... thanks. Thanks a lot for giving me these."

"Hmm. Don't thank me just yet. You still have to deal with that Vanus trance-"

"Um..."

"Don't interrupt me, please! You have to deal with that Vanus trance and actually work behind the counter!"

-nod-

"Now then, you were saying?"

"I was told that something was being done about it. That the Warmaster was planning something to deal with that."

"Oh. Well, in that case, you're welcome!"

"Huh?"

"I'll take that thanks now, Eleanor."

"...heh."

"Well! Now that your shift's up and your lunch is finished, you're dismissed for today."

"Thanks for that, too, by the way!"

"Goodbye, then!"

"Goodbye!"

"Don't count on a free lunch in the future!

"I won't."

It might be similar to how "Akemi Homura" came into being during the mission. It's probably not the genuine article, but with all the Akashic realm shenanigans and universal links to the original interacting with grief and weird magic shit, it might be close enough.

The question now, is whether we can beat and talk enough sense into Sayaka to get our Equerry back and force Ultra Mad Blueberry back into the ether.

No. We couldn´t possibly predict the result of the battle between red culexus and Kyoko, but considering the damage Kyoko has suffered, we are responsible for leaving her to fight alone. If Sayaka is searching for a culprit, then those are the red culexus and us. We knew it was dangerous to leave Kyoko alone, but did it either way

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/09/15(Mon)09:51:49 No.37948915 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just managed to obtain your fifth Golden Weapon by grabbing its owner in midair and then wrenching the both of you into a screaming, suicidal power dive. One that smashed you and your main objective through ten floors of solid reinforced concrete, with the eleventh finally arresting your fall (and being reduced to a shattered, cratered ruin underneath you).

This bad idea of yours had its downsides, of course, such as how every bone in your body feels like they've been broken in several different places, and how your mouth can't seem to stop filling up with your own blood, leaking down your lips and chin with your every breath - but hey, it worked. It knocked Ahriman unconscious, rendering her senseless enough and harmless enough for you to remove the Golden Staff from her possession. It also had the added bonus of not killing Ahriman outright, putting you a step closer to keeping your promise to your best friend.

And that should have been that, as far as you were concerned. Sure, there were loose ends to tie up - like the remnants of Ahriman's Rubricae stillfighting it out with Mami, Wendy and Tiny Pete up top - but with your main objective secured and your secondary objective unconscious at your feet, this operation should've been done and over with.

You'll worry about the wings and your costume later - you just want to get out of this fucking nightmare and go home. Back to the comfortable confines of your own apartment. Back to the seclusion of your own room and a bottle of Kong, and maybe some painkillers just to spice it up some.

Back to Midori.

But fate, it seemed, had other ideas. Instead of looking at everything you've been put through and all that you've done and simply just allowing you to get your bruised and battered self home - it instead sends its sneering, laughing refusal in the form of your Equerry. Your Equerry, who seems to have been emotionally compromised to the point that she's dangerously close to Witching Out, and has to put herself in some sort of Terminator-like trance to keep herself together. The good thing about that, evidently, is she's not turning into an eldritchian nightmare anytime soon.

The bad thing about it is somehow, it's making her think you're someone you're not, and now she wants to kill you.

"Akemi Homura." She'd said then. Not growled, not snarled in the usual, venomous way that Sayaka normally says your name. No emotion whatsoever except a cold fury. "Prepare to defend yourself."

And so, with your body feeling like it's moments away from giving out - your wings a dead weight against your back, limp and lifeless - and blood continuing to leak down the corners of your mouth, you watch as grim finality shines in the eyes of your approaching Equerry. Her blade gleaming with unholy light as she brings it up in a slow salute. Pressing the flat against her forehead while kissing the hilt. A knightly salute, made in saintly reverence.

This is what fate looks like when it's fucking with you.

...No. This is what fate looks like when it's fucking you in the ass.

What do you do?

Appeal to her dildo nature. Full drill sergeant! "EQUERRY! Why in the ever-living FUCK are you brandishing a weapon at your WARMASTER? If you want to run me through that's FINE, but you'll do it at headquarters, during a spar, and NOT IN THE MIDDLE OF A MISSION, you WEEPING AMATEUR!"

Get Mami to yell at her too if that don't work.

Finally, if she keeps coming, rely on Kirika, with the logic "Your cute disciple needs help, and now you OWE ME. Cut to disable, leaving the red gem around her neck intact."

It's worth asking. But the energy swirling around Sayaka may be just as baffling to a teleporter as Ahriman's magical stuff.

Might want to teleport Oriko out first as priority since she's just a regular non magical person. For Sayaka, we may want to wait until she's calmed down or has the sense to relinquish Kyouko first, else she might start raging in the middle of the Officio.

You decide to try and talk Sayaka out of it. Right now, in the state you're in, you're in no shape to fight. You doubt you can even shoot your own Desert Eagle without it bucking out of your hands and into your face in no less than two shots. ...Running's no good either, unless you plan on limping or crawling away. Flying would've been nice, except your wings seem to be content in just lying slack against your bare back, useless and limp and good for nothing else.

So you stand your ground, and try to talk your way out of a hole you've dug yourself into.

"Akemi Homura?" You repeat the name, just as Sayaka had uttered it, while twisting your features to convey what you hoped look like irritated confusion. You allow a moment to pass before frowning fully. "...Who the fuck is that? My name, if you've forgotten, Equerry..."

You let another moment pass, while turning to the side to spit blood on the broken floor. The black glob of liquid hitting the concrete with an acidic hiss. Turning back to the Eversor, you finish your sentence, forcing yourself to stand up straight despite your own knees feeling like they've just been blown out by your own gun. Your back feeling like it's the victim of early-onset osteoarthritis, while being made out of needles..

"...is Chiaki Matsuda."

Sayaka stops in her tracks here, her glowing crimson eyes narrowing. "No. Your name...your true name is Akemi Homura. I know. I remember. I've never..." She pauses to take a breath here, and you hear the echo of a pounding surf in her exhalation. The sharp scent of seawater momentarily distracting you from the coppery stench of your own blood. "...I've never forgotten."

[1/2]

>> ☐ Deculture 02/09/15(Mon)11:17:13 No.37949918

She points her sword at you, the transparent blade shining with a murderous light. "I looked for you, traitor. As Madoka suffered in your heresy - I hunted for you, day and night. And always your hordes of Witches and cultists blocked my way. Always they died so that you might live."

Her grip tightens on the sword's handle with a creak of glove-silk, before slowly drawing the weapon to the side, point towards the floor. Continuing her inexorable, implacable advance towards you again.

"I've never stopped searching for you, Homura. Not through all these long years. Now my search is over, and I can finally settle things between us."

And here - as the soul gem of your best friend begins to flash in time with your own racing heartbeat, the bauble hanging from your Equerry's neck from a chain like an oversized pendant - you take a step back as Sayaka raises her sword in a double-handed grip, seeking to cleave you from head to groin with an overhead chop. An executioner's blow.

"I get to save the world from you - like the fucking hero I'm supposed to be."

Talking, obviously, didn't work.

How do you react?

She's really going to do this, then? You can't help but laugh weakly here, your own blood stringing from your teeth as you stare up at the blade about to put you out of your misery. She's actually going to try and kill you while you're in this kind of shape? What the fuck is so heroic about that?

What the fuck is so heroic about killing someone who can't even fight back?

No snarled retort. No sneering riposte. Not even a denial or an offended huff. Sayaka - the Sayaka you've grown to depend upon as your Equerry - would have called you a hypocrite at least.

Nothing but stark, guarded silence as she brings her sword down with the force of a god splitting the earth in two. All just to murder you where you stand.

It would've done the job, with how much force she put into that strike. That and then some. And you probably wouldn't have suffered much. You were tempted to, to be perfectly honest - a part of you wanted to just be done with all this bullshit.

Fortunately - or unfortunately - a bigger part of you wanted to live, and had forced your entire body to throw itself to the side just in time to avoid the oncoming blade. Choosing a hard fall into some jagged tiles and rock shards instead of a terminal case of splitting headache. Ignoring the fresh cuts you're accumulating on your bare shoulders, arms and face as you scramble back up to your feet, wounds that will form your new collection of scars if you somehow manage to live through this.

And you will. You're not dying here. Not like this. Not after everything.

And certainly not while looking like a two-bit hussy during shore leave.

+ Alright, stooges, time for twenty questions, + You pulse to the gun in your hand as you force yourself to keep moving, keeping one eye on Sayaka as she easily pulls her sword out of the gaping canyon she'd just carved into the concrete floor. The transparent blade cutting through the rock like butter. + Any of you went through this before? What's she talking about? And more importantly, how the fuck do I get her from murderous bitch mode to just normal stick-up-her-ass bitch mode? +

Silence. Total silence. No other voice in your head speaking except your own frantic, panicked thoughts, and for a moment you wonder if they had ever been there in the first place. If it hadn't been just you talking to yourself.

Then--

+ Matsuda-san! + A breathy voice, just as panicked as yours, finally speaks up. It's Braids! + I'm sorry! The other two, they've been trying to stop me from talking to you! They think you're the Transcendent One, that you've killed the Nameless One somehow and swallowed her soul to walk in her flesh! +

W-what? But you're not--

+ Yes, I know! That's what I told them how silly that sounds! They still didn't listen, so I pushed their mirrors over and they can't talk for the moment! It's just me for now! +

...Right. Okay. At least you have someone. Not as good, but definitely not bad either. Anyway, what do you do? How do you get out of this? What's going on with Sayaka?

+ ...Thanks for the vote of confidence, Matsuda-san. + There's a brief note of irritation here, before it's washed away by urgency. + A-anyway, um! If I'm guessing correctly, Sayaka-chan is...well, she's probably remembering her memories as The First Knight, now! The Knight who swore to always stand by the Blessed Lady's side, to protect her from the darkness of the world - and the first to realize the Shieldmaiden's treachery! + You hear her swallow here. + T-that's us, Matsuda-san, if you didn't get it-- +

Yes, yes, you know all about that Shieldmaiden bullshit, you can't help but pulse back with your own irritation. What do you need to do to get Sayaka back? The real Sayaka, not this...super-dildo on fucking steroids!

+...I can argue that this is the real Sayaka now, Matsuda-san, as she was always meant to be, + Braids breathlessly pulses back. + But...but if I know Sayaka-san, there are two ways to bring her back. +

Alright, what are those, then?

+ The first one is to give her a strong enough shock that she has no choice but to shut down. Just pretend that you're surrendering, a-and that you want her to be your second for your, um, honorable discharge. + Her voice hesitating at the polite euphemism for suicide. + Then, when she's about to cut your head off, use the gun to shoot off her sword hand. That should do it. +

...And what's the second one?

Braids pauses here, but you can hear her gasp for breath. She probably isn't used to talking this much this fast. + Music, + She finally says. + It's the only other constant of Sayaka-san I can think of. Music'll bring her back, but it has to be something she hates. +

...Music? Fucking music? What, you have to sing her back into being normal? This isn't some fucking third-rate anime--

+ LISTEN TO ME! + Braids shouts into your mind, nearly making you trip as you scramble to avoid another beheading cut. + Stop telling people that their advice is stupid! You asked me, I'm telling you! If you don't like it, then you can just f-fuh...fuuh... + She stumbles over the curse, before managing to spit something else out with equal venom. + THEN YOU CAN JUST ASK SOMEONE ELSE! +

And just like that, you feel her presence leave you. Your Desert Eagle once more reduced to a simple gun, albeit one that's very good at putting holes in people.

What do you do?

[]Do the thing where you shoot off Sayaka's sword hand.
[]Do the thing where you use music to bring her back.
[]There must be some other way!

"Get back here, traitor." Sayaka calls out to you in a voice as cold as frost, as cold as the blade-born death it promised. "Get back here and suffer for your treachery. You only prolong the inevitable by running." Her steps, unhurried and deliberate, echo throughout the devastated floor with a bell-toll's finality. "No one runs from justice."

No, but you can probably run long enough to think of something stupid to get justice off your tracks, you grumble to yourself as you bring out your teleport beacon from your inventory, slapping it back onto your wrist. And what you've thought up might be stupid enough to work.

But if it doesn't, well...it'd be a hell of a way to die.

+ Ashford? + You send out a pulse skyward, keeping your gun aimed at Sayaka's slowly approaching form, the stalking knight holding her broadsword en garde as she continues to walk closer. + Ashford? Can you hear me? How's the situation up there? +

+ Warmaster? + Rea's pulsed reply is a rather faint one - either by inexperience with this kind of communication or simply because of distance, you're not sure. + Warmaster, we've been trying to get in touch with you for nearly an hour now. Where are you? What about the main objective? Are you--"

+ Never mind that now, + You pulse hurriedly as you fire off a couple of shots at your pursuer, hoping to at least dissuade her from coming closer - but Sayaka instead swats each shot away with the near-invisible blade of her sword, each round slapped hard enough that you swore they burst into fragments at the impact. + Is it possible for you to get to my position? How's the fighting over there? +

A moment's silence, before Rea returns, her pulse completely calm, placid. Completely at odds to what she's talking about.

+ Nothing we can't handle, Warmaster. The loadout you chose for Tiny Pete was surprisingly and devastatingly effective for the threat you summoned us for. The first few minutes alone we eliminated half of the enemy hostiles. There's little less than a quarter left to take care of, with Miss Tomoe and Miss Cooldown mopping up the rest. + It's hear that you detect a faint hint of displeasure from the Magical Girl-turned-pilot. + They even told me to stand down and let them finish off the others. ...Miss Tomoe in particular seems really eager to work off some stress.+

...Hnh. Well, That's something, at least. That means you can use Rea for what you have in mind, then.

+ ...What are you planning, Warmaster? + Rea asks suddenly. + And where is Miss Sayaka? Miss Mami told me that she'd be joining the skirmish earlier, but she never showed up...+

You shake your head here, just before scrambling away before the Eversor in question gets a bit too close for comfort. Her blade chopping off a bit more of your hair as you desperately duck to avoid getting the rest of you cleaved away. + Later, later! One more thing, does Tiny Pete have some sort of music system? And does he have any idol music in his playlist?! +

Another pause, and then, a hesitating reply. +...Yes, Warmaster, he has one. Misaka seems to have inloaded it along with his targeting programs. + A sigh. + ...And upon checking, yes, Tiny Pete does have idol music in his playlist. A couple of Kirishima Ruri's recent albums, which I've always felt are her weakest ones to date, she's being influenced too much by western music in these...+

Hah. That works perfectly.

+ Just get to my location as fast as you can, and get ready to play one of the tracks - any track - at full volume on my signal. As loud as Tiny Pete's systems can manage it. + You pulse your instructions to your robot buddy's pilot just as you give your teleportation beacon another slap, forcing it to activate. + Confirm if you understand instructions and have a lock on my position. +

Another pause, before Rea replies. + Confirmed, Warmaster. On both counts. + You sense the diminutive Vindicare's hesitation once again, but it's quickly buried underneath what seems like her trust in you - her trust in you knowing what you're doing. + ETA ten seconds. Please be warned, I'll be coming in hot. +

You snap your attention back to Sayaka long enough to avoid another disemboweling cut, and you spit curses as you force your bruised, battered body to roll to the implacable knight's flank, scrambling to your feet frantically and then sending a few rounds at her direction once you're clear. Your shots - aimed to make debilitating wounds on any magical recipient - are once again swatted away like flies, made insignificant by a transparent blade burning with holy light.

"Stop jumping around." The blue-haired Eversor growls now, her frustration now clear upon her face. "Either try to kill me or receive your punishment, either one will be preferable to your clumsy, pathetic attempts at dodging." She scrapes the tip of her blade against the cement floor as if to make a point, creating a long, inch-deep furrow that briefly glows red before cooling into a charcoal-black scar.

It's been working so far, hasn't it? You shout back as you continue to circle around her, matching her slow pace while keeping your distance. But since she's got that big of a fucking hard-on for killing you, then she probably wouldn't mind if you asked her something, yeah?

"...Ask. But do not think you will delay your death by baiting me into conversation." Sayaka narrows her eyes at you. "I will still kill you, answer or no."

Fine. Fucking jackass. You shake your head here, before glaring at her. Say she does manage to kill you. What next for her, then? If you're dead, what else is there for the big fucking Hero of Justice?

Sayaka's answer is clear, concise, and completly untainted of doubt.

"I continue to keep watch on this world, to keep it safe from the next demon looking to rule over it." The Eversor glances down at the greatsword in her hand, a small smile on her face. When she looks up at you, the smile is stil there, but a bit more sharper. "Only in death does duty end. And duty...Duty is its own reward."

...Jesus. That's...that's another fucking kind of dildo. Super-dildo. Mega-dildo. Hyper fucking dildo.

You didn't think there was a level of dildo beyond yours, actually. And now you know that isn't the case at all.

Just as you open your mouth to speak - it's here that something huge, heavy and BRISTLING with weaponry smashes through the ceiling with a loud, deafening, bestial roar. The stink of jet fuel and prometheum thick in the air as Tiny Pete makes its entrance on loud, overburdened, over-revved jump pack engines.

And just as Sayaka whirls to meet this new foe that you leap up and charge in her direction - avoiding the reflexive beheading cut by mere millimeters as you rush Sayaka's legs. You feel a whoof of expelled air as your shoulder smacks against her abdomen, driving all wind from her lungs, stunning her long enough to get her down on the ground.

"TRAITOR--" The Eversor wheezes, but you shove your elbow against her neck while driving your knee against her sword hand. Keeping her down long enough for you yourself to scream at the approaching giant for help.

It's a miracle that Rea found it in herself to obey without asking why. Seeing you in your unfamiliar getup should have at least raised some questions, but the Vindicare moved without another word, making the armored titan stomp over to where you'd pinned Sayaka down - and added its own crushing weight to yours. Keeping the now-trashing Eversor in place with the Terminator's huge, thickly-armored hands.

"Now?" Tiny Pete's tusked helm, with its eyeslits glowing with hellfire, turns towards you in an almost quizzical gesture. The voice speaking from its vox-speakers Rea's own, a complete contrast from the hulking behemoth. A giant monster talking with the voice of a child.

You scramble out of the tangle of limbs, retreat a safe distance away, before clamping your hands over your ears.

And then, you nod.

And for what seems like the third time today, the skyscraper is shaken to its foundations.

Not by an explosion, or a gigantic goat-dildo manifesting and then landing hard enough to crash through a couple dozen floors - but by a cannon-loud blast of Japanese synth-idol pop.

Briefly eclipsed by another sound that would erupt half a minute later - a roar of unearthly pain too ripe, too tormented to ever come from something human.

A sound you'd be laughing at the memory of for months to come.

Oh neat, Cooldown. Long time no see. I think. I'm bad with time. Anyway:

1. Reading your write-ups... who's this "Eve" Wendy talks to; the young girl who's simply 'tough'? A meguca? An expy character, and if who, who's she based on? The list of people Wendy gets along with has to be short; I'm curious about her now. ~~"I haven't worked out her character beyond that cameo" is a legitimate answer, of course.~~

2. How about V? I swear to god I recognize the character from somewhere but I can't even begin to place it. She's not... that V, is she? Or, god forbid... /v/?

3. What's Santa Destroy like, just to walk through it? Is it Roanapur-on-the-West-Coast or more like if-every-stereotype-Japanese-people-fear-about-the-US-was-true?

1. Originally Eve was supposed to be a major character and kind of a morality pet/imouto, but it never really went anywhere - she's based on Ib from the RPG Maker horror game...Ib, the joke being that everyone that appeared in Witch aside from Annie/Alice herself was from an RPG Maker horror game. She's since been picked up by Steph as the protagonist for Five Red Petals.

2. V, Viola, was originally based on the protagonist for Witch's House/Majo no Ie if you're a weeb, but she's strayed really far from the source material by now. She was also supposed to be Wendy's partner/a lot more important, but she sort of got shuffled aside in favor of Amber. Poor thing.

3. Depends on where you go? It's mostly the latter, with a heavy mix of Los Angeles. I wouldn't say it's identical to the Santa Destroy from No More Heroes (it's actually populated, for one) but it's fairly close. It has its high-end districts (where you'd find Nicole's penthouse, the Eighth and its buildings, and most probably the Cooldown Estate and the Helms Center, Wendy's primary hangouts from ages 1-13), its low-end districts (which are basically your violent slums), its own notable China and Japantown-like areas, and basically all of them are occasionally plagued with random, explosive violence because a lot of the people in Santa Destroy are unwell and an unusual number of them are assassins, meguca, gangsters, or some combination thereof.

Ideally there'll be a larger timeskip down the line a little ways where she could potentially drastically improve.

More immediately, Chiaki could go out of her way to train her, or maybe ask someone else to do it.

If handled carefully assigning Wendy to train her would potentially be a very good move - they're the same class and use similar weaponry.

I think the main issue with Midori is that her powerset doesn't really seem to mesh real well with the type of dangerous situations that we find ourselves in. It's certainly a problem that'll require a creative solution. Minor powers = extremely efficient cosmetic illusions that can withstand most forms of scrutiny, Major power = large area perception filter that require a lot of magic to break.

Midori did manage to disable Chiaki while she was being affected by it. Perhaps she has a certain flexibility to her powers that we haven't fully explored yet.

My understanding is that Midori creates illusions that are based on what the person wants to or expects to see. It's -really- good for standard Callidus work, especially against people that aren't expecting it.

It probably wouldn't hold up well against another Callidus, or someone paranoid and with the magic to break it unless she got some intensive training in its use, too - what she has now is mostly what she was able to figure out on her own, with her Officio just sort of throwing her out to do whatever instead of helping her develop it.

True, and Chiaki was rendered practically comatose in the first few threads of MGNQ when she was affected by Midori's illusion. Even when she wanted to wake up, she couldn't and she wasn't even able to distinguish her dream from being awake. While Midori might not be able to go full Professor X, this may indicate that she could possibly develop powers that affect a person's brain or mental state.

I doubt that she could fire mind bullets or create psychic arm-blades, but being able to put people to sleep or make their brain think that they are asleep (causing paralysis or severe lack of coordination and grace) is a pretty useful ability in a fight.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/18/15(Wed)07:08:25 No.38148484 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you've just managed to bring your Equerry back from the brink through the power of fucking music.

Yeah. That happened.

And you still can't believe it worked, even if the evidence is right before your eyes, roaring and cursing and punching at the brutally-tusked and spiked automaton holding her down. A complete and total reversal from the cold, murderous knight that had cut through the air with a stare burning with righteous fury and a sword burning with holy light. Snarling oath after oath about how it was her duty to kill you, and how such a murder would make the entire world magically better for everyone.

...Hnh. Thinking about it, that doesn't really sound all that different from the Sayaka you know. Just less of the seething, raging bitch with the stick up her ass and more of a justice-obsessed monomaniac with an unhealthy appetite for sanctimonious bloodshed.

>> ☐ Deculture 02/18/15(Wed)07:09:36 No.38148494

"JESUS FUCKING CHRIST, MURDERFACE!" The blue-haired Eversor roars as she finally manages to get back onto her feet, after you've stopped laughing long enough to tell the tiny Vindicare inside Tiny Pete to release your Equerry. "JUST WHAT THE EVERLIVING -FUCK- WHERE YOU TRYING TO DO, HUH?!" She stomps over to you, ragged and bloody and fuming, and you can't help but laugh harder as she shoves you backwards, nearly making you fall flat on your ass.

"YOU NEARLY FUCKING BLEW OUT MY FUCKING EARDRUMS! AND IT WASN'T EVEN A GOOD SONG, YOU FILTHY FUCKING CASUAL!" Sayaka shoves you again, harder this time, her face red with a die-hard fan's fury - and this time you do end up on your ass, but you're still too busy giggling to even care. "OF ALL OF RURI-SAMA'S FUCKING ALBUMS, YOU HAD TO PICK WHERE SHE WAS NOT ONLY AUTOTUNED TO SHIT, BUT ALSO WHEN HER ORIGINAL SONGWRITER WAS ON STRIKE, AND ALL SHE HAD TO SING ABOUT WAS EATING FUCKING CAKE, AND...and..."

And then, as if suddenly running out of gas at the final lap, the souped-up hypercar with the twin turbo bitching engine that is your Equerry seems to slow, stumble and then crash into a screeching halt in her tirade. Her blue eyes widening as realization - no, recognition - starts to slowly dawn upon her. Recognizing just where the both of you are. Remembering just what the both of you were supposed to be doing.

Seeing, for what it seems like the first time - Ahriman's unconscious form, lying senseless and bleeding in the middle of an impact crater.

"...Murderface?" Sayaka speaks after what seems like an eternity, her voice now low. Hesitant. "What...what just happened? All I remember was recovering Kyoko's Soul Gem, and then everything going black, and then..." She reaches up with a gloved hand, and it's with a soft clinking noise that her fingers curl over the glowing crimson bauble hanging from her neck. "...No, I can't fucking remember. It's all bits and...and pieces. I can't form a clear picture of it, but I know something happened. I..."

She whirls towards you, her eyes wide, her face pale as a sheet underneath the dried streaks of grime and blood. "...Christ, I...I didn't do anything stupid, did I, Murderface? Tell me I didn't fuck everything up, tell me I didn't compromise the mission-- "

How do you respond?

I figured I'd wait until after the voting period was over to post this, so I don't end up derailing things too badly.

Udonge recently made a MGNQ-themed variation of Cards Against Humanity to play using NodeJS.

To create a game just click on "Create Game" in the black bar at the top.
The game needs four players to start, and it's first to five points to win. You can start a new game immediatly after finishing the previous one, so you don't have to make or join another game.
If you want to namefag while playing (so it's not just four Anons), look at the black bar at the top before you create or join a game. There's a white box that says "Enter your name" to the right of "Create Game."

There's no chat available though, but at least all of the winning answers will be posted at the bottom below the scores.

I have a question: how much control does Pinky have over us? We know that she can control us directly in time stop (when Chiaki pointed the gun to Noriko head) and that she is able to engage our time stop at will. But what other shit can she do?
Also, during Misaka rescue mission, it was obvious that TTO was doing... Something to our time stop (black feathers falling from the sky). Os she inside the shield now (God please no)?

1) Not sure how much control she has but she has been able to psychically inflict torturous pain on Chiaki as well as engage and disengage the timestop whenever she wants to. Although she hasn't done anything yet, she has threatened to kill others near Chiaki while in time-stop and is quite likely to be able to do so. However, there have been times when she's tried to call our attention through the shield but hasn't actually engaged time stop on her own. Either there are some limitations there or it's just "rule of drama"

2) Not enough examples to draw any real conclusions.

The only power Homura has is whatever Pinky won't actually accept, because she's a crazy bitch who wants to save everybody: She doesn't want to judge.

Relax, you tell her as you haul yourself back up on your feet as well, dusting off your feathery dress with both gloved hands. She was just trying to kill you, that's all. Nothing you weren't expecting or not used to. ...How's Kyoko, anyway? If all Sayaka could recover was your best friend's Soul Gem, then--

Sayaka blinks, then frowns. "Jesus fucking Christ, Murderface, at least try to be serious for once in your goddamn life, alright? The way you say that, it's like I'm from the fucking Tenth or something." She shakes her head, before glancing down at the Soul Gem in her hand. Her hardened, scornful expression immediately softening at the sight of it, showing you a side of your Equerry you rarely ever saw.

"A-and, yeah. Yeah. It was...it was worse than we thought. Fucking idiot just...she overdid it like usual. After I told her not to. After I made her PROMISE not to." The blue-haired Eversor draws in a shuddering breath, before carefully placing all that's left of your best friend into her Inventory. The crimson jewel glowing once before winking out of sight.

"I'll spare you the rest of the details, but since you're her best friend and everything, I hope you'll join me in beating the shit out of her once the mutant cat get her restored." Sayaka turns towards you, and something must have shown in your face for her to blink again and shake her head.

"...Don't worry. She's...fine, more or less. Not in any immediate danger of witching out. We're trained for this kind of worst-case scenario - just shut down into a dreaming coma to stop that kind of thing from happening." It's here that the Eversor laughs, sounding a bit too forced to be real. "Idiot's probably dreaming of gorging herself on ramen as we speak."

...Right. You feel a bit better about that. But what Sayaka saw when she got to Kyoko...it was really bad, wasn't it?"

There's a moment of silence, before your Equerry nods. "...If you hadn't gotten to her before I did, Murderface, I'd..." She turns to glance sidelong at Ahriman's still-inert form, her eyes narrowing. "...I'd be apologizing to Kyoko on her bedside in your behalf, Murderface."

Heh. Well, good thing you did, then.

"I just...fuck, this is going to drive me crazy. What the fuck was I doing?" Sayaka finally tears her eyes away from Oriko to look around the ruined floor, one grimy-gloved hand raking through her hair. "I know I didn't black out because I was awake the entire time, but it's like...whatever happened between my finding Kyoko, and then finding myself being held down by...by THAT thing," She gestures towards the bristling tower of lethal ordnance that is Tiny Pete. "...It's just gone. Completely fucking wiped from my memory. Is...is this what amnesia feels like? I--"

She stops in mid-sentence as she turns toward you again. Her words dying in her throat as she looks up and down, as if only seeing you for the first time. Your own cheeks burning at her silent, judging scrutiny, making you self-consciously tug the hem of your revealing dress lower. Ah, Christ...

"...What the everliving FUCK, Murderface?" Sayaka finally speaks after what seems like an eternity, her signature scowl of reflexive disgust curls her lip. "Did you just defect to the fucking Fourteenth when everyone wasn't looking? Are you turning tricks for booze money, now? What the fuck is up with that slutty getup? And..." She peers closer at you, turning her head this way and that. "Are those fucking wings? SERIOUSLY? WINGS?"

Now it's your turn to scowl, your wings giving bristling in limp, half-hearted annoyance as you do so. A 'slutty getup', she says? You don't want to hear that from someone with a costume that involves a fucking microskirt, a bare midriff, and the soul gem equivalent of a trashy belly button piercing! If that doesn't disqualify her from calling other peoples' costumes slutty, then you don't fucking know what would!

"IT'S NOT TRASHY!" Sayaka snarls, getting right in your face, her eyes a brightly-burning blue. "My costume combines a cute and sleek aesthetic with a design optimized for mobility and speed!" She jabs your scarred chest - a chest barely concealed by your own midriff-revealing dress - with a gloved finger. "And besides, your shit is BACKLESS. That takes the fucking slut gold medal in the slut olympics any fucking day, Murderface."

...Does it?

"Ask Mami if you want. She'll say the same thing." Your Equerry leans back, crossing her arms underneath her chest. "Granted, it's nowhere near as bad as Nero's, but..." She shakes her head. "How'd you end up with that shit anyway? What happened to your costume?"

You shrug your bare shoulders. It's this fucking place, you tell her. It does shit to people. Probably the same kind of deal that happened to Sayaka earlier happened to you - just, you know, manifesting differently or something.

Not exactly the truth, but not exactly a lie, either. You can save the complete explanation for later.

"Yeah?" Sayaka lets out a non-committal grunt as she gives you another once-over. "...Maybe. Anyway, it's not really all that...slutty. The stockings are sort of nice, and the feathers are almost classy if they didn't remind me of that time when I got dragged to Las Vegas during a visit to the Eighth." She stares at you for a moment longer. "The wings, though..."

What about the wings? You wince slightly as you hear how suddenly defensive of them you sound. They're cool. Wendy said so.

..." Sayaka narrows her eyes, before shaking her head once more. "Nothing. Just feels weird seeing you with those things, that's all." Something in her voice tells you that she's keeping something back, as if deciding better than to speak her mind. "A-anyway. Let's get the fuck out of here, yeah? We've got the main objective secured, that means we can go home, right?"

You nod. Yeah, you have the Golden Weapon secured in your inventory, and Oriko's still alive. Sort of. You just need to sync up with Mami and Wendy, they're still topside--

"En route as we speak, Warmaster." Rea's voice suddenly crackles from Tiny Pete's vox speakers and nearly making Sayaka jump in surprise. "They just finished mopping up the rest of the hostiles. I took the liberty of directing them here."

"Is that Ashford? Ashford, are you in there?" Sayaka's eyes are wide as she walks up to Tiny Pete, rapping her glove-enclosed fist against the terminator's chest plate. "Isn't it hot and cramped inside there, or something?"

"...Yes, Miss Sayaka. I'm here. And no, it's not really all that cramped, and Tiny Pete has adequate climate control in his cockpit." A moment's silence. "It's actually quite comfortable, to be honest."

"Huh. That's pretty cool." Sayaka nods. "I thought you were just going to control him remotely, not actually pilot him from the inside. Amazing what Misaka can make nowadays, huh?"

Yeah. Pretty amazing, you agree.

And it's here that you spend the next few moments waiting for the rest of your Kill-Team to arrive. As you do so, you notice how, without Kyoko to smooth things over, that you're not actually that close enough with Sayaka for small talk. You can talk shit about each other easily enough, and discussing work-related matters isn't an issue, but something as making conversation, well, that seems to be beyond the both of you right at the moment.

That's what Kyoko did best, you suppose. Just being in the same room with her, she could make even the most venomous of enemies actually get along.

"Aw, shit, I fucked it up again." You hear Sayaka lament as she picks up the broken remains of Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie. "Blade snapped right the fuck through. She's gonna yell my head off for this one."

Just as you're about to ask about that - jumping on the chance for a conversation, anything to drown out the faint choir of screaming souls outside - it's here that Mami and Wendy finally arrive, dropping down from the hole you made in the ceiling. Mami rappeling down on a length of yellow ribbon, and Wendy simply jumping down and landing silently on both feet, her scarf unfurling behind her.

"Sayaka-chan!" The blonde immediately makes a beeline for your Equerry the moment her feet touch the floor - and you're treated to another rare scene: of Sayaka being flustered as she's pulled into a frantic hug. The Eversor shooting you a dirty look as she catches you staring. "We thought we'd lost you, too! After earlier...!"

"I'm fine, I'm fine!" Sayaka hurriedly reassures the tearful Vindicare, but finds herself returning the hug as well. "I...I honestly thought I was a goner, too, but I guess Murderface and Ashford brought me back."

"Really? How did....how did they do it?" Mami looks up, wiping her eyes with the back of her fingerless gloves - and it's here that you also see how battle had ruined the blonde's usually-pristine image, with soot and dirt and blood marking her costume here and there. She doesn't appear to be wounded, though, with most of the bloodstains simple blood spatter rather than borne from injury.

Sayaka gives you a long look before replying.

"...Through...through the power of friendship," The Eversor says lamely. "Yeah. Something like that."

"W-what?" Mami blinks, clearly confused. "I mean, that sounds wonderful, but how--"

You make to clear your throat here, to rescue your Equerry from further embarrassment, when Wendy does it for you. "...Hate to break up the reunion, but we probably should get the fuck out of here. We got what we came for, right?" Your ex turns towards you, something unreadable in her copper-brown eyes. "Kong? Can you confirm that?"

Yeah, you tell her. You can confirm that.

Wendy nods. "Then let's save the congratulatory group-hugging for later when we're out of this shithole, yeah? Nothing against it, just this isn't the time and place."

Mami blinks here, before nodding. "Y-yes, Wendy, you're right. We can celebrate all we want when we're safe back home." She draws back from Sayaka here, before moving over to Ahriman's unconscious form, making to pick her up. "Come on, let's get Oriko out of here, and--"

+ No. + It's here, then, that Kirika's voice, hissing with threat, stabs into your mind. + Matsuda, no. Don't bring Oriko back with you. Not yet. Ahriman is still inside her. +

+ What? + You frown here, your eyes narrowing. But you've already seperated her from the Golden Staff! How can--

+ Do you honestly think it works that way? + Kirika's sneer is audible here. + I thought it'd be that simple too, but it isn't. Ahriman didn't just possess Oriko - she IS part of Oriko now. She's used the power of the Golden Weapon to embed herself inside Oriko's soul, festering there like a cancer. +

...So what do you do, then? How do you get Oriko back?

Kirika's chuckle is a soft, breathy cackle of a murderess gone insane. + Simple. We cut her out, just like any cancer. But first, send them all back, and have them leave Oriko with you. Sayaka, Mami, the American...even that child inside the toy robot. Send them all home. + A rustle of silk. + They can't be around when it happens, otherwise you risk them being torn apart, too. +

But--

+ Just do it. We have to cut Ahriman out of Oriko, and the forces involved would put them in danger if they stick around. And this is the perfect place for it - the middle of nowhere, no chance for anyone else to get hurt. + A moment's silence. + Just trust me on this, Matsuda. +

...Trust. Hnh. You've been doing a whole lot of that and it's always ended up with it biting you in the ass.

+ What do I possibly stand to gain in fucking you over, Matsuda? + Astonished bewilderment now colors Kirika's biting pulse. + I want you to save Oriko. Just as much as Sakura does, and look how she nearly died like a chump while trying to make that a reality. Now go and send your little party home so we can start the healing. +

...

"Chiaki-san?" Mami calls your name, and you blink at this. "Are you alright? You went blank on us there for a couple of minutes. Is everything okay?"

You shake your head. Y-yeah, you're fine. It's just--

"Well, go and activate your teleportation beacon already," Sayaka cuts in. "Let's blow this shithole and get home. The faster Kyoko gets to sick bay the better."

You glance down at the bulky beacon strapped to your wrist. One simple press and you'll be out of here. Back home.

Back to Midori.

"You guys go ahead," You tell your Kill-Team. "Leave Oriko will me. I'll be the last to teleport back along with her."

"What?" Sayaka's eyes go wide here, while Mami merely blinks in puzzlement. Wendy on the other hand is carefully impassive, almost studiously so, as if hellbent on concealing her reaction - whatever it was. "Murderface, the mission's over. It's done! We've got Oriko, we've secured the main objective. We need to haul ass right away. Stop fucking around--"

You shake your head. You have to be the last, you insist. Oriko will go with you. Otherwise...

"Otherwise what?" Mami asks quietly, her warm, honey-colored eyes boring deep into yours. "Is...is there something you want to tell us, Chiaki-san?"

You meet the blonde's disarming stare for a few silent seconds before you nod.

"Otherwise, everything that everyone's done here will be for nothing." You finish. "Please. Just let me do this. Trust me on this."

Your Kill-Team is silent, before Sayaka finally speaks up. "Fine. Do whatever the fuck you want, Murderface. I gotta get Kyouko to sick bay." There's a beep as she presses the dial on her Teleportation Beacon. "But if I have to get sent back here to retrieve your sorry ass, you'll be coming home in a body bag. Labelled 'Slut'."

A loud clap of thunder, a bright flash of light, and Sayaka is gone. Back to Mitakihara.

Another beep, and you turn to see Wendy's form shimmering in mid-teleportation. "...Good luck, Kong. Stop letting her push you around, grow some fucking balls."

Huh? Does she mean Sayaka? Because you don't--

"...Was talking about Kirika." She taps her ear. "I can hear her too, you know. Bitch is louder than the screaming here." She gives you a tired wave with her freshly-regenerated hand. "Don't stay for too long. Do whatever you have to do, then come back."

With the same sound and light show, Wendy disappears. Leaving you with Oriko, Mami, and Tiny Pete.

"Just come back safely," The blonde whispers as she pulls you into a soft, gentle embrace. "If there's something you have to do, do it. Just be careful, and come back to us."

...Yeah. You'll...you'll come back. For sure.

And just like that, with you making another promise you're not sure you'll be able to keep, you're left alone in the Akashic Realm, with only an unconscious Prophet for company.

+ There. Nice and private. + Kirika's voice whispers in your mind as you pull Muramasa from your Shield, the brilliant golden blade flashing as it cuts through the warp-tinged air once more. +...Wait. Do you smell that? It smells like...like someone's having a barbecue, or something. +

What? A barbecue? In the Akashic Realm?...Now you know Kirika's really batshit insane. Who the fuck would have a barbecue in the fucking asshole of the universe?

+ Don't you smell it? It smells divine! + Kirika's laughter is a thing of silky malice, like a freshly-sharpened knife sliding easily through meat and bone.. + But I suppose you can't, you probably burned out your olfactory nerves with all those cigarettes you're smoking. Pity. +

+ Fucking enough about that, + You pulse irritably at her. + We're saving your girlfriend, remember? Focus. +

+ Right, right. + A moment. + We'll need your Soul Gem for this. Bring it out. +

And for the second time in this operation, you entrust the crystallization of your soul to a less than trustworthy entity - the black bauble materializing over your hand, hovering a few inches from your palm, its elaborate and overstated gilding making it look less of a Soul Gem and more of a small crown. The jewel itself a complete and utter black, like some sort of Dark Orb.

As soon as it fully manifests - as soon as your Soul Gem finally imprints itself into reality- it's here that your wings unfurl behind you, restored fully to working order. Each knifelike feather once more blazing with soulfire while singing the song of the faithful damned.

And slowly - ever so slowly - something rises from Oriko's limp, unconscious form. A black mist of some sort, seemingly drawn to your Soul Gem, extending its tendrils towards the glowing bauble.

No, not a mist - a shadow. A shrieking, trashing thing of darkness and hate, with pinpricks of burning hellfire for eyes. Flickering in and out of reality with every pulse of your Soul Gem. The afterimage of a young woman in a kimono writhing in eternal torment superimposed upon the shadow itself - Its exhalation of breath echoing her pain-wracked screams, its laughter her broken sobbing.

+ Oriko... + It's here, then, that you hear regret in Kirika's usually-smooth, usually-confident words. The pain evident in her voice, moreso in this pulsed form. + If I hadn't left you like I did...you wouldn't be suffering like this. But now I'm here, and you will suffer no longer. +

Two things happen, both so quick that you barely have time to react: your Soul Gem disappearing before the shadow could touch it with its claws, followed immediately by your free hand snatching forward to grab the phantasm by its throat. Your fingers curling around its spindly neck in a crushing, asphyxiating grip.

+ That's Ahriman, + Kirika says, her voice sounding oddly tired. + You can tell by how ugly she looks. Such is the fate of all the Chosen, when they overstep their boundaries. +

That makes the girl in the kimono you saw Oriko, then? Her soul? And you have to use Muramasa to cut them apart?

+ Ah, so you do have basic deductive skills after all, Matsuda. Congratulations. + She chuckles here. + But yes, that's what you have to do. One cut would usually do it. Just...brace yourself for the aftermath. +

Just as you draw the sword back to strike, however--

+ Will Oriko survive this? + You pulse, the question coming to you at practically the last second.

Silence. Then--

+ She will. But if she doesn't, then she was better off dead in the first place. + Kirika sighs. + Do it, Matsuda. +

And so, gritting your teeth, you bring down Muramasa in one sharp, cleaving cut. The golden blade catching the light of the warp as it sings through the air.

And the last thing you see before the Akashic Realm explodes around you is a spectral hand, encased in a Culexus' studded glove, reach from out of nowhere to grab onto your wrist.

And so, gritting your teeth, you bring down Muramasa in one sharp, cleaving cut. The golden blade catching the light of the warp as it sings through the air.

And the last thing you see before the Akashic Realm explodes around you is a spectral hand, encased in a Culexus' studded glove, reach from out of nowhere to grab onto your wrist.

You wake up to someone screaming.

Not the faint screaming of souls being burned as fuel for a devil's wings, or even the music of the choir singing in the hell behind reality.

This was someone screaming with pure, utter pain. A pain beyond what mortal injury or sickness can cause. Pain that cut right through to the soul.

You open your eyes, and see yourself lying on the floor of Kyuubey's office. Beside you is the smoking ruin of Muramasa - the sword somewhat scorched, but still whole. The spirit inside rendered quiet, voiceless.

At your other side is Oriko. She's still unconscious, but by the regular rise and dip of her chest, it looks like she made it. The exorcism and the teleportation back here.

But the voice from earlier--

"YUMA!" You hear the scream that had woken you once more, and you force yourself to rise to find its source. Immediately finding it as you wrestle yourself back onto your feet.

Oh, no.

No, no, no--

"YUMA!" Haruka screams again, cradling the limp form of the Culexus to her, even as Mami sought to calm her down. Ashes trickling out of the hardsuit's seams, from its hollow sleeves, from the Anima Speculum lolling against the hysterical seer's lap. "NO, YOU PROMISED! YOU PROMISED YOU WOULDN'T LEAVE ME!"

"Haruka-san--"

"NO! LET ME GO! SHE PROMISED ME! YUMA! DON'T LEAVE ME HERE WITH HER! PLEASE!"

And so you come to, amidst the wreckage of your own making. Do you stay there, eyes squeezed shut, afraid to move, hoping to bleed to death? Or do you crawl out, help your loved ones, make sure the fire doesn't spread, try to fix it?

I remember an explanation about the culexus having the ability of putting themselves inside another soulgem. Well, considering the super-brutal culexus that Malal was, there exist a possibility that she is inside our soulgem, or at least a fragment or a memory? From Thread 245:
>"I realize that I may have to teleport more than five people out of the Akashic Realm, Warmaster, not counting Miss Rea in Tiny Pete." Yuma shakes her head. "I've asked the Incubator for help in this regard, and he's agreed to allocate some resources for me to manage the extra load." Another pause as she reaches up with a gloved hand to touch her throat. "I'm confident that it should be enough to get at least one more passenger on the return trip."
>One by one or in a group, that's my capacity. Five is already pushing my limits, and six is impossible without assistance."

QB was supposed to direct more resources to Yuma so she could do it without dying.
It may not have been enough.

Thing that I've been wondering about for a while: when you say 'respec', do you mean like 'multiclass'? Like classic tabletop multiclassing? Or is it more Path of Exile in that anybody can become almost anything, but it's much easier for some classes?

Like, can any meguca regenerate, or train regeneration, or is that strictly Eversors only?

Decu, I want to ask something about Walpurgisnatch. Malal appeared with the appearance of Godoka (and technically her powers) to defeat Kharn. During the Midori-barrier arc, Godoka said that she has friends that help her to manifest. Then, it was one of those "manifestations" what happened during Walpurgisnatch?

Most skills seems to require some training but can be cross-trained.
Mami learned how to do magical healing and self-regeneration, even though those are normally Venemum and Eversor abilities, but it was mentioned that the skills are not as effective and have a much higher magic cost than if they were performed by their respective Meguca types.

It's more of the Path of Exile thing. Any meguca can train regen, but Eversors will naturally be more gifted and talented in it.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE FALL OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 02/20/15(Fri)09:42:40 No.38191475 Archived

You scramble onto your feet - or at least attempt to, your body feeling more sluggish than it had ever been in your life, each muscle numb yet burning with lactic fire. Making even the simple act of crawling forward a trial in itself, one that had tears pricking at the corners of your eyes at the absolute resolve-crushing pain of it. It felt like dying. It felt like dying while being burned alive.

But you manage it after a moment, your fingers somehow gaining purchase on the smooth floor in a series of ear-splitting whines, somehow leaving long furrows in the tempered plate glass. You ignore this as you stagger forward, forcing your entire body to move towards the screaming Seer and the dead Culexus in her arms.

No. No, it can't be. She can't be dead. Yuma can't be dead.

But you felt her die, as plain as day, just before reality came crashing back in a burning flood. Her farewell a pulse of open-armed acceptance.

Her soul burning away as the rest of her body collapsed into slack, powdery ash.

Chitose Yuma. A girl younger than you, cursed to depend on a confining leather suit to live, to function. Malal's prodigy. One of the few survivors of the last world-ending catastrophe that had threatened to destroy life as you know it. The Emperor's Champion of the Walpurgisnacht Crusade.

Now dead. Now gone. As lifeless as the skull that marked her helmet.

No happy endings. Not even for someone who clearly and desperately deserved it.

>> ☐ Anonymous 02/20/15(Fri)09:47:13 No.38191521

>>38191475

Something bars your staggering gait forward. You try and push past it, snarling something particularly tasteless in its face, but all you hear yourself say is hoarse, unintelligible mumbling. Your attempts at shoving whatever it was aside feeling more like weak, feeble nudging.

"Chiaki. CHIAKI!" You hear a familiar voice hiss in a desperate whisper, and it takes you a moment to recognize Sayaka's voice. It takes you another moment that the thing blocking your way is your Equerry. You blink once, twice, and finally the blur that she'd been resolves into something recognizable. "Relax. Just fucking relax, alright? Everyone got out. Everyone's safe. Even Oriko. We're getting her and Kyoko to sick bay right now. But I need you to stay calm and just fucking relax, alright? Just fucking relax--"

Haruka screams again, loud and long, the sound so full and ripe with anguish it had no right coming from something human. A keening wail that sounded much too similar to the screaming that continuously echoed in your ears in the Akashic Realm. The song of the hopelessly lost. The dirge of the forever damned.

Your breath sawing in and out of your body in ragged gasps, you finally get enough air to snarl a single word to your Equerry. A single word to tell her that she is lying to your fucking face, with the evidence of it sobbing brokenly a few feet from you, grasping the corpse of someone who simply wanted to do the right thing.

Sayaka doesn't budge. "Fine, it's bullshit. But I can't let you through, Chiaki. Please. Kyuubey wants me to get you to a Silent Room immediately." You hear her take a shuddering breath, feel her shoulders give a slight shudder. "J-just....just fucking cooperate, Chiaki. Please. I'm fucking begging you here."

...A Silent Room? Your eyes grow wide at this. WHY?! You're not...you don't fucking need to be in the Silent Room, you're the fucking Warmaster! They can't do this, the fucking mutant cat bastard can't do this--

"I can and I will." Kyuubey's voice, cold, colder than you've ever heard it before, suddenly thunders into your mind - and you turn to look at Kyuubey at his desk, his perfectly-round crimson eyes staring into yours. "Matsuda. Please allow acting Warmaster Miki Sayaka--"

You freeze at this. ACTING WARMASTER?!

"...Yes. Acting Warmaster." Kyuubey replies after a moment, before continuing on his frosty tirade. "Please allow acting Warmaster Miki Sayaka to escort you to a Silent Room, where your debriefing will take place. Upon the completion of that debriefing, deliberations will be made." A pause. "For everyone's sake, Matsuda, just cooperate. I do not wish to have to call the entire Eversor Rank just to subdue you."

Fucking--no. No, this isn't fucking real, this is insane! YOU'RE WARMASTER! WHY THE FUCK DO YOU NEED TO GO TO A SILENT ROOM, YOU'RE FINE--

A click, and a beep, and the wall behind Kyuubey's desk switches from displaying scrolling news feeds to a live camera feed - one that you immediately recognize as his own office. Mami. Wendy. Even Midori, who's trying her best to calm Haruka down, the girl still clinging to the fallen Culexus' corpse. Sayaka. And...

And...

You look down at yourself. At your hands. And then at the wings on your back.

...No. NO. FUCK.

"Go with Miki Sayaka, Matsuda. Please." Kyuubey says again. "Stay there until we can figure out just what happened here."

How do you respond?

[]Refuse. You are still Warmaster here, you're not a fucking prisoner. You'll stay here until shit gets figured out.
[]Allow yourself to be escorted to your Silent Room. It's...probably the best thing to do right now. It's only temporary anyway, right?

Considering that he can't know if TTO will take control of our meatbody and soulgem again in the middle of his office, and whatever we did caused the death of his last Culexus (regardless of what actually happened, that's how it looks like right now), putting Chiaki in a Silent Room and making Sayaka (the Equerry, the person who is supposed to take command if the Warmaster is compromised) is the reasonable thing to do.

Did you forget that WE asked to make Sayaka our Equerry so that she could take command if we were to do something really stupid or be compromised?

You're thinking only of Mirai.
The reforming of the Soul Gem meant that not only could Malal and Madokami not help more, but that the information that Malal and Madokami had imparted to Mirai's soul, that we were supposed to get access to, was lost.

So it wasn't just Mirai, the barely known acquaintance we lost, it was Malal as well.

At least one of those could end up being a good decision, and it has been so far. We got to use devil magic on Ahriman from it.

Going all flesh of fallen angels in SIberia could have been bad. Especially with Kharn around to encourage Chiaki's bloodlust.

All we have to do is remember not to tell any Homus to get fucked, and not bring any incubators into timestop.

You look at Sayaka, then at Haruka - before finally looking back at Kyuubey. Staring back at the mutant cat bastard as hard as you can, matching the perfectly-round crimson eyes glare for glare.

Fine, you manage to say, your voice a raspy, raw-throated snarl. Fine, you'll go. You'll let yourself get escorted to a fucking Silent Room, like a fucking prisoner, if that's what it takes for things to settle down.

But you're not going without at least saying goodbye to Yuma. You deserve at least that much.

"No." Haruka manages to stop crying long enough to look up at you, her face an anguished mask of tears and fury. "No, you don't deserve ANYTHING. You don't deserve SHIT."

Midori, who'd been trying her best to calm Haruka along with Mami - the green-haired girl already in tears herself - looks up at you with a pleading look, before turning back to the distraught, disheveled seer. "Amane-san, p-please, this isn't Sempai's fault. She didn't want this to happen--"

"THIS IS ALL HER FAULT!" Haruka shrieks, her voice completely and utterly robbed of all its elegance and refinement. "I KEPT TELLING YOU! I KEPT TELLING EVERYONE, BUT YOU WOULDN'T LISTEN!" She thrusts an ash-dusted arm at your direction, her eyes wild, her lips flecked with froth. "YOU ARE HARBORING THE DEVIL HERSELF! THE DEATH THAT COMES ON SWIFT WINGS! YUMA WAS THE FIRST, AND YOU'LL ALL BE NEXT--

A sharp sound cuts Haruka off, one loud enough to quell all other sound in the room. A crack of flesh hitting flesh, delivered with enough conviction to forcibly turn the hysterical Seer's face to the side. The point of impact - Haruka's cheek - already reddening, a welt already developing there.

"How..." The Prognosticator slowly turns back to face Midori, her eyes blazing. "How dare you touch m--"

"I know you're grieving," You hear Midori say as she straightens up from her crouch to stand over Haruka. Her own kind of fury - an awkward but honest kind - radiating off her in waves. "And I know how it feels to lose someone important. I'll sit here and listen to anything you have to say, but..." She takes a deep breath here, her shoulders shaking briefly at the inhalation. "...I won't let you say those things about sempai. Do you understand?"

"..." Haruka glares up at your Callidus for what seems like an eternity, before turning away, burying her face into Yuma's chestplate. Continuing to muffle her cries there.

Midori...

"I don't really think it's the time, Chiaki. Come on." Sayaka tugs at your wrist in a gentle reminder, her voice low, quiet.. "The faster we get this all squared away, the faster we can get things back to normal. And I'll make sure you get to say goodbye to Yuma personally. I promise."

Yeah. Yeah, maybe...maybe this isn't the time.

Just as you allow yourself to be dragged away--

"Matsuda. One moment, please." Kyuubey calls, and the both of you stop in your tracks. You turn towards the Incubator, eyes narrowed.

What? You're going to your fucking Silent Room like a good little prisoner, what else does he fucking want?

I do pray that decu's angle on the vote is that the golden weapons are nuclear kryptonite AIDS - ESPECIALLY the staff, which is an unknown quantity at this point - and that they need to be handled per protocol; i.e. delivered directly to the vault, not dumped on the floor. Preferably by the only person known to be capable of handling them without ill effect.

Stress that it'd be a bad, bad idea for anyone to touch that staff at all, and confirm that Kyuuby understands dumping it here means it's gonna be on his office floor, surrounded by sealing circles and shit, for the indeterminate future.

I know everyone's all pissed about Kyuuby being Kyuubey (i.e. not the most emotionally astute guy around) but he IS responding sanely - he doesn't know WHAT is up with Chiaki at the moment, so this is a combination of quarantine and interrogation to make sure nothing nasty hitched a ride home in our soul gem or something. If you wanna stick it to him, start quoting his own regulations at him chapter and verse.

Yuma died because of 2 factors:
1. 6 teleports instead of her limit of 5 (teleports can't be staggered; she can teleport safely only 5 persons, Kyouko's gem still counts, and Tiny Pete/Rea don't count because Tiny Pete had his own teleporter).
2. Ahriman self-destructed her soul in a last-ditch effort to kill Chiaki, Kirika, and Oriko. Yuma took the magic blast that was meant for us.

QB was helping Yuma magically. With his help, she could have handled 6 teleports or the Ahriman explosion, but not both.

It wouldn't be this bad if that was all. It's likely our transformation from what Oriko did to our gem that's causing the shitstorm. We as Chiaki might not know any significance to our appearance except that it looks like TTO, but chances are there are people who know the Blessed Lady-related legends and religion who will recognize Chiaki as the Devil now. Like Ahriman wanted.

We're going to have to stay out of sight for awhile or there will be Officios that will attempt to use this to their advantage.

What about the wings? You wince slightly as you hear how suddenly defensive of them you sound. They're cool. Wendy said so.
..." Sayaka narrows her eyes, before shaking her head once more. "Nothing. Just feels weird seeing you with those things, that's all." Something in her voice tells you that she's keeping something back, as if deciding better than to speak her mind. "A-anyway. Let's get the fuck out of here, yeah? We've got the main objective secured, that means we can go home, right?"
Remember this? Sayaka knows something about the TTO, so is possible that more people knows something. Also, during the TTO interview, she herself admitted to have agents in the officios

You shake your head. "No," You tell Kyuubey, and by extension, the entire room. "I'm not going to do that."

Beside you, you hear Sayaka let out a small sigh. "Chiaki." She hisses your name again - your real name - and it's here that you realize that she'd been doing so all along. Not 'Murderface', not 'you fucking dildo' - but Chiaki.

You would've smiled at this if things weren't so fucked up at the moment.

"Please just fucking play along." The blue-haired Eversor pleads between gritted teeth. "Please don't make me fucking call in the entire rank to put down their Warmaster. For the love of fucking Christ, just drop the fucking things--"

You shake your head at her, before turning to face Kyuubey again. "They're mine," You say loudly, willing yourself to sound as even and as calm as you possibly can, even if every cell in your body is screaming at you to take action. "And I don't trust anyone else with them. More on that, I'm not willing to let another human touch these godforsaken things, either. So I'm going to put all of them back in the vault on the way to my cell."

At this, you turn to leave the Incubator's Office, your wings unfurling with your movement. "Either take them from me to put them away yourself, or watch me do it."

Silence. Stark, numbing silence, one only interrupted by your own heels as you continue to make your way towards the door. Sayaka cursing underneath her breath before following you a moment later, the Eversor quickly catching up with you in a couple of strides.

Just before you could reach the double doors itself, it's here that Kyuubey speaks. "Fine. Miki Sayaka, please ensure that Matsuda leaves all of the Golden Weapons in the Vault. Confiscate her keycard to it right after, and then escort her to Silent Room Regalia."

"Understood, Incubator." You hear Sayaka murmur, a rustle of cloth indicating a perfect salute. It's then that you feel her hand on your shoulder. "Come on, Murderface. Let's get you out of here--"

"SEMPAI!"

A shouted call, followed by the sound of running footsteps, and you turn just in time to have your face buried in a soft, warm chest encased in a tear-stained hoodie. Arms, just as soft and just as warm as the marshmallowy hell you're being slowly smothered with, wraps around you in an embrace.

You feel your wings bristling as you frantically pat Midori's arm. Alright, alright, you get it, you get the concept, you're tapping out! You can't breathe!

A moment later, and your Callidus finally lets you go - and when she does, you see that she's trying her hardest not to break down in front of you. She'd already been shedding tears earlier, you've pointed that out already - but it seems that there's so much more being held back, probably because of what's happening at the moment.

Not every day the person you love turns into a monster and gets sent to monster bitch jail, you think.

"S-sempai..." Midori's voic is a broken, creaky thing. "Y-you're still my sempai, right? You...you still remember me? You haven't forgotten me? Please tell me you haven't forgotten me, I don't care about the wings, I don't care about the claws, please tell me you're still you..."

"Hanegawa." Sayaka's tone is mildly admonishing. "You can visit Murderface when she's safe inside her Silent Room. You can talk to her all you want then. We just--"

"I was talking to sempai." Midori cuts her off, stunning the Eversor into silence. She turns towards you again, expectant.

How do you respond?

If anything, he's being emotional by giving us even this chance. Logic would have dictated having us neutralized as soon as we came back from the Akashic Realm.
By all the actions we've taken so far, we've shown that we're compromised, and any other Incubator would have has us retired.
So, if we're going to be more Incubator than QB, we have to order that Chiaki Matsuda be terminated.

Kilgore took the Bangles from You, not us. And she was traveling around the world, and wasn't part of our Officio.

Oriko got the Staff from Ahriman, who stayed inside of it and had her followers keep possession of it.

How the fuck is that in any way equivalent to dropping the Golden Weapon in QB's office in reach of QB?

That's like saying that dropping weapons in a president's office where he can call security to safely handle the weapons is the same as getting them taken off of our drugged out body, or having a weapon given to someone when we never had possession of the weapon in the first place.

Ah, here it is, thread 15.

"Very well." Kyuubey nods as it sits down on its haunches, tail flicking from side to side - managing to avoid Misaka's multiple grasping attempts, before the arms dealer finally stomps off in annoyance, clearly fuming. "Through intensive analysis, I've come to some very interesting conclusions. This may be a bit long-winded, but please bear with me."
You'll bear with it, all right. Just as you're bearing with the uncomfortably frilly underwear you're wearing under the heavy starched skirts. Did maids really wear black frilly panties WITH garter belts?
Kyuubey makes a small noise, akin to clearing its throat, before it starts. "As they are, the golden weapons seem to be unremarkable. Both of them can be disassembled into their component parts easily, and snap together just as easily without issues. Identified chemically, they are made up of the same material as their non-golden counterparts. Perfectly identical, down to the very last molecule. Nothing extraordinary - except, of course, when you use them."
Kyuubey places a forepaw on the floor, a circle of light etching itself on the marble, and it's then that the Golden Desert Eagle manifests in that circle itself, complete with a white snakeskin holster.
"Think of it like a...secret weapon in a videogame. Everything else is normal about it, except for a few parameters. It hits harder, it reloads faster, and it doesn't seem to jam no matter what we do. The same with the sword - it cuts with a molecule-thin edge, and it doesn't seem to dull no matter what we cut with it." Kyuubey looks at you. "We used machinery to do these tests, of course, so there's no risk of corruption."

You look up at Midori and nod. Yeah, of course. You're still you. The same dildo she said goodbye to earlier before the op started. You're just cosplaying as a fucking slut at the moment - it'll go away on its own soon enough.

Despite being close enough to tears that they're already dripping down her cheeks - just an errant hiccup would most likely make her break down - Midori manages a shaky, breathy giggle here. "S-sempai, please don't...i-it doesn't really look that bad, you know?" She shakes her head, before gesturing to the bone-white pinions folded up against your back. "T-they...they look really pretty. And the stockings kinda have a neat design on them..."

Yeah? Well, you're not really seeing it. But yeah, you'll get back to your old costume soon enough. You're not going to be stuck like this forever. Definitely not. You'll kill as many people as you need to in order to make that a reality.

"..." Midori smiles once more, and you can't help but feel bad for lying to her like this. Still, she seems like she's feeling better. That's the important thing right now.

"Alright. Hate to be the dildo here, but I really have to take Murderface to her Silent Room, Hanegawa." Sayaka says as she gently ushers you forward, her voice apologetic. Midori blinks, before hastily bowing - profusely apologizing for her outburst earlier. Sayaka waves her apologies off as she pushes you through the doors.

"I'll visit every day!" Midori shouts back after you. "I'll...I'll bring everything you need over there, sempai! I promise--"

The doors to Kyuubey's office slide shut, cutting off the rest of Midori's farewell. Leaving you and Sayaka outside in the empty hall, the night sky peeking through the windows. ...Huh. So that trip to the Akashic Realm took the entire day, huh?

"Looks like it." Sayaka murmurs, reaching up behind her neck to fiddle with her collar there - and you see her unclasp something metallic before pulling her cape right off. Leaving her with her shoulders bare, free to display the scars that she'd earned as an Eversor.

She shakes the garment briefly - and the blood and grime and dirt coating the white cloth simply vanishes. You make to ask what she's doing, somewhat entranced by the fact that you'd never seen her take it off in person - but you're stopped by her draping the warm, soft garment over your shoulders, letting it drape down and over your wings. And your dress. Hiding them from view.

"Second time I'm letting you use my fucking cape," Sayaka murmurs underneath her breath, securing the clasp around your neck in a somewhat loose fit. It's secure, however. "Don't get spoiled. I just don't want the others to see you before we have an explanation for all of this."

You'll try your best not to get spoiled, you tell her, grateful for the gesture. You pull the cape closer to yourself as you head for the elevators, side by side. Heading to your new 'apartment'.

"I...I never got to thank you properly for what you did back there." The blue-haired Eversor says after a moment. "You know. When I fucked up."

...Yeah, she didn't. She was too busy calling you names, then. Calling you a fucking casual.

"And you could've told Kyuubey about it, too, just earlier. When this is all happening." Sayaka shakes her head. "If you did, I'd...probably be in the same shit as you, Murderface. So...thanks. I owe you."

How do you respond?

[]It's fine. I'll take my payment in booze, smuggled in with my chair. And pancakes.

I'm calling this now. Chiaki will be watching anime on her tablet, slugging down Kong as she reclines in her SUPER COMFY CHAIR underneath a heated fleece blanket.

Sayaka knocks on the door. "WARMASTER, YOU'RE CLEARED FOR DUTY AGAIN."

"NOOOO," Chiaki yells back through the door. "AAAAH THE WINGS ARE COMING OUT AGAIN I CAN FEEL THEM I FEEL SO EVIL-"

"BITCH THEY HAVE A CAMERA BUILT INTO THE ROOM I CAN FUCKING SEE YOU-"

"NOOOO YOU CAN'T SEE SHIIIIT" Chiaki responds as she slides underneath the blanket.

You shake your head. It's fine, you tell her. But if she's that eager to repay you, then you'll take your payment in booze, smuggled in with your favorite chair. And pancakes, of course.

Sayaka frowns at this and opens her mouth, seemingly getting ready to quote directly from the Magical Girl Primer and how it's against the rules to do that for a Silent Room occupant - but she shakes her head instead, a smile curling her lips. "You know what? Fine. I'll smuggle them in myself. I'll let Midori handle the pancakes, though - I could never get the hang of making them."

...If she's willing to do that for you, then why didn't she speak up for you earlier? Sayaka knows you're not what they think you are. What Kyuubey suspects you are.

"I know," Sayaka says wretchedly. "And I will. When Kyuubey starts his deliberations, I'll be the first one to speak in your defense." She shakes her head. "But we gotta do things by the book, Murderface. Did you see how fucking spooked the cat bastard was? And Haruka making a fucking scene didn't exactly fucking help any." Anotherh sigh, followed by a shrug of well-developed shoulders, the play of her muscles there almost hypnotizing to look at.

. "We do this by the book. Only way to do it without stepping on too many toes and ruffling too many feathers. Trust me on this, Murderface, this is how it usually goes, and once they find out you're clear, you'll be back in your Office in no time."

Hnh. Fine. You shake your head. What about Kyoko? Is she going to be alright?

Sayaka nods. "Yeah. We got her to the Venenum just in time. Her Soul Gem's already being purified, and once that's done Kyuubey will personally make her a new body." She draws out something from her Inventory - it's Kyoko's eyepatch, somewhat scorched and caked with blood. "It should take a few days for her at the least. Gives me time to clean this up."

Chiaki is a Captain. Her Shikai is the shield that folds space and time. Her Bankai puts an area inside of her own personal closed space...while giving her the armory.

Sayaka is her Vice Captain, her Zanpakuto spirit is her witch form. Has musical powers in shikai, and Bankai is just swords and wheels everywhere.

You glance at the accessory, then back at Sayaka. She meets your gaze with an understanding one of her own.

"I'll tell her her best friend didn't go crazy," The Eversor grins. "She just grew some stupid fucking wings."

Good. Good. That's all you wanted.

"You two." Sayaka laughs, here. "You two are so fucking different, yet you act like you're sisters or something. It's cute sometimes."

The rest of the trip to your prison continues in silence, broken only by a slight detour to your vault.

As Kyuubey instructed, Sayaka made sure to watch you replace all the Golden Weapons to their racks. Including the Staff.

While doing this, however - you had a chance to do a bit of sleight-of-hand, to replace your Golden Desert Eagle with a gun of the same make, and stash it in your Shield.

Did you take that chance to keep your Desert Eagle?

You didn't. You don't need it right now. Besides, what Sayaka said makes sense - if you just keep your head low and do things by the book, then you'll be reinstated before you get a chance to miss paperwork.

With the Golden Weapons safely locked inside your vault and your keycard in Sayaka's hands, you're then escorted to your new 'apartment' - Silent Room Regalia, where Kharn herself had been imprisoned days before she turned into the Betrayer. Days before Walpurgisnacht.

All Silent Rooms, by design, are unwelcoming, sterile things of steel and cold, stale air. You've always hated being in one, and made that particular tidbit of information clear to Sayaka. The Eversor simply shrugged.

"It's only going to be a couple of days, Murderface." She says as she ushers you in. "Just let Kyuubey do his job and we'll do ours, and you'll be back as our Emperor Dildo soon enough."

Right. Well...this is it, then. Is Sayaka going to be alright? As...Acting Warmaster, anyway.

The Eversor blanches at that. "No thanks, Murderface. Keep the fucking hat and greatcoat and everything that comes with it. Eversor Rank Leader's enough for me. Equerry's a treat, but Warmaster?" She shakes her head, before stepping back across the Silent Room's threshold. "Not for all the money in the world."

Heh. Alright, then. She remembers what she promised you?

"Yeah. Leave it to me." It's here, then, that she starts to key in a series of numbers on the keypad set at the outer door of the Silent Room. "I'll make sure to visit you whenever I can, too. Kyoko's probably going to be here once she's up on her feet and never leave, so there's that."

Hah. Yeah, you can see her doing just that.

"Alright. So long, Murderface." Sayaka's smile turns...well, hesitant. "Just...get some rest for tonight, alright?"

You'll try, you tell her as the doors immediately slam close. The locks ratcheting with heavy metallic clicks.

And that's it for today's thread! Sorry if typing is a bit slow, hahaha!

That formally finishes the Prophet Arc! And with this, I'm taking a two-week vacation from MGNQ! The new arc, The Death of Chiaki Matsuda, will begin on the first weekend of March!

Thank you for everyone's participation, feedback is always great! No writeups for today, so questions answered before we fall off the board!

Alright! Really quickly, before we fall off the board.

The reason why I'm taking two weeks off is not only because I want a break, but I also want to do some auditing on the writeups that has been written and published for the story.

As you all know, I'm really happy with everyone doing writeups for MGNQ, and that never changes. But as I have been made aware, there are some stuff that I need to re-examine and re-fit instead of just declaring everything as canon. It's my fault, not the writefags, because I tend to get carried away, hahaha!

So what is going to happen is this: writefaggotry is going to be put on hold for the moment. I'll be auditing everything myself and making sure that stuff that has already been published fits the tone and the universe I envisioned for MGNQ. Some stuff will be cut, some stuff will remain. But not 'cut' entirely like deleted or anything - they're still there, just declared noncanon. The authors are free to continue their writeups as they like!

So there we go! Reactions, violent or otherwise, please send them to me!

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 03/08/15(Sun)10:09:48 No.38557341 Archived

With a waspish buzz of failing electricity, the light inside the Silent Room cracks into life, banishing the darkness as quickly as its death had allowed it in. The inky blackness leaving behind fourteen shadows around you where there had been none before. Fourteen of them, standing around you in a ring, with their bright blue eyes staring up at you under their scarlet-moon grins.

And it's here that they start talking. No, chattering. Babbling eagerly over each other, like a pack of hyenas baying at each other for the lone, still-twitching corpse in their midst.

"We found you."

"We finally found you, good-for-nothing!"

"After so much looking!"

"After so much searching!"

"After so much killing and eating of angels fallen from the sky!"

"Your ass looks like a sack of potatoes in that getup!"

"We are reunited once more, never to be separated again!"

"Our faces when we actually find the good-for-nothing where she told us she would be!"

"We found you! We found you! We found you!"

"GOTT IST TOT! GOTT IST TOT! GOTT IST TOT! GOTT IST TOT!"

Their discordant cries soon culminate into one chanted, disturbing cheer, before they start clapping. Applauding. The sound of tiny porcelain hands slapping against each other resembling less of a congratulatory noise and more like loose teeth being rattled in a bag.

After a few seconds, one of them clears its throat, and the rest fall into silence as she steps forward. You know this doll, with her black dress, her mop of blonde hair, and the arrogant way she carried the hat-pin staff in her hand. Her name is IBARI, and she was the first one to die in your dream. Her porcelain head smashed to pieces with a point-blank shot of your Desert Eagle.

"We are fifteen in number, but only fourteen are intact." The blonde-haired doll looks up at you with its almond-shaped eyes of cold, emotionless blue ice, the crimson incision of its smile widening. "And we have been looking for you, wonderful, all-powerful, minty-fresh good-for-nothing." She curtsies, and the rest follows suit in perfect, practiced unison. "You have been a hard good-for-nothing to find!"

"...And a wrongfully-imprisoned one at that," Another doll, this one with a veil over its auburn hair and a rather coquettish dress - its name flashing across your eyes as USOTSUKI - steps forward, smiling. "This is unacceptable! Our good-for-nothing has done NOTHING WRONG! She should not be caged like this, like some sort of animal!"

"Say the word, and we will clean this entire facility of souls," A severe-looking doll with pale blonde hair steps forward as well, this one's name being REIKETSU. "We will not stand to see our good-for-nothing maligned this way. Say the word and this one shall bring you their faces sewn into a cloak, fit and fashionable for any type of social event."

You would require an image editing program. Since all the costumes are drawn on a transparent background, you can simply use a cut and paste tool to drag the costume over the base and save it.

Recently had an offer from a friend to try and make a flash out of the dolls so we might be able to do that as well, possibly, maybe, perhaps.

Friendly or not, you still remember just what they did back then. How they'd gleefully distracted you while their conveniently-missing sister hacked Midori apart and tore her eyes out from her severed head.

About how they attacked as one with bladed implements shaped like oversized sewing merchandise. You still remember that, every fucking minute of it. It's one of those things that sometimes made you wish you had amnesia again - just to have it erased from your memory completely.

This - along with the small detail that you've just been practically stripped of your rank and thrown into a Silent Room like some sort of fucking prisoner by your own Incubator - colors your instinctive reaction to their presence something fierce. And for a moment, you feel the slightest tinge of guilt as all fourteen dolls flinch at your snarled questioning - clearly not because you asked those questions in the first place, but most likely how. But only for a moment.

Because fuck if you're going to feel sorry about hurting the feelings of a dozen or so creepy, freaky-looking dolls that can fucking move and talk on their own.

"...Good-for-nothing?" Ibari takes a tiny, cautious step towards you, both her dainty porcelain hands gripping her hatpin-staff in a remarkably humane simulation of nervous hesitation. "It's...we are your Dolls, good-for-nothing. We are your mourners and your servants, us Children of the Fake City. We are supposed to be here. We are supposed to serve you and liven up the funeral procession, that's why we've been looking all over for you! Now that we are reunited once more, we--"

She pauses here, her almond-shaped eyes of polished aquamarine suddenly uncertain. "...Wait. Wait. You don't...you don't remember, do you, good-for-nothing? You've forgotten...?"

USOTSUKI scoffs loudly at this, crossing her arms over he chest. "Impossible! Our good-for-nothing has never forgotten a single thing in her life! What do you think of her, some mortal susceptible to brain problems?!" She taps the temple of her porcelain skull with a finger. "You may be the leader we agreed upon, Ibari, but have a care when addressing our peerless, infallible good-for-nothing! Our perfect, our infinitely-talented, our always-sober good-for-nothing--"

"Alright, alright, we get it, Uso. You don't need to belabor the point." REIKATSU points out, shaking her head before looking up at you. "So you actually have forgotten, then. That's...disappointing."

Isn't it? You can't help but snarl here, and the dolls give another collective flinch. If they're disappointed, then they should fucking get used to it. Besides, if you actually did remember anything important, you wouldn't be asking now, WOULD YOU?

There's a sniffling sound here, before the sound of someone crying breaks the cold, uneasy silence. You blink here, and turn towards the source of the crying - it's one of the dolls, one smaller and more awkward-looking than the others, wearing a poofy-shouldered dress with an equally poofy-shouldered skirt. A woolen cap with a bauble on top concealing her hair and most of her face. Reminding you of another girl in another costume with similar poofy parts to it.

You actually did it. You made one of the little fuckers cry. That's--

"Uncalled for, good-for-nothing." Ibari shakes her head in dismay, while the rest of the dolls look at you with their piercing, shining azure eyes. "Manuke may be slow, dim-witted and keeps talking nonsense to everyone, but that's no reason to make her cry." She looks up at you, shaking her head once more. "Where is this anger coming from, good-for-nothing? Aren't you happy to finally be reunited with us?"

At your silence, her eyes grow wide. "...Not even a little bit? Do...do you hate us that much?"

Here in MGNQ, we have traditions for everything. How to chucklefuck, how to waifupost. How to bully. How to organize image folders. For instance, we always keep at least 2 GB of lewd. This shows our constant devotion to Decu. You may ask, how did this tradition get started. I'll tell you....I don't know. You look at the dolls surrounding you once more, the only other sound in the Silent Room the muffled crying of the one they called Manuke. ...Alright, maybe you were a bit too harsh there. They haven't really done anything - yet - and despite their grating habit of calling you something of no worth to absolutely everyone, the repeated insult smacks of something like a title or a salutation. An official nickname of sorts, used with respect and reverence.

Or maybe you're just overthinking things with that last bit. Regardless, you could probably stand to be a bit more civil. No need to drive away company, since you'll probably have enough time to be alone soon enough.

So it's here that you grudgingly apologize, letting out a sigh as you do so. Telling them quietly - forcing the growl out of your voice - that it's been a rough couple of lifetimes. You didn't mean to snap like that.

"It's..." IBARI's eyes widen once more, her jaw falling slack, seemingly stunned. The rest of the Dolls mimic this facial reaction of hers, in perfect machinelike synchronicity. A moment later, and the first doll t to recover, managing to force a smile. "...That's...that's the first time you have ever apologized to us, good-for-nothing. For...for anything, really! It's lamentable that it has to be about this kind of thing, and considering your state but we're not going to look a gift horse in the mouth."

Huh. You blink at this. Really? The first time? Since ever?

"Since ever." Another of the dolls speak up here, this one with dark brown hair and an outfit resembling that of a tuxedo with coat tails. Its name, WARUKICHI, clicks in your mind. "Begging your pardon, good-for-nothing, but you weren't really big on apologies then. Especially when you just got rid of anyone who you'd have to apologize to with a snap of your fingers. This is a welcome change of pace."

IBARI nods. "We're not sure what's changed right now, good-for-nothing, but we certainly don't mind that you're not immediately forcing us to moonlight as animatronics for some broken-down pizza place at the moment. I--" the leader of the dolls gets cut off once more as something runs towards you, its small wooden feet clapping hard against the metal cell. "...Manuke? Manuke, stop! Let the good-for-nothing gather her thoughts in peace, don't bother her right now--"

Too late. With a sensation not unlike how Misaka usually buries her face into your stomach, to cry about a failed invention or something else entirely - you blink as the woolen cap-wearing doll does just that, her arms around your waist as she cries into your dress. Forcing you to no other recourse than to pat her head while you wait for all of this to calm down.

Again, the entire horde of dolls - except for the one using your new dress as a crying pillow, of course - look on in stunned silence, one that you finally break by clearing your throat. This was getting too fuckin' weird, especially when you consider that you're effectively patting a doll on her head. Her porcelain skull palpable even through her hair and cap.

Anyway, about your questions...? What are they here for, and what they want from you? You'd like answers to those first, at least.

The dolls glance at each other for a few moments before seemingly agreeing with a decision. It's IBARI who speaks in the end. "W-well, like we've said, good-for-nothing, we are here as your mourners and servants. We have been looking all over for you to reunite ourselves with our good-for-nothing, and serve her dutifully until the time comes when we have to watch your execution and march for your funeral procession. From there, we will cry for your soul until this last timeline, along with your undying corpse, is finally laid to rest."

From there, we will cry for your soul until this last timeline, along with your undying corpse, is finally laid to rest."

You force a smile here, just as you continue trying to calm MANUKE down by patting her back. That didn't sound foreboding at all, did it?

"It is why we're here, good-for-nothing. It's why we're here. As for what we want from you..." The doll blinks again. "...Guidance, perhaps? Commands? Something we can kill? We have been idle for too long, good-for-nothing. And honestly? Some of us are starting to get a little weird about it."

She gestures towards the far corner of the room, where a rather fluffy-haired doll - its name flashing past your eyes, spelling out OKUBYOU - seems to be knitting some sort of full-body costume for herself. Something with brown fur, a beaver's tail and webbed feet.

Yeah. That's...you can get that.

"So, if you'll be so kind, good-for-nothing." She clicks her heels together twice, in sharp succession - and all fourteen dolls, including Manuke who steps away from you briefly - curtsey once more. "We are your mourners. We are your humble servants. Give us a command, and we will stop at nothing to see it done."

"Nothing."

I feel like there's even odds that this will shatter any goodwill we may have garnered with the dolls, since the Golden Weapons are Pinky's thing and I don't imagine they're on good terms with her, but the chair and recreational materials will likely not go well for our goal of being cleared to leave the Silent Room, I don't trust the dolls with Midori, and Kharn's wedding is just...wut.

Thanks for the thread, Decu. I have a few questions:
1-In thread 89, who is the neighbour from the apartment 666? I have been wondering about it
2-Will we ever know who is the mysterious person who damaged our shield and cut Chiaki from the time-reversal cycle making TTO unable to control her?
3-Considering her Callidus training in infiltration, Midori should know a few different languages. How many?

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 03/15/15(Sun)10:09:31 No.38720194 Archived

"Find me intelligence on the rest of the Golden Weapons."

You take a deep breath here before continuing, staring at each doll in turn. Feeling suddenly like a teacher trying to get her lecture across to a class of temporarily-pacified but eternally-hyperactive children. Or maybe a preacher, trying to sermon to a temporarily-sedated bunch of death row inmates and serial killers.

...Doesn't seem to be a difference there, but you forge on ahead anyway, directly addressing your captive audience.

"I want this to be clear: just gather intelligence about them. Don't try to steal them, don't kill or torture anyone for them - don't touch them, period. Just try and find out as much as you can about them - where they are, who has them in their possession, and if their owners are sane enough to be talked into handing them over."

You're not too sure about the last one yourself - every other Golden Weapon owner you've come across, other than Kharn, had proven much too attached to their new toy to let go of it voluntarily and without violence. ...Granted, you've only encountered three of them, but with the Golden Weapons' effect on their users, it's a reasonable enough assumption to make based on that small sample size.

"...You, ah, wish for us to try and find the myriad fragments of the Blessed Lady's soul, good-for-nothing?" MIE, one of the more fashionable-looking dolls, with a black poncho over a prim white dress a black pencil skirt, asks after a rather long moment of silence. "This is what your dark, corrupted heart truly wishes for? This is the core of your sadistic, twisted and perverted desires rooted in heresy?"

What...? You blink down at the doll, frowning. That's...what?

"Mie is asking if you're sure, good-for-nothing," IBARI speaks up, seemingly taking it upon herself to be your interpreter between normal talk and crazy fucking insane doll talk. "Because, well, the fragments of the Blessed Lady's soul are--"

"They are anathema to our very existence!" MIE chirped, smiling disturbingly wide.

"...Yes, that." IBARI finished, nodding. "We don't really deal well with them, good-for-nothing. Anything else, we can easily shrug off or regenerate from, but for anything made of the purest soul imaginable..." She shakes her head, a resigned smile on her porcelain face. "Well, let's just say you will have to deal with us being more of an incomplete set than we already are, good-for-nothing." A moment passes, and IBARI quickly looks up, suddenly worried. "...Er. Not that anything's wrong with that, of course. We are your loyal servants, after all. We live to serve your uselessness, good-for-nothing, and do so at your own pleasure."

It seems that the dolls are asking you if you're sure of your decision, seeing as you may be sending them on a very dangerous mission.

How do you respond?

[]I'm sure. You'll only be gathering intelligence on them, anyway. If they find you out, withdraw immediately and report back to me. That goes for all of you.
[]...Maybe not. Let me think about it a bit more.
[]Ask a bit more about how vulnerable they actually are to the Golden Weapons first before making your decision.

Realistically, there's no way to tell.

Getting hung up on whether this is the right plane of the right reality is a rabbit hole that's not worth worrying about, much, given that our memories basically started with us being the wrong person in the wrong reality.

But, there's good odds that, when we leave the silent room, that if we can ping Midori, we're in the one we started in.

Your eyes narrow behind your glasses at this. So they don't deal well with Golden Weapons, is that what they're telling you? Just how vulnerable are they to the fucking things, anyway? Do they burst into treats when they look at one directly, or something?

There's a moment of hesitation as your Dolls glance at each other, before IBARI speaks up. "Well, I suppose that's not that far off from the truth, good-for-nothing. ...Not the bursting into treats part, but the part where even just the proximity of them affects us in such a way that makes us helpless and vulnerable." Another shake of her head, tousling her disturbingly-realistic hair.

"Like...like with vampires. Vampires, yes? They're known for recoiling from religious paraphernalia and iconography? Crosses and rosaries, that kind of thing? That's how it is with us."

You nod. ...Yeah, you get it now. And if just being in the presence of a Golden Weapon can affect them like that, how bad would it be if they got hit with them...?

"We die," REIKETSU looks up from something that vaguely resembles a clamshell gaming device, its screen glow lighting up her features, turning her features even more surreal than they already were. Her voice a stark monotone, in contrast to IBARI's almost human speaking voice and MIE's lilting one. "And we don't come back. Simple as that."

"We believe it is the hatred towards you, good-for-nothing, that exists within the half of the soul that they were made from. That hatred makes them extremely effective in killing us." IBARI explains. "But I suppose if it's only information you wish, good-for-nothing, then we'll probably be okay. Worst comes to worst, you lose a few of us, but that hardly matters in the long run for you, I think."

Hnh. So they're pretty much fucked if they get hit, but they seem confident that they'll be alright. ...Or, if you're honest, it's more that they're resigned to that kind of inevitability if it does happen.

How do you react?

this also poses an interesting problem we might not be able to follow our plan to collect and use the Golden Weapons and use the Dolls efficiently

It looks like the situation changed enough to require us to gather more information to make our next move and the one that is closest and seems to have the most info is QB so we should ask the dolls to spy on him instead

You decide to change your mind about the command, and tell them so. You'll think up of something better for them to do later. Right now, having them try and find the Golden Weapons sounds way too dangerous for your freaky doll collection.

Seriously? You've only spent a few minutes talking to them and already you're forming an attachment to these things? For fuck's sake, did you not get dolls to play with when you were younger or something? Or did you suddenly forget that they were in that dream of yours, with one of them tearing Midori apart just for kicks?

...Anyway. You tell the dolls about your decision, and even with their porcelain faces, you could tell that they're...relieved, somehow. A collective unclenching rippling through them, as if they'd been bracing for bad news that you decided not to give.

"W-well, if you're sure, good-for-nothing!" OBARI smiles. "If you ever change your mind or think of a command to give us, please don't hesitate to summon us to your side, we will always be on your beck and call until then! We--"

The doll suddenly falls silent, her words dying in her lips as she turns towards the Silent Room's doors - the doors sealing you and them inside. You blink at this, and make to ask her what she's looking at - but you also find yourself stopping as you realize that your entire collection is looking the same way.

...Fucking Christ, some of them are doing that thing in that scary Western movie about a girl getting possessed by Satan! Their fucking heads turning a complete 180 fucking degrees!

"...The Mutant Cat Bastard is here," OBARI turns to look at you, her voice tinged with an urgent horror. "He wants to have you executed for your crimes, good-for-nothing! He wants you to confess to them! Do not believe his lies and those of his kind! They breath treachery and secrets like air!"

You blink at this, your eyes widening. ...What? Kyuubey...what? Execution?! And he wants to make you confess, or something? What the FUCK?

As if on cue - as if to prove to you that your Dolls are beyond suspicion and reproach - Kyuubey's voice comes on the speakers inside the Silent Room. Proving that he is, indeed, just behind those doors, about to enter.

"Matsuda? I am here for your debriefing." His voice is level and emotionless as always - except for the slightest bit off coldness you couldn't miss.

"Give us the word, and we shall dine upon his immortal soul with graham crackers and hazelnut spread!"

"Remove Incubator!" The other dolls start to chant. "Remove incubator, REMOVE INCUBATOR!"

How do you react?

[]...Let him in. You want to hear what he has to say before doing anything rash, first.
[]Tell the dolls to put the boots to him, medium style. Rough him up without hurting him permanently.

Of course he does. With these wings, we are rather unmistakably the creature of their nightmares.

Even if we're not actively opposed to his current position, it seems unlikely that we're going to retain the position of Warmaster.

And of course, Kyubey can hardly be seen to be harboring The Shieldmaiden now, can he?

... Come to think of it, that's maybe what "The Death of Chiaki Matsuda" means.
>before this timeline: Akemi Homura >before short hair and going around everywhere with Kharn: Girl A >after Kharn took us up: Murderface >since the start of the quest AKA random morning somewhen: Chiaki Matsuda >since merging with The Transcendent One: The Angel Slayer Reborn, the Shieldmaiden of the Blessed Lady.
"The Death of Chiaki Matsuda" may mean the death of a character - the personality, the body, the soul. We don't exist as Chiaki Matsuda anymore, we exist as another incarnation of Akemi Homura with a different personality.

I'm not complaining about character development. I'm complaining about character development that includes outright pussification of the MC. She's turned to the worse, and not in the interesting way. While the traits she had before were fairly understandable and interesting (alcoholism, brutality, all that pain is pretty normal when you jump around trying to save one slut for a thousand years), the sudden jump to being a pussy that believes everyone's word and actually fucks some dumb slut she found one day is not as explainable, and in my opinion it's even worse for the story.

I don't think that's really a good thing. In the first place, Chiaki is a magical girl; born killing machines, less humanity would always do them better. Homuhom also lost her humanity because she was doing her best trying to (unintentionally) save all of humanity and Madoka from her fate. There's no reason why she would become more humane without actually saving Madoka.

Chiaki's humanity and regaining it is great but it seems to have come at the cost of our spine, because people mistake 'not being a murderhobo' with 'being a complete and utter indecisive pushover in 90% of situations'.

How a character devolves is usually even more interesting than how they evolve. A dynamic character is almost always a good thing in fiction - that dynamism doesn't necessarily need to be positive - or even negative. Some of the best works of fiction have characters that change over their course, but not in a way you could call an improvement or a deprecation - they simply emerge... different.

You shake your head, here. No, you want to hear what he has to say first. Kyuubey wouldn't suddenly decide on something like that without him having a handle of all the facts, and right now he doesn't it. He has to debrief you for that before anything else.

"You are far too naive and trusting, good-for-nothing," MIE replies mournfully, disappointment clear in her voice. "To put so much trust into this mutant cat bastard from outer space." It's here that she perks up, however, her eyes glittering like freshly-polished jewels. "But, I suppose we won't have to call you good-for-nothing if you were suddenly useful, yes?"

...It's not like you like being referred to as some deadbeat layabout, but sure. That works. Besides, Kyuubey has been nothing but civil to you the entire time you've known him, so you'd like to give him the same amount of treatment, too. Give him the benefit of the doubt, to explain his side of the story as well as you with yours.

"Regardless, we will stay here and ensure your safety, good-for-nothing." IBARI reaches over to pat your hand. "We know all the tricks a Mutant Cat Bastard may pull, and we will guard you from every single one of them! Including that one where he turns you into a platypus!"

At the far end of the room, still knitting her costume, the doll known as OKUBYOU frowns. "You had to tell her that, did you? You just couldn't leave it well alone?"

"It's a valid threat!" IBARI snaps at the sleepy-looking doll. "Our good-for-nothing is not some amphibious mammal with a beak!"

"I get that, but you're going to make my new costume weird!" OKUBYOU protests, before sulking off into a corner. Turning her back on the entire room to continue knitting in self-imposed solitude.

IBARI shakes her head at this, before turning back to you. "Sorry, good-for-nothing, you didn't need to see that. But yes, we'll protect you from the Mutant Cat Bastard as much as we can."

Well. You don't really think you need to be protected from Kyuubey, but if they're offering, sure. Why not? It'd be refreshing to actually be protected for once, rather than you doing the protecting.

...Wait, you say as something unpleasant comes to mind, something unpleasant enough that it makes you cringe. The dolls volunteering to protect you is all well and good, but if your Incubator sees them--

"Leave that to us, good-for-nothing." IBARI grins. "We're visible only to the people we wish to be visible to. We can still hurt them, but they won't see us unless we allow them to!"

Ah. Well. That's...good to know.

"Matsuda?" Kyuubey's voice comes on again from the speakers, now tinged with impatience. "May I come in? Again, this is for your debriefing. If you think that I should do this another time, feel free to say so, and I will return in twenty-four hours."

Your answer, of course, is to let him in. You say so out loud, and after a few moments, the doors unlock themselves in a series of metallic clicks - before grinding apart just enough to allow a single mutant cat bastard to slip through. Immediately closing behind him with the same amount of noise and preamble.

"Matsuda." Your Incubator and boss greets you as he steps forward. His voice slotting in smoothly in the small gaps of your mind.

"Kyuubey." You return with the same curt politeness, even as the ring of dolls around you bristle with clear, palpable tension at his approach. A ring of dolls that, it must be said, seems to have been missed by Kyuubey entirely - even if he had stopped only a few feet away from IBARI's scowling self.

...So they can't really be seen, then? You tuck that bit of information away for the future, in the off-chance that it'll be important soon enough.

"Right. Let's not waste each other's time." Kyuubey nodded, all business and no warmth. It's here, then, that the slightest hesitation in his eyes makes itself known - just a glimmer, nothing more, but it was there. "Like I said, I am here for your debriefing, Matsuda. I ask for your account of the entire operation involving the Prophet, from start to finish. Please be accurate, as the information you give will be immensely beneficial to the Officio."

A beat passes, before your Incubator seems to hesitate. "But before that, is there anything you'd like to say first?"

You stare back at Kyuubey. Of course, he didn't exactly say 'in your defense', but in the way he said the rest of his sentence, he might as well have roared it out loud. Casting bait in the most unsubtle way, which is strange even for an Incubator.

The thing about Kyuuby in MGNQ is that he actually feels emotion. By human standards he's a fucking robot, but by Incubator standards... well, it's almost unheard of. That gives him a wisdom and an empathy his compatriots just can't match, but at the same time makes him vulnerable to human failings - the greatest of which is the ability to make decisions influenced by fear, doubt and uncertainty - but to rationalize it with logical-sounding excuses. Men are pretty good at this, because men don't consider emotional reasons to be valid ones - so imagine how good an Incubator is at it.

He knows more about the Ask- the Ashki- wookie world than we do, clearly - he may even have some knowledge into the cosmology of Magical Girl religions. Other incubators might write it off to one degree or another, but Kyuuby has enough empathy that he might draw connections between the grief-seed of Faust up on the Moon's dark side and what he sees going on here.

But most significantly of all - he contracted Sayaka, who was recognized flat-out as looking identical to their deity by magical girls from another officio. Koobs ain't stupid, man; I find it hard to imagine that he hasn't noticed the uncanny resemblance.

He knows something's up - he doesn't know nearly as much as we do, or even Chiaki, perhaps - but he knows enough to be scared shitless, as much as an Incubator can be.

I've already made the announcement to the writefags, but as of now, all writeups other than those by Wendy and Archivalfag will be considered non-canon in order to better manage what happens in the setting. Why only them? Because I've already involved their writeups in the main story.

What about the other writefag stuff that have been mentioned in the quest already? Those details still exist and are still canon to the story as they are mentioned, such as Barbara from the Iron Circle and Heather from the Sixth. Only that certain details about them are not yet declared canon. It's a bit complicated, so let's just say that everything is non-canon until they show up in the quest (and it's 90% likely that they will show up and become canon anyways)!

>>38724472

I'm really sorry! I'll try to make the next thread longer to compensate!

I IMMEDIATELY REGRET
THIS DECISION

I'm probably talking out of my butt here- but is it possible that this "reality" is entirely made up of Godoka's witch barrier? As in, like Homusatan and the False City? All the characters could have been dragged in from Meguca-Valhalla as Madoka began her witch-y transformation.

What would that mean for us, though?

In a sense, the entirety of the world is Madoka's barrier, but it doesn't make sense to talk about a "true" reality, as there is no reality other than the one over which Madoka presides. There is no "upper" level you can escape to, there is no bed you can wake up in, there is no higher turtle on the tower you can climb towards truth. This is it, you're at the top, and the top is all in Pinky's mind. And Pinky is in it, too.

There has be an ongoing discussion about this, almost every day for the last three weeks.

We almost thought we had it now, but yet again, the verdict changed recently, so I guess it will just be postponed for the next thread.

It's a drag because nobody really wants it even though it's necessary. It would behoove cooldown/archival/decu to at least say announcement is postponed until next time, I guess.

Hi, Decu. Thanks for the thread. These are my questions:
1 - Will we have the chance to enter Malal room in the officio? You know, to search for any bullsh- I mean information she has put in it
2 – Will we be able to discover who prepared the ambush to Murderface that nearly had Kharn killed with the black knives?
3 – In thread 1, in Mami´s apartment, there was that Witch that was apparently from the Tenth, who called us Homura. Is there anything more to discover about this incident?
4 – Who is the person who told us to wake up in Midori illusion, to not take the procedure in Siberia and also called us a fool? You know, the mysterious number on the mobile phone
5- The true identity of the red culexus will be revealed? There has been a lot of speculation, and many anons want to know this
6- In the Yuma flashback, what would have happened if we went to visit Kharn instead of Girl A?
7- Who is the Homu in the fourth mirror?
8- Why have you made so drastic changes in the canonicity of the writeups? Saga of the Sixteenth, Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam or the Iron Circle are now non canon? They seemed pretty canon for me. Sorry, I am a little surprised.
9- What would have happened if we didn´t gave our soul gem to Ahriman?
Sorry for the question spam

Green moeblob has literally no original character. You can get the same, if not better romance with the same template character in pretty much every school harem VN, anime, anything. At least Wendy is like a cultist and shit, while Midori is just Shion/Mion with a thousand times less interesting personality.

>8- Why have you made so drastic changes in the canonicity of the writeups? Saga of the Sixteenth, Magical Scribe Eleanor Slam or the Iron Circle are now non canon? They seemed pretty canon for me. Sorry, I am a little surprised.

Honestly the whole thing is a way to get around writefags having to line up at the gates of Temple Decu forever until they are allowed into the inner sanctum where a stubbled, sleep-deprived, overtaxed decu looks up from his last commission long enough to say "uh, shit, right," and hastily scratch out an "okay I guess I didn't have time to look at this oh god I want to sleep please god kill me" on a stone tablet that is then carried to the petitioner by a brace of singing angels.

tl;dr it was incredibly constraining and unrealistic to have everything "centrally planned" for all writers involved; not just Decu. The new arrangement is really simple - only MGNQ story posts, or Archival and Wendy posts (the two writefags who work very closely with Decu anyway) are considered canon; but everything else isn't NOT canon either - just not "confirmed" yet. That way if Decu is free to work off the ideas/characters/characterization established by the writeups, without having to worry about VIOLATING CANON or whatever. Meanwhile writefags can write without having to clear every little detail with The Temple, and they needn't fear writing Decu into a corner.

Any big fiction "universe" with multiple writers (Star Wars, et al) eventually runs into problems like these - even the goddamn professionals can't keep everything straight and internally consistent without some kind of practical principle like this one.

Further clarification: The new write-up system is that only Archival and Wendy's stuff actually gets posted directly in the thread. Otherwise it's put on the wiki/in a pastebin, and there's a pastebin posted with links to all the new write-ups after Chikuwa is posted. It's what was done last time, anyway. We're still trying to find a system that works.

Goddammit, why? I liked some of those newly non-canon write-ups. Iron Circle! TTC! Steph's writings (I don't remember the name I'm sorry)!

Why'd they have to get dragged down by crap like Malal's faux-2deep4u angsty bullshit? Why the fuck are we insulting good writeups by putting them in the same category as offensively bland self-insert fanfics like that?

Ah, whatever. You do what you gotta do, Decu. Thanks for the thread, and don't you worry too much about the early stop or anything.

I haven't complained about Mal before, actually. I figured it was just me but then I saw other people had a problem with him and got less shy about the whole thing.

I also didn't like that one Mami guy at the start, and I haven't had a chance to read the Eleanor Slam saga yet (nothing personal, Attarou, it's just super huge).

Look, it's been a hell of a day and this felt a bit like a last straw, is all. Still, it's Decu's playground and he knows best. If anything I'm surprised Malal didn't get Inner Sanctum clearance with his (her?) connections.

Why are you still bitching? You won. They're not canon unless explicitly referenced as being canon. If they're never referenced, they'll never be canon. Short of them being removed entirely, this is pretty much exactly what you want, isn't it? They'll never affect the story in any way unless Deculture says they explicitly affect the story.
Also,
